GERMAN WARSHIPS AT BREST HEAVILY ATTACKED

Other Heavy Blows Struck at German Forces in Luck Area, Gateway to Ukraine

RED AIR FORCE ACTIVE

Moscow, July 2 —(AP)— The Red army reported today it had wiped out Nazi advance tank forces in the Dvinsk and Minsk areas and stopped the fierce drives the Germans aimed at Moscow and Leningrad.

Farther south, a Soviet communique declared, other heavy blows were struck at strong German forces in the Luck area, gateway to the Ukraine.

Far to the north, above the Arctic Circle, a German offensive against the Sredni Peninsula, guarding the northern entrance to the ice-free port of Murmansk, was reported meeting "fierce resistance" by Soviet troops.

The communique credited the Red air fleet's bombers with contributing greatly to the blocking of the Nazi thrusts by strafing advance troops and pounding the bases from which the attacks were sprung.

Riga Reported Fallen in Nazi Drive on Leningrad by Nazis High Command

FIERCE FIGHTING

Berlin, July 2 (AP)—The German High Command, claiming swift progress into Soviet Russia, asserted today, 100,000 Red army soldiers have been captured and "a large part" of Russia's allegedly trapped armies destroyed in the Bialystok-Minsk area.

Two communiques "from the Fuehrer's headquarters" also claimed ponderous quantities of Russian tanks and field guns seized.

special war bulletin placed the claimed elimination of a huge Red army force "east of Bialystok." This is the area in which the Germans have reported two Russian armies pocketed in the tongue of Soviet-occupied territory between East Prussia and German-occupied Poland.

In this battle, it claimed, 400 captured armored cars and 300 cannon have been counted. Just to the south, the regular communique claimed 220 more Red army tanks were put out of action by capture or destruction in two other battles.

Claims Windau Occupied

Besides the old Latvian capital of Riga, which previously had been reported occupied, the Germans claimed Windau in Latvia also had been captured yesterday.

Still farther north on the German front pointed toward Leningrad, Russia's second largest city, the High Command said alleged German-Finnish forces had launch-

Ten of Bodies Now Recovered

Harpswell, Mr., July 2—(AP)—With the bodies of 10 of 37 victims sent the cabin cruiser 'Don' to the bottom of Casco Bay recovered, searchers sought others today as a dense fog lifted.

Among the missing is John J. Kersey, 44, native of Saint John., and his wife. Kersey ran a Rumford jewelry store.

The 44-foot boat was pictured by state fisheries warden John Stevens as a jinx ship that was "overcrowded' when it exploded.

Declaring the Don had "sunk three times in the past decade" only to be raised, Stevens told newspapermen the craft was "topheavy" and that it carried 150 gallons of gasoline, some in cans on deck, when it set out on its last voyage to Monhegan Island, 40 miles away.

He added that it was inadequately equipped with life preservers for the party of Rumford and Mexico, Me., residents

After viewing the charred bodies and debris from the Don, coast guard Lieutenant Thomas J. Sampson said there was "no question' but that the excursion craft was the victim of a "very powerful explosion."

PROCLAMATIONS WILL BE READ IN CITIES, TOWNS

Urge Men of Military Age to Enlist in Canada's Active Army

EVENT AT BELLEVILLE

Ottawa, July 2 —(CP)— Proclamations urging men of military age to enlist in the Canadian Active Army will be read from the steps of city and town halls across Canada Thursday and Friday, National Defence Headquarters announced today.

The proclamations will be delivered to civic officials throughout the Dominion "in an up-to-date adaptation of an old-time custom," the announcement from Defence Headquarters said.

Military dispatch riders mounted on motorcycles will deliver the proclamations to mayors and reeves of all cities, towns and villages in Canada.

"In Canada's early days when freedom was threatened the system of calling the citizenry to the defence of their homes was for a horseman to gallop to the outlying districts with an official proclamation that was to be read to the public from the town hall steps," the announcement said.

"Today, when Canada's freedom is again being threatened, the same system is being used, but with a modern twist."

Terming the proclamation a modern "call to arms," the announcement said great cities had replaced pioneer settlements and modern military vehicles had replaced horses, but the "need for men and urgency of the situation" remained.

"With that view in mind," it continued, "National Defence Headquarters has issued a modern proclamation calling Canadians to arms."

The proclamations will be written in Old English on parch-

MARION TALLEY WINS DIVORCE

Opera Singer Given Full Custody of Her Six-Year-Old Daughter

Los Angeles, July 2 (AP)— Marion Talley, the opera singer, won a divorce yesterday from her vocal teacher-husband, Adolph Eckstrom of New York, and full custody of their six-year-old daughter, Susan.

Judge Ingall W. Bull made the decision at conclusion of a seven weeks' trial, during which both parents sought full custody of the child, born only a few weeks after their marriage.

The judge criticized charges of improper conduct which Eckstrom made against Miss Talley in opposing her suit.

"I feel that the charges of immorality, impropriety and adulterous conduct made by the defendant are false and untrue," Judge Bull declared.

Eckstrom had charged that Miss Talley was guilty of improper conduct with eight men since their marriage in 1935.

Churchill Explains Why U.S. Tanker Allowed Passage to French N. Africa

London, July 2 (CP)— Prime Minister Churchill said today Britain had permitted passage of a United States tanker to Vichy-controlled French North Africa because it was to Britain's advantage for the United States to keep contact with Vichy territory.

Mr. Churchill stopped House of Commons discussion of whether oil from the tanker, the Scheherazade, might reach axis hands by declaring: "I am convinced that it is an advantage for the United States to have contacts which in our case no longer exist."

Members saw in the statement an indication that Britain hopes to keep the good will of Gen. Maxime Weygand, North African Commander.

"Any action of this kind that may be taken by the United States is conceived only in a sincere desire to aid the war effort of this country," Mr. Churchill said.

When asked if it were true that "goods we require in this country are being sent to what is, in effect, enemy territory," Mr. Churchill said:

"I think we must, in these important matters, be guided to a very large extent by the opinion of the great and friendly country whose assistance is indispenable to us in our war effort."

Prime Minister Refuses To Give Statement on Changes in Middle East

London, July 2 (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill declined to make a statement in the House of Commons today on the changes in the Middle East Command, involving the transfer of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell to India.

Replying to Leslie Hore-Belisha, Liberal National, Mr. Churchill said "I do not see any advantages in adding to the information already given at the present time."

The official announcement from 10 Downing Street said Gen. Wavell, Commander in Chief of the Middle East since early in the war, and Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, Commander in Chief for India, would exchange commands.

There was no explanation. Gen. Auchinleck is little known to the public. He was named to the Indian Command last Jan. 27 after distinguishing himself by directing Allied operations at Narvik, Norway, and organizing coastal defences in the British Isles.

From Australian sources in London today it was learned that the attitude of Prime Minister R. G. Menzies of Australia was an important contributory factor of Gen. Wavell's shift

Advises Against Action

Australian staff officers, these sources said, advised Gen. Wavell against his defensive dispositions after his army overran Cirenaica. Gen. Wavell was reported to have replied that 300 miles of desert between his army and axis troops in Tripoli would hold any enemy advance to small units.

The same sources said that as a result of holding this view the western defences of Cirenaica were reduced to send troops to Greece and that when the Germans hit the British screen and penetrated they swept the British forces out of positions and won territory the taking of which had "cost hundreds of Australian lives."

In the house Mr. Hore-Belisha also brought up the appointment of Oliver Lyttelton as member of the War Cabinet with headquarters in the Middle East. As Minister of State, Mr. Hore-Belisha said, Mr. Lyttleton is 'constitutionally responsible to parliament" and gave notice he would "ask some questions elucidating the meaning of these changes" at a future date.

Apparently the former War Secretary had in mind the likelihood the Minister would not be available to parliament if his duties require his presence in the Middle East for long periods.

Menzies Gives Statement

Canberra, July 2 (CP)— Prime Minister R. G. Menzies told the Australian House of Representatives today that the transfer of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell from the Middle East to India 'doesn't mean supersession of Gen. Wavell, who has done the noblest work."

"In all circumstances, it was felt the opportunity should be taken to place a fresh mind on the problems of the Middle East," Mr. Menzies said.

Asked if additional responsibility would be given Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, Deputy Commander in the Middle East, Mr. Menzies said "Gen. Blamey has the greatest knowledge of the Middle East....He will no doubt advise (Gen. Sir Claude) Auchinleck."

KING GEORGE PRESENTS COLORS ON DOMINION DAY

Two Canadian Regiments in England Are Honored—"Torch of Victory" Presented to British Prime Minister

MR. POWER IN ENGLAND

By LOUIS HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 2 (CP)—Canadians celebrated Dominion Day in Britain with two significant ceremonies — the presentation by the King of colors to two Canadian regiments and the acceptance by Prime Minister Churchill of the symbolic "Torch of Victory."

The King, in an historic ceremony, presented colors to a regiment from New Brunswick and one from Alberta, into which are incorporated seven battalions of the Canadian Expeditionary Force which,—in the King's expression—"went out to win immortal fame under the inspired leadership of Byng and Currie."

This ceremony took place on a parade ground "somewhere in England" and marked the first time the King has presented colors to a Canadian unit although the Queen has done so on a couple of occasions.

His Majesty lunched at 1st Division headquarters after the ceremony, during which he had told the troops:

His Majesty's Address

"Today is Dominion Day and I am very glad to be spending it among my Canadian troops. Many of you may never before have been out of Canada on your national day. You will all, I know, be thinking of those near and dear to you whom you have left at home. With all my heart I hope it may not be long before you are with them again.

"Meanwhile, remember that wherever you may be called on to meet and beat the enemy you will be defending your own homes as surely as if you were fighting on the very soil of New Brunswick or Alberta...."

Presentation of 'Torch' to Mr. Churchill

Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie, who accompanied Canada's torch across the Atlantic in a bomber last week, presented it to Mr. Churchill in the garden of No. 10 Downing Street as a symbol of Canada's "un-

THREE CANADIANS FLY BOMBERS TO ENGLAND

Pilots Posted at Central Flying School, Trenton, Before Receiving Orders

UNEVENTFUL TRIP

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 2 (CP)—Three Canadians share the distinction of being the first fliers "posted" to the Trans-Atlantic Ferry Service so they might get to England—in a hurry to complete their courses as night fighter pilots.

Squadron Leaders N. B. Peterson of Winnipeg and P. Y. Davoud of Kingston, Ont., and Flt.-Lt. M. Lipton of Halifax were at the Central Flying School at Trenton, Ont., when orders came for them to proceed to England. The orders added that each would fly a bomber across the Atlantic.

Royal Canadian Air Force officers have been loaned to the Ministry of Aircraft Production for the purpose of ferrying aircraft but this was the first time any members of the R.C.A.F. not in the Ferry Service had been given the job of flying planes across the ocean with the object of serving overseas.

U.S.-Built Hudsons

The bombers were United States-built Hudsons for the coastal command and after 10 days "embarkation" leave, the three pilots reported to Montreal from where, after a few days training to become accustomed to the planes, they took off for the base from which the crossing was made.

The 2,000-mile flight was the longest non-stop Peterson has made, but he described it as a "routine job." At the take-off base, where they made a pause until winds were favorable, they spent half-a-day with a meteorological expert, "a real whiz whose accurate calculations took all the element of excitement out of the crossing."

Had Perfect Weather

Peterson and Davoud left together, each with a navigator and wireless operator, Canadian graduates of the Commonwealth Air Training plan. Lipton followed a week later.

The Winnipeg and Kingston pilots had perfect weather until within 200 miles of their landfall where they ran into squalls. These took them a bit off their course but they arrived at their base about 13

JAPANESE DEVISE FORMULA TO MEET NEW SITUATION

Foreign Minister Tells Nation "Super-Emergency of Grave Nature Developing in East Asia"

CONFERENCE HELD

Tokyo, July 2 (AP)—The Japanese Government announced today it had chosen a policy for coping with the situation arising from the Russian-German war and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka told the nation that "a super-emergency of a very grave nature is developing before our eyes in East Asia."

The nature of the government's decision, even its general trend, remained undisclosed despite statements issued by the Cabinet and Matsuoka after a morning conference at the Imperial Palace in which generals and admirals of the High Command met with key members of the Cabinet in the presence of Emperor Hirohito.

Domei, Japanese News Agency, declared that "quarters close to the government" indicated the empire's course would be disclosed by action rather than words.

"While maintaining secrecy externally, the government intends to pursue its policy internally to translate into action whatever decisions were taken at an Imperial conference," Domei said.

The Cabinet statement said merely that "a decision was taken at an Imperial Conference held this morning on important national policies to meet the current, international situation."

Amplifies Statement

Matsuoka offered this amplification:

"It goes without saying that the situation arising from the German-Soviet war can not be met with such a simple idea as to think of it merely as the outbreak of war between Germany and the Soviet.

"We therefore intend to watch the development of the situation with the greatest care and preparations in which we can place our confidencen as well as with firm determination. We must at the same time pay constant attention not only to developments surrounding the war but to the situation over the world as well as the trend of individual

Twenty-Nine Officers Take Liaison Course

By Ross Munro
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, July 2 —(CP)—Twenty-nine young officers of the 2nd Canadian division have taken the first Canadian liaison officers' course, brushing up on organizations details of different army formations and learning to be first rate "personal contact men" between the units in the fiels.

In battle the liaison officers will help keep information and intelligence flowing through the chain of commandds from Canadian corps headquarters right down to the battalions. Much of this work will be done by personal trips through the fighting zones on motor-cycles, a hazardous task.

The officers were selected from infantry, artillery, machine guns, reconnaissance and engineer units for the two-week course, and new liaison appointments will be made from the best of the students.

Waves of Planes Sent in Daylight To Bomb N. France

Nazi Bases at Brest And Cherbourg Bear Brunt of Heavy Offensive

WARSHIPS STRADDLED

London, July 2—(CP)—Seventeen German planes were destroyed by the Royal Air Force today in a series of daylight raids on northern France. Three of the enemy craft were bagged by the American Eagle squadron.

Strong forces smashed across the channel late this morning and squadrons of fighters and bombers still were streaking over northern France during the afternoon, following up a night attack in which British bombs straddled the dock of a German battleship at Brest.

The R.A.F. acknowledged that two bombers and seven fighters were lost in the daylight sweeps, the first large scale offensive against occupied France in which the American Eagle Squadron had taken part.

Airdrome Bombed

The announcement said an airdrome at Merville, near Lille, and a railway junction southeast of Lille were bombed by Blenheims guarded by a strong fighter escort. Bombs burst on runways and buildings and among dispersed aircraft.

"The attacks were pressed home in the face of heavy opposition from ground defences and a large number of enemy fighters were beaten off with heavy losses," it continued.

"Reports so far received show that 17 enemy aircraft were destroyed, of which two were shot down by our bombers. Three of the enemy fighters destroyed were shot down by the Eagle Squadron."

Waves of planes, often so high they could only be heard, swept in and out over the coast and the distant rumble of explosions indicated that targets were well inland.

The opposite shore could not be seen, however, because of a heat haze which limited visibility to about five miles.

As the flights continued into the afternoon without let-up, observers said the R.A.F. apparently was sending increasingly large numbers of planes into the aerial offensive.

Besides Brest, the Air Ministry said docks at Cherbourg were bombed in the overnight raids in which two planes were lost. Aircraft of the Fighter Command also bombed Nazi airdromes in France without loss.

51 U.S. Marines Reach Britain

London, July 2—(CP)—Fifty-one American marines were reported authoritatively today to have reached Britain to take over guard duties at the United States embassy and an apartment building across the Square where attaches and observers have quarters. The embassy has been guarded by armed London police.

It was said that the contingent, led by two officers, did not include the marine survivors of the former Netherlands steamship Maarsden which was sunk while taking marines and American Red Cross nurses to Britain.

(At least one of the marines aboard the ship and some of the nurses were feared lost. The rescue of others was reported by the United States navy.)

Allied Troops Capture Soukhne, British Forces in Syria Reinforced

Cairo, July 2 (AP)—Allied forces asasiling Palmyra, site of an important Syrian air base, have recaptured a position menacing the desert town, Middle East general headquarters announced today.

Several Vichy tanks were destroyed and another captured undamaged, it said, in an unsuccessful Vichy effort to drive the Allies from Rebek, midway point in the push north from Damascus to Homs.

London, July 2 (CP)—Allied troops have captured Soukhne, 40 miles northeast of Palmyra, site of an important Syrian desert air base and have taken two positions on the road from captured Damascus to Beirut, it was reported authoritatively today.

These reports said British forces in Syria have been reinforced.

Britain's army in Ethiopia was reported to have captured 375 Italian troops, one general officer and six field guns in the Bareballa area.

LIVING BONUS TO BE PAID TO ALL RAILWAY WORKERS

Government Takes View Workers Should Receive $1.93 Per Week

NO DISTINCTION

Ottawa., July 2 —(CP)— The Dominion Government takes the view all railway workers in Canada should receive a cost of living bonus of $1.93 a week. Labor Minister McClarty announced at a press conference today.

The Minister expressed the hope that cost of living bonuses would be general and not only apply to the railway workers and those in war industry but to all the workers in Canada totalling some 3,000,000.

The Minister also announced the government has amended its cost of living bonus order in council (No. 7440) to make it certain that when a bonus is decided upon for the employees of a company or industry the bonus shall apply to all the employees concerned regardless of their wages or salaries.

The decision will cover all industries under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act including all those engaged in war production. The Minister expressed the hope that industries outside the Act would also institute cost of living bonuses so that the 3,000,000 wage earners of Canada would be affected.

Can Apply to Board

The changed order in council does not automatically bring the cost of living bonus to workers. They may ask their employers for a bonus and if it is refused, may apply for a board of conciliation. This board will be governed by the order in council and will be required, if it grants a bonus, to make it apply uniformally to all persons in the group that asked for the board.

The Minister anticipated there would be only "remote" cases where the employer would not co-operate in the bonus policy. Having laid down the basis the government expected general support. Already mining firms, the pulp and paper industry and many other concerns had made the bonus plan effective.

The bonus, effective when the Dominion Bureau of Statistics cost of living index shows a gain of five per cent, is based on the essential necessities of life. The index at present is up 7.7 per cent above the level of August, 1939 and on this basis the bonus payable is $1.93 a week to all workers.

Mr. McLarty said it was anticipated the provinces would cooperate in the policy and thus make the bonus payable in industries under their control.

Majority And Minority Reports

Two Boards of Conciliation which investigated the claims of 143,000 railway workers for a bonus submitted majority and minority reports released today. The majority reports recommended the bonus to all employees whose pay was $25 a week or less. The minority reports recommended that the bonus go to all the 143,000.

The Minister said the intention of the government in the original order in council had been that the bonus should be uniform among all workers concerned whereas the majority reports had taken the view that if workers wages were sufficient that their standard of living was not reduced by the increased cost of living then they should not get

New President Of Rotary Installed

With formal ceremonies conducted by Past District Governor J. Owen Herity, President William J. Morrison, newly-elected head of the Belleville Rotary Club, was installed in office at the weekly luncheon of the club held on Monday. President Morrison succeeds Past-President Percy McGuire. Past Governor Herity presented the retiring president with the badge of a past-president of Rotary.

In a brief address, Past President McGuire stated that he was proud to have been accorded the honor of acting as the club president for the past year. He had enjoyed the one hundred per cent co-operation of the entire club, he said, adding special tribute to past-president Howard Clarke, who had given him invaluable assistance during his tenure of office.

Past President McGuire also paid tribute to the Crippled Children's Committee under Chairman Charlie Symons; the Music Committee of Leo Riggs and "Sandy" Burrows, and latterly Phil. Huddleston who is pinch-hitting for Rotarian Riggs who is now visiting relatives in the U.S.A.

The club had only one major project during the past year, he said, and that was the "Happy Gang" concert. This had been an unqualified success due to the energy of the hard-working committee in charge. He closed with an appeal for the same fine co-operation for his successor as had been accorded him during the past year.

President Morrison told the clubmen that due to the fact that time was limited, and he did not wish to encroach upon the time of the guest speaker, Pastor Forsgren, he would reserve his presidential remarks until a later date.

Both officials received a fine ovation from their fellow Rotarians.

Fall Rye and Wheat Ready for Binder

The rumble of grain binders harvesting the first of the 1941 grain crop will be heard generally thru'out the district before the present week is out, according to farmers in the Bay of Quinte area who state that fall rye and fall wheat is about ready for the reaper. In several instances harvesting has already commenced, a field of rye having been noticed cut and stooked in Thurlow Township on the holiday.

The yield of this season's fall grain will not be as heavy as usual, it is stated by growers, as the long continued drought and hot sun during the time the grain was filling has resulted in very short heads and in some cases, the grain ripening before it was properly filled. The general consensus of opinion among agriculturists, however, is that fall grain will be superior to spring grain, many farmers claiming that their fall rye and wheat crops are the best they have.

Douglas Bone Wins Kinsmen Soap Box Derby and the Right To Compete at Akron in Aug.

Over 3,000 Watch Youthful Entrant Guide Machine to a Close Finish

DRIVES FINE RACE

Blonde-haired Douglas Bone of this city flashed over the finishing line of the sixth annual Kinsmen "Soap Box Derby" sponsored by the Ontario Intelligencer down Derby Hill in Belleville on Monday evening to realize the zenith of his youthful career, the winning of the All-Canadian Soap Box Derby and the right to represent Canada at the All-American Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio next month, where he will race against the cream of the world's best motorless "kid kars." Second to Bone was Jimmy Armstrong of Stirling and third, Allan Wright of Belleville. Douglas Bone, the 1941 champion, is the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bone, 221 Coleman St.

Handled Car Well

Young Bone handled his silver bullet car in veteran-like fashion as the final heat commanded the ingenuity of a veteran and skilfull driver to win. Bone had unsuccessfully contested the race in 1940 when Donald McGowan of Stirling was returned winner, but the newly-crowned champion of 1941 returned the title to Belleville in a splendidly-planned race. Bone won his heat, a quarter semi-final and the semi-final in clear-cut fashion, but it was in the finals he was called upon to steer his youthful four-wheeled creation with the utmost of dexterity. As the three finalists flashed across the finish line to decide the winner and champion, the judges could have placed a blanket over the three cars, so close was the finish, Bone being inches ahead of Armstrong, who in turn was a hairs-breadth out in front of Alan Wright in third place.

Trophy Presented

Bedlam broke loose as the new champion was crowned, the 3,000 odd patrons on Derby Hill swarming the judges' stand to acclaim the new All-Canadian Soap Box Derby champion. The M. E. Coyle Trophy, emblematic of the All-Canadian Soap Box Derby Championship was presented to the happy winner by Mr. James Lister of the Canadian branch of the General Motors. Other prizes and medals were given to Armstrong and Wright. The prize for the best designed brakes was awarded to Donald Rose, 106 Catherine St. and the prize for the best designed car was won by Bill Ashman of Lattimer St., Belleville.

Given Fine Ovation

Tumultuous applause and an ovation seldom afforded any winner in Belleville was given Douglas Bone, when he was presented to the crowd of patrons from the judges' stand by Master-of-ceremonies, Tommy Mason, who acted as commentator and kept the crowd informed as to the proceedings over the public address system as erected for the Kinsmen sponsors by Mr. Harold Davidson of this city. "It was great to win and I hope I can win in Akron and bring the All-American championship to Belleville," excitedly stated the new champion as he was introduced to the crowd and presented with the Coyle Trophy. A silver medal was given to Armstrong and a bronze medal to Wright. Entries from outside points included Corbyville, Stirling, Picton and Kingston, as 52 entries steered their cars down Derby Hill in the sixth annual Kinsmen Soap Box Derby sponsored by the Ontario Intelligencer.

Harold Bone, father of the 1941 champion, told the press he was glad Douglas won. "The boy put a lot of work on that car and had confidence in his ability to guide it," stated Mr. Bone, while Mrs. Bone intimated she was too excited and nervous to make a statement, but the smile of satisfaction upon the champion's mother's face was indication enough to tell of her proud feelings.

Final Heat Fastest

The fastest heat of the evening was the final that determined the race, Motorcycle Patrolmen Hatch and McKellar, who patrolled the course, announcing they had clocked the trio of cars rolling practically even at 32 miles per hour near the bottom of Derby Hill. It was after the car straightened out into the home stretch, that Bone gained his slight advantage and coasted in to victory. Prior to the race the contestants paraded down Derby Hill led by Jamie Clarke playing the bagpipes and headed by Donald McGowan, the 1940 winner of the Kinsmen Soap Box Derby.

Many Slight Collisions

There were more collisions and spills in the 1941 race than had been witnessed on Derby Hill in the past three years, several of the cars being damaged to such an extent that they were unable to continue in the race. Official Starter Cleo B. Colling declared "no go" in five of the initial thirteen heats. The race was delayed one hour owing to rain and wet pavements, but once under way, the program was speeded up and the final heat was completed just as the city street lights were lighted. As in former years the course was protected on both sides by lines of snow fencing.

"We wish to thank Chief Kidd, Chief Lynch, Inspector Gardner, the members of their departments, city employees, the young ladies of the V.A.D.C. and all those who made the sixth annual All-Canadian Soap Box Derby the success it enjoyed. To the public who have so splendidly supported this project every year, we also say 'Thank you.'" publicly stated President Gardiner Duff of the Belleville Kinsmen Club after the race, which was also the consensus of opinion of the club members present.

The officials of the race included E. R. Birchard, Claude Watt and James Lister of the General Motors, J. B. Boyce, local Chevrolet agent, Arthur L. Young of the Stewart-Warner Alemite, C. B. Colling, James Fraser, Orliff Lloyd, B. Loviss Mayor Thompson and other members of the Kinsmen Club.

The results of the heat eliminations, semi-finals and final race were:

Heat 1. Kenneth Stapley, 28 Johnson Street.
" 2. Bill Ashman, Lattimer Street.
" 3. Eugene Johnson, 9 Everett Street.
" 4. Herb Barragar, 60 Octavia Street.
" 5. Douglas Day, 94 Cedar Street.
" 6. Jimmy Armstrong, Stirling, Ont.
" 7. Donald Hogle, Picton, Ont.
" 8. George Reeves, Brock Street.
" 9. Douglas Bone, 221 Coleman Street.
" 10. Glenn Young, 50 Ridley Street.
" 11. Ray Bush, Sidney St.
" 12. Billy Sharpe, Corbyville.
" 13. Alan Wright, 34 Hillside Street.

Re-runs—Bertram Stapley, 28 Johnson Street; Jim Bassingwaithe, 153 George Street.

Quarter Semi-finals—1. Kenneth Stapley; 2. Jimmy Armstrong; 3. Alan Wright; 4. Douglas Bone.

Derby Hill Highlights

General Motors officials assisting the Derby on the Judges' stand included E. R. Birchard, Claude B Watt and Jim Lister. Bert Boyce the local Chevrolet dealer, Art Young, General Manager of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite and President Gardiner-Duff were other officials.

Thanks are extended to Dave Davidson for the fine work in setting up the Public Address system which gave Master-of-Ceremonies Tommy Mason plenty of scope in which to keep the 3,000 odd spectators acquainted with the proceedings.

To the City and Provincial Police, the Firemen and the Motorcycle Patrol, all of whom did a swelegant job, the Kinsmen say "Thanks fellows." While Martin's ambulance was ready in case of emergency.

Prior to the race the Kinsmen played hosts to the young ladies of the V.A.D.C. who so capably assisted in the selling of tickets.

Although rain held up the starting of the race for one full hour, the final heat was the closest in the history of the Kinsmen "Soap Box Derby" in Belleville and what a crowd of youthful energy crowded the judges' stand to acclaim the new champ—Douglas Bone, who is a nephew of Douglas "Daw" Whalen, well-known hockey player in Belleville two decades ago.

Strangely enough there were more spills coming off the ramp in the 1941 Derby than was usual, doubtless caused by over-anxiousness on the part of the drivers.

Ice cream and refreshments were provided the drivers of the race at King George School prior to the big event.

The professional type all-steel crash helmets and jerseys worn by the youthful drivers were provided by the Chevrolet Division of the General Motors and became the permanent possession of each boy entered in the race.

The fastest time made in any heat was in the finals when Motorcycle Patrolmen on the course clocked the cars at 32 miles per hour maximum speed.

The draws for the $50.00 Victory Loan Bond, a ton of coal donated by W. N. Belair and a hundred pounds of sugar donated by the National Grocers, will be made at the postponed Kinsmen Club street carnival on Wednesday night.

Inclement weather mitigated the Kinsmen Street Carnival, Chairman F. C. Miller stating the fun and frivolity of the carnival would be continued Wednesday night.

The prize for the best designed car went to Billie Ashman of Lattimer Street, while the prize for the best designed brakes was awarded to Donald Rose, 106 Catharine St.

The work of the police and firemen in maintaining order and keeping the course clear was noteworthy and deserves a word of praise. Also the Kinsmen had every driver insured against injury in the event of accident.

Over two miles of snow fencing lined the course.

English Hospital With Free French

Ottawa (CP)—Provided by English and United States women, a 100-bed mobile hospital is accompanying the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as they march side by side with British troops in the Near East.

Mrs. William Van Tets, wife of the Netherlands official who arrived here recently to be secretary to Princess Juliana, told The Canadian Press of the hospital and how it came into being.

The hospital's five 20-bed wards were staffed by English nurses, its ambulance driven by English women transport drivers. Orderlies, doctors and technical personnel are French and the heavy lorries are driven by British and American volunteers.

"The unit is symbolic of the humanitarianism, idealism and civilization for which Britain is fighting," said Mrs. Van Tets. "It seems to me to be a tribute to Britain that in spite of her own dire necessity, thousands of dollars have been given freely to aid in this way. And it's a fine example of the inter-aid among allied groups in Britain."

RIVERSIDE DRIVE PROJECT

Recently the Ontario Intelligencer referred to the Riverside Drive Project and pointed out that the time did not seem opportune for this undertaking for several reasons. This is a time of war and only necessary construction work should be done. Such a program would probably meet with the experience usual in such work that the final cost would be much higher than expected for where undertakings are begun with an effort to limit expenditure to the utmost it is invariably found that new unexpected expenditures enter into the picture.

After the war if the citizens feel the necessity of this project, it could be of real importance in providing employment.

Until that time the parking spaces on the east bank of the river Moira which are now serving a very useful purpose can continue to do so—without the need of purchasing properties which would be necessary when the time comes for the completion of the project.

When the time arrives for such a program the entire cost of the projected work in all its details should be definitely known to the people before anything is undertaken.

When the time comes to complete the project if it is still favored, no options should be exercised for the purchase of any property which would be required for the right of way unless options have been secured on all the properties required for the purpose. The reason for this is quite obvious.

All in all the time does not seem one for carrying out the project.

URGENCY THE WATCHWORD

"Urgency in everything is our present watchword," says Lord Beaverbrook, who this week became the Minister of Supply. "Speed in production is the supreme war necessity." He gave the encouraging word, "There is no need for panic or any misgiving about the result provided we all put forth the maximum effort unceasingly."

"Speed" and "maximum effort unceasingly" are the notes the minister struck. Speed will come of maximum effort and maximum effort is something which it not only for those in authority but for every citizen.

That is the keynote of a master mind who is a genius for getting work done. Increase in production of warplanes has been marked during his office in charge of production.

In clear words he has sounded the clarion call of duty in the ear of every citizen.

PADEREWSKI

Jan Paderewski is dead, the master of pianoforte and one of the great composers of history. Paderewski belonged to that race which Hitler has so criminally attacked and which the Gestapo and every other agency of Hun malevolence have tried to eradicate from the earth. Paderewski was true Pole and true citizen of the world.

Poland has produced great men. There was the great musician, Chopin, there are military leaders whose names live in history. Until Sunday there was that great combination of the arts of music and the art of living, the musician and the statesman, Paderewski. Everyone recalls the aged statesman taking the reins of office and guiding his nation to a new era of progress after the first world war.

Poland has suffered and has had to struggle through history. Paderewski is in that respect a symbol of his country.

No man might more justly have been proud than this modest figure, who rose to the twin peaks of the art of music composition and interpretive skill, and yet was able as a statesman to serve the land he loved. This heritage which he bequeathes to his race and to mankind which loves beauty of character and beauty of art and noble patriotism will be a blessing for his race. He is a herald of the dawn of recovered freedom when no more the Hun dare tyrannize and ravage because he is crushed. No Hun can quench such beauty of art, such beauty of noble service of country which Paderewski exemplified. A noble man is gone, but the world that knew him cannot think him dead.

Preserve me from all diners who Arrive before I'm able to;
Who, occupying every chair,
Sit and smoke and lord it there,
And, chewing nothing but the fat,
Wonder what I'm swearing at.

Preserve me, as I sit and smoke,
From all these earnest, hungry folk
Who stand about. How tiresome they
Who spoil my lunching time of day
By having nothing else to do
Than stand before me in a queue.

If first-of-the-season activities are a criterion, then the laddies of the hook and line are due for an enjoyable season. For over-the-holiday reports emanating from the far-flung sections of the district where the lads plied their lines, bring stories of some fine hauls.

Ken Sharpe, of course, headlines the stories with his capture of a thirty-five pound musky near the Corbyville dam, which was foolish enough to select a humble worm for its noonday snack. At that the big fella nearly got away for he snapped the line but failed to submerge in time. Sharpe leaped into the water and "gilled" his catch, heaving it high and dry on the bank.

Down around Point Traverse and Black Creek way, where the cool clear green water of Lake Ontario harbors schools of the fighting bass, the boys had a real fishing holiday. So clear, as one of the lads tells us, the water was a holiday ground for the bass. As many as fifteen and twenty comprised a school, and could be seen plainly in the water.

But they are fussy cusses, especially during the morning. The two-to-four pounders sniffed curiously at the minnows sent down to entice them, but disdained to sample the fare. Finally a half-dozen got too curious and celebrated the event by sizzling in a frying pan.

One story is to the effect that a big five-pounder, who, tiring of sniffing at the diminutive bait, came to the surface and asked that something "our own size" be sent down.

The brook trout nibbled well in creeks and lakes in the northern section of the county. One party brought out seventeen eleven-inchers. But the grey trout are still holding out for shorter hours and more bait.

These beauties., the' submarines' of the fish family, have gone south for the summer and are staying there. Only an occasional grey was hooked over the holiday and these were nothing to be photographed with.

Over Wellington way, the visiting firemmen took plenty of fish home with them. Pickerel averaging from five to six pounds featured the weekend hauls, while the bass in the lee of MacDonald's Island relinquished their hunger strike and went after everything frfom a sardine tin to a pussy-willow.

One four-pounder, who had been out all night apparently and hadn't eaten for a week, got so hungry he struck at a small rock fish which had gobbled the worm on the hook of Sam Johnson, Oshawa. Sam hauled in the ill-mated pair.

Bill Holmes, St. Catharines, hauled in the only feathered fish of the holiday. A gull swooped down at his plug as it floated on the water in the lake, and took off in a sudden zoom. Bill's reel ripped out in a whirring symphony, but he recovered from the element of surprise in time to bring down the grey bomber. The bird fought desperately for its freedom and Bill had a busy few minutes before he could free the gull.

Muscote Bay has started to protect its reputation as one of the best musky grounds in the district. Two gentlemen from Philadelphia took two nine-pounders to the City of Brotherly Love, and that is not the "Philadelphia Story." Last year some huge muskies were hauled from this fishing ground and it looks as if that season is going to repeat itself.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 2nd, 1921.

The bay bridge was formally declared free on the morning of July 1st. A large crowd was present and it was a great day for the people of Belleville and Prince Edward County. The speakers were Mayor Charles Hanna, Hon. Nelson Parlaiment, Mr. George Hogarth, Provincial Engineer. At the close of the speeches, the toll board was removed by Mayor Hanna and the Hon. Nelson Parliament. Owing to a misunderstanding some of the Aldermen and the President and Secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce were held up with their cars at the city end of the bridge and did not reach the toll house in time for the speeches. The first car to drive over the bridge after it was declared free was occupied by Col. Wilson, Major R. D. Ponton, Mr. F. R. Wotten and Mr. C. Skinner. The last motor vehicle upon which toll was paid was driven by Mr. T. G. Thompson, baker, of Rossmore. The last nickel paid by a person walking was paid by Mr. A. E. Phillips of Ameliasburg Township. It is understood that Dr. Fox of Ameliasburg will be the superintendent of the free bridge. The erection of the superstructure of the bridge was commenced on Nov. 10th, 1890 and was completed on April 15th, 1891. From that time until yesterday morning toll was paid by all who passed over the bridge.

No Crusade

New York, July 2 — Unlike the American First Committee, the Pope, who is wiser, refuses to see in the Nazi battle against Russia even the inkling of a crusade against the heretic and for civilization.

The Pope's address on Divine Providence is as important politically as was Winston Churchill's speech uttered immediately upon the Nazi declaration against Russia, and the reaction in Washington. If the Nazis hoped that by attacking the Soviet Union they would put themselves in the role of St. George defending the maiden against the dragon, they are disappointed on all counts. The Vatican is not likely to overlook the continuing martyrdom of Poland; the brutal and blasphemous persecution of the church in that most deeply religious of all countries.

The Vatican itself published the most damning document on the German occupation of Poland that has yet seen the light—an account of criminal atrocities. The Nazi war against Russia reveals itself to the Vatican for exactly what it is: Another in a series of wanton aggressions that have nothing to do with ideology, that are justified solely by the Nazi will to power.

Nevertheless, the war has ideological consequences, the first being that the Red Army chooses to rally the people around the battle cry of homeland and Russian soil, rather than world Communism, and immediately wins odd allies—the exiled White Russians of Harbin, for instance and the Metropolitan of the Orthodox Church.

The Nazis have been keeping on ice the old Hetman of the Ukraine, Skoropadsky, no doubt with a view to installing him as the Quisling of a "liberated" Ukraine, should they succeed in occupying that great granary. But Skoropadsky was their Quisling in the last war; he was driven out by another Ukrainian nationalist, Petlura and Petlura in turn fell before the Red Army. Now, by one of those historic ironies, the commander-in-chief of all the Russian forces is a Ukrainian, Timoschenko.

What the "ideology" of the Red Army may be, time will tell. We suspect that it is nationalist and Russian and that its power will increase above that of the party. In fact, we suspect that three "ideologies" will be liquidated by this war—Communism, Nazism and Toryism.

American policy toward the Soviet Union will obviously be determined by self-interest. We desire to see the Nazi plan for world domination smashed; we desire to see the future peace order in the hands of those people who still have civilized institutions intact and who alone are capable of bringing some order out of chaos—namely ourselves and the British; we have serious interests in the northern Pacific. We know fully the importance of Alaska, which the late General William Mitchell called "the key point to the whole Pacific Ocean" and we do not wish to see the Axis in control of the Siberian maritime provinces.

We know, furthermore, that were Hitler in Moscow, and Suez, and in control of the European Continent, he would be master of Europe, Africa and Asia.

And the result of that is seen more clearly by Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia than by Mr. Hoover. That mouthpiece of the Duce says "a defeat of Russia would produce a definite defeat of the United States as well as Great Britain."

It would, indeed. And it is for that reason and not because of any new tenderness for Mr. Browder and Communism, that we do not wish to see Hitler in Moscow. That Hitler is trying to get there is a political defeat for Mr. Browder, the Comintern and Stalin, and a political justification of the view of Churchill and Roosevelt.

Whatever aid we give to the Soviet Union will be predicted on our own interests. But it is to be hoped that it will be accompanied by a vigorous diplomatic offensive. This country is still for the freedom and independence of Finland, Poland and the Baltic States. It will never, we trust, support gains won by Russia in cahoots with the Nazis.

Hitler has no business in Russia and Russia has no business beyond the bounds of her own territory.

Whatever comes out of this war, the nations of Europe must be free; the nations of Europe must, in some way, federate; and there must be some permanent settlement for peace and collaboration between Continental Europe, Russia, the British Commonwealth-Empire and the Americas.

Only this way can there be even ten years of peace, and the foundations laid for international prosperity.

Why the United States does not take an offensive in the realm of ideas is beyond me. The cost of one battleship would finance a gargantuan propaganda campaign for the conduct of which this country has more brains, prestige and facilities than any other. The German-Russian war has created a political vacuum into which the President of the United States should spring. Such a campaign should not be "ideological" — it should be addressed to the reason, realism, common sense and heart-broken yearnings of the peoples of the whole world. This country should undertake a peace offensive—not for a "negotiated" peace but for that ordering of affairs that alone can mean peace.

Ten million dollars to present the broad outlines of an American peace to the world—not by secret negotiations, but openly on the airwaves of the planet, in all languages and twenty-four hours a day—could be a more powerful weapon than planes and bombs, and positively should accompany our armament.

Precisely because the "ideologies" have all proven themselves to be unmitigated buncombe, the voice of reason — reason combined with power—has an audience.

If one considers the international political situation apart from the military, there is more reason for optimism today than there has been since the war began.

If we lose this war to chaos, or if it drags out for years, it will only be because of refusal to use the God-sent moments of history.

The revolution of the twentieth century will be the triumph of realism and civilization and only Britain and America can make it. We should set about the task immediately.

DON'T STAY DOWN

Down and such a simple blow!
"One and two," the fates are counting!
"Three and four," the seconds go.
Higher is the number mounting.
"Five and six, and seven and eight!"
Hurry boy, the end is nearing!
Up again before too late,
Fight and set the crowd to cheering!

Down! Oh, set the chin a bit!
Blows like that should not defeat you,
Up and make a fight of it!
Don't let lack of courage beat you!
Fate, the grim old referee,
Stands and counts the seconds flying;
Up and fight for victory,
Up again and keep on trying.

There's the bell! Another round!
Never let your faith be shaken.
Oft the better man is found
By the sum of blows he's taken.
Up and at him! Done with doubt,
Signs of weakness are appearing.
Up once more and fight it out,
You may set the crowds to cheering.

You'd Be Surprised!

PREACHER PRESIDENT

Sixty years ago today President James Abram Garfield was shot by a disappointed office-seeker named Charles Julius Guiteau.

The tragedy occurred on the morning of July 2, 1881, in a railway station in Washington as the President was leaving to attend commencement services at his alma mater, Williams College, in Massachusetts.

After being nursed in the White House for eleven weeks, President Garfield was taken September 6, 1881, to his summer residence at Elberon, New Jersey, where he died on the 19th, six months after his inauguration.

Garfield had been the only left-handed President of the United States.

In childhood he was naturally left-handed, but he trained himself to write with his right hand and in consequence became ambidextrous and used both hands with equal ease.

Once he demonstrated his ambidexterity by writing in Latin with one hand while he wrote in Greek with the other.

Garfield wore a larger hat than any other President—size 7 3-4.

He has been the only preacher President of the United States Although not an ordained minister of the gospel, he was a lay preacher in the denomination known as Campbellites or the Disciples of Christ.

For a period of four days he was a member of the U.S. House of Representatives, a U.S. Senator-elect and President-elect of the United States all at the same time.

Garfield is the only man who ever saw himself nominated for the presidency.

According to tradition, he once defined a university as "Mark Hopkins at one end of a log and a student at the other."

As a member of Congress he was in New York studying finance on April 15, 1865, when news of President Lincoln's assassination reached Wall Street. In a speech from the balcony of the New York Customs House he quieted an excited crowd with the memorable words:

"Fellow Citizens! God reigns and the government at Washington lives."

Fifteen years later he appointed the son of the assassinated President, Robert Lincoln, as his secretary of war.

President Garfield's son, James Rudolph Garfield, served as secretary of the interior during the last two years of Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

Kaiser's "Sharks" Hit East Coast In August, 1918

By JOHN GROVER

Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington (AP)—"They raised hell." Thus do sailormen describe the depredations of German U-boats in North American coastal waters in 1918.

Reports that Nazi submarines are operating in the western Atlantic recall that tense summer when coast-wise and convoy shipping was savagely and successfully attacked.

Seven of the Kaiser's "tin sharks" paid visits to the U.S. coast. Their mines, bombs, torpedoes and shells sent down more than 100 merchant, fishing and war vessels. More than 200 died.

For months U.S. navy patrol craft steamed in frantic circles seeking the undersea marauders. Civilians on the coast were in a lather of excitement, with a reason. One audacious commander came to the surface and sank a barge tow within sight of thousands week-ending on Cape Cod.

It brought the war mighty close to home. Most of the U.S. destroyer fleet was in English waters, fighting swarms of short-range subs there.

U-Boats Record

The U.S. navy historical division has complete records of those hectic days. They show a definite pattern of submarine operation off America. The log of the submarine U-156 is typical. She left Kiel in command of Kapitanleutnant von Oldenburg, June 15. On the way over she bagged the 4,175-ton British steamer Tortuguero. Then the sub turned up about 450 miles off New York. Here's her record:

July 7, 1918 — Sank Norwegian bark Marosa with bombs; crew set adrift.

July 8—Sank Norwegian schooner Manx King with bombs.

July 21—Surfaced four miles for Chatham, Mass., naval air station and opened fire on sea-going tug Perth Amboy and four barges. Fired 200 shots. Three bargemen wounded.

July 23—Fishing schooner Robert & Richard sunk 60 miles S.E. of Cape Porpoise.

Aug. 2—British motorship Dornfontein sunk off Bay of Fundy.

Aug. 3—Three fishing schooners sunk off Seal Island, N.S.

Aug. 4—Canadian schooner Nelson A. sunk off Nova Scotia.

Aug. 5—Schooners Agnes B. Holland and Gladys M. Hallett sunk with bombs; Canadian tanker Luz Blanca torpedoed; two seamen killed.

Aug. 8—Swedish steamer Sydland sunk.

Aug. 11—British steamer Pennistone, in convoy, torpedoed and sunk; U.S. steamer Herman Winter shelled but escaped; two killed.

Aug. 17—Norwegian steamer San Jose sunk.

Aug. 20—Eleven fishing schooners sunk on banks; crews set adrift.

Aug. 21—Canadian trawler Triumph captured and armed as raider; Triumph with German crew sank six fishing schooners.

Was Sunk by Mine

Her supplies low, the U-156 headed for home. She hit a mine off Norway and was lost, the only one of the seven raiders which failed to return safely.

In her six weeks off the Canadian and United States coast, the U-156 demoralized coast-wise traffic. Her score was typical of the U-151, U-53, U-140, U-117, U-155 and U-152 which also operated off the coast. Two powerful U.S. war vessels were victims of mines laid by the submarines. The cruiser San Diego went down in sight of Long Island with six seamen lost. The battleship Minnesota had a hole torn in her hull by a mine off the coast of New Jersey, but made port.

RECORD OUTPUTS BUT UNCLE SAM CRIES FOR MORE

Business Men Expect Rapidly Increasing Pressure to Push Production of War Supplies, Says Financial Writer

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

Associated Press Financial Editor

New York, July 2 — (AP)—Mid-1941 finds Uncle Sam's vast industrial machine shifted into high gear with production experts frantically devising super-chargers and other devices designed to speed production to a pace never before dreamed of in this machine age.

Already, the United States' great mills and factories are pouring forth a grist larger than in the vaunted peace-time "new era" of 1929, far bigger than during the frantic war effort of 1917, yet the cry is more, more and faster.

The first half of 1941 has seen the same program move out of the blue print into the production stage. Emphasis has swung from new arms plants to the gigantic problem of supply.

The government is swinging its controls over an ever-widening orbit to assure the arms makers of adequate steel, copper, rubber, to make sure that there will be no needless diversion of any of the multitude of supplies needed both by our own growing armed forces, and by Britain.

Mid-1941 sees the United States coming to grips with a wartime economy, and coming to grips with it with a constantly changing conception of what it means.

What They Expect

Therefore, for the remainder of 1941, business men expect:

1. Rapidly increasing pressure to boost production of war supplies, including everything needed from ships to shoes.
2. Widening of priorities and price controls.
3. Shortage of some materials, tending to restrict production of some lines of civilian goods, increase use of substitutes, as plastics for aluminum.
4. Intensive efforts to get producers to restrict the number of models and styles of a wide range of civilian products from radio sets to washing machines.
5. Further expansion of plants of arms makers and suppliers, and increasing use of small plants through sub-contracting.
6. A new tax measure, bringing a big but as yet undetermined boost in levies on corporations and individuals.
7. Limitation of profits, by price controls and taxes.
8. An uneven, but in the aggregate, sweeping reduction of unemployment.

That Cost of Living

Cost of living for wage earners, as shown by the Industrial Conference Board index, had risen through May only 2.6 per cent over a year previously, but sensitive raw material prices, particularly foods and imported staples, have shown a steep boost.

The Associated Press daily index of 35 wholesale raw staple prices, shows a jump of more than 20 per cent. How much this may ultimately be reflected in living costs will depend upon future developments, and particularly the operations of the government price controllers.

Although business profits mounted with the big volumes of the early months of the year, Wall street, as reflected in the stock market, feels that profit margins are in for a squeeze between rising costs and efforts to keep the lid on prices.

In the first quarter of 1941, a tabulation by the Federal Reserve Bank shows 441 corporations had aggregate net profits 16 per cent higher than in the first three months of last year. Even in this showing, however, profits did not come even close to keeping pace with the increase in business volume, and Wall Street's feeling that profits are in for a further pinch is clearly indicated in the fact that share prices, on the average, are about where they were a year ago.

Financing War Effort

Financing of the defence effort has continued at low credit rates, with U. S. government bonds selling at levels to yield two per cent or less. The billions of spending, present and prospective, brought momentary twinges of inflation fears in financial circles from time to time, but some banking authorities pointed out that much has been learned about monetary control since the First Great War, and that even in England, despite the far-reaching disruption of her economy, wholesale prices have risen only about 40 per cent, and the government's bonds are held at such good prices as to yield only around three per cent.

What proportion of the defence cost can or will be met with taxes and how much by borrowing depends upon what Congress does with the new tax bill, but meanwhile Treasury offerings of bonds continue to be heavily oversubscribed.

The beginnings of an effort to finance by selling government savings bonds directly to individuals, rather than having recourse so extensively to banks and thus inflating the bank credit structure, brought returns in the early weeks of the program this spring of $100,000,000 or more a week. This plan may be pursued more vigorously later on.

Markets Situation

The securities markets generally remained sluggish during the first half of this year, and corporations needing defence capital generally found it easier to borrow at the banks or the RFC than to float new securities.

Stock Exchange leaders made exhaustive surveys of their business, in an effort to find a way to bring back an active market. Going out of Wall street for the first time, they employed Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to be president of the Exchange, taking office about July 1.

Plan Rebuilding Improved London

War Has Demonstrated How City Can be Improved and Architects Discuss it

London, July 2 — (CP) — "Not a "new" London, but a rebuilt and improved London" is the objective of the group of British architects who are planning for the future and observing the make-shift arrangements the war has necessitated in that great city.

Speaking before the Royal Society of Arts, W. H. Ansell, president of the Royal Institute of British Architects said that Londoners are passionately interested in the plans for rebuilding as is testified by the flood of theories and suggestions which fill the columns of the daily newspapers.

The war has demonstrated how certain aspects of a rebuilt city can be improved and has afforded many opportunities for study along such lines as the routing of traffic, landscaping and clearing vistas so that London's historic buildings may be released from the imprisonment of commercial buildings flanking them too closely.

The London skyline would be dull without its church spires, Mr. Ansoll said, and the Londoner would be unhappy without it. London must retain Wren's steeples and a London planning board should be created to supervise all the work done in connection with their preservation.

U. S. in Tempest Over Beer Sales For Army Camps

Leaders of Service Groups Divided on Question but Congress May Settle it for Them

New York, July 2 — (CP) —Beer is regularly and legally on sale in the wet canteens of Canada's military camps but Uncle Sam's army and navy servicemen have to go out to their neighboring town beer parlors to get the beverage.

Now there is a controversy on the question "Should the U. S. Army and Navy boys have beer?" The question has foamed up and spilled over, causing consternation in the ranks of the United Service Organizations, a semi-religious group now engaged in a campaign to provide "wholesome recreation" for defence workers.

Does beer come under the head of wholesome recreation? If U. S. servicemen are going to buy beer some place, should it be provided for them in the 360 new clubhouses the U. S. plans to build and operate in defence centres?

Or should the boys who spurn sarsaparilla and so on seek out local beer parlors and pay double prices? Double price — 20 cents a glass — is just what they are reported to be paying in some camp areas.

Varied Opinions

Frankly, the United Service Organizations wishes the question had never come up.

"We'd rather not say anything about it," says their press relations committee.

The U. S. O. includes five traditionally teetotaler organizations — the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army, the National Catholic Community and the Jewish Welfare Board. The sixth member, the National Travelers Aid Association, has had no occasion to take a stand. But the question is up, with argument flourishing hotly among servicemen, their mothers, their girl friends, churches, social workers.

New York's District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, head of the U. S. O. money-raising committee, said recently that service boys had told him they wanted "reasonably cheap beer — the opportunity to sit down in some decent place and drink a ten cent glass of beer, instead of paying 15 or 20 cents in some undesirable place." His statement drew a flood of anti-beer letters.

Mere mention of beer stirs up the old liquor controversy the United States has chewed over in war periods. Those in favor of spirits for fighters say that Britain allows regular rations of grog to her men, and that wine always was part of the daily diet of French soldiers and sailors.

Traditionally Dry

Ever since the Spanish-American war, however, the United States has been on the dry side for soldiers. It seems liquor caused trouble in that war, with "more men dying of liquor than of fever," according to the W. C. T. U. Thereafter the army and navy opposed sale of alcoholic beverages to servicemen. During the First Great War the American army was emphatically dry, with dry zones established, even around bases in wet France. Then in 1935, two years after repeal, all such regulations were quietly abolished by Congress.

So that at the moment it is actually legal to sell liquor in army canteens. The army information centre says many canteens do sell beer, few sell hard liquor.

However, a law is pending in Congress to re-establish regulations of the last war, providing for dry zones around camps. Congressional action may spare the U. S. O. from an embarrassing situation.

Stepping Stone In Stormy Seas

Cairo, July 2 — (CP) — The fabled island of Cyprus, third largest in the Mediterranean, has had but two great waves of visitors in its entire history — soldiers and archeologists. The former, fighting to take and hold it for both ancient and modern empires, have given Cyprus a heritage rich in strife and bloodshed.

The archeologists, delving into one of the earth's earliest cultures, have uncovered art treasures worth fabulous sums, among them the famed armless Venus de Milo, Roman counterpart of Aphrodite.

Britain annexed the island's 3,400 square miles from Turkey in 1914, has developed an excellent road system, coast-to-coast railroad, at least six airports, and — at Famagusta— a naval base. Syria is 60 miles away.

Rising above the seaport, Famagusta, in St. Nicholas Cathedral, symbolizing the island's culture of 600 years ago. Richard The Lion-hearted was wed in a similar church at Nicosia.

Most of the island's 350,000 populations raise livestock or till the soil, although much of the land must be irrigated. Principal products are cereals, cotton, linseed and fruit.

Cyprus' capital and largest city is Nicosia, right in the centre of the island and hub of its life and industry since Biblical days. Good roads link it to other important cities.

In the city of Kyrenia, say the old Greek and Roman fables, dwelt the beautiful goddess of love, Aphrodite, who bathed in the sea each morning. The city is an important seaport.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

WHAT MAKES A DELIGHTFUL HOSTESS?

When your friends say you are a delightful hostess, they mean that you, as well as your guests, had a good time at your party.

The really successful hostess is completely aware that her party depends on her, depends on how much she knows about herself. She knows what kind of parties she likes to give, and she gives them with a gusto that is inevitably contagious. She doesn't make all kinds of excuses for not giving parties.

The kind of parties you give tells the story of you. If you are the dreary kind of hostess who dreads asking guests to come to a party at her house, who "wishes it were over", your defeatist mood will be echoed in your party and in your guests.

Then there's the other kind of story — the "delightful hostess" who values friends, enjoys having them about her in her home, dramatizes what she has and gallantly and engagingly makes big assets of little possessions. She doesn't attempt to do what she is perfectly aware she can't do. She isn't bowled over by the word "formal". She doesn't spend her time sighing for what she hasn't; — she knows the really easy tricks of making what she has glow with her own enthusiasm, her clever sense of showmanship.

The hostess who "does things so charmingly" has fun at her own parties. So does her husband, for most husbands, given even a little opportunity, are happy and proud to cooperate by being good hosts. And her guests have a good time.

Happily and enthusiastically, she does all her planning beforehand; then she doesn't have to fuss about the party as it goes blithely along. She thinks of her guests as friends, not as company.

And when her guests say, on leaving, "Thank you for inviting us... we've had such a good time" .... they mean it!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Over-Strict Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother and I have never been very close and have never agreed on things. She allows me to go with boys, but has never permitted more than one boy at a time, and when we broke up she'd always accuse me of all kinds of things. I don't believe in smoking, drinking or petting, and I always wanted to consider boys as just pals to go places.

I'm 20 years old and have fallen in love with a very nice boy of 21. Mother thinks he's all right, but she has a fit if he takes me out more than twice a week, or if he comes to the house to spend the evening. I've gotten to the point where I don't invite him any more, but I do meet him outside, and then I have to promise to come home right after the show, when we like to go to the drugstore and meet our "bunch," and have an ice-cream.

What are we going to do? I can't invite him to the house and parking is an unpardonable sin in mother's estimation and I too am rather against it. We're going to be married in about a year. Right now I'm working, although I don't pay board, so I'm really not independent.

Gee Gee

Have you told your mother that you expect to marry this young man in a year? And if so her objections to your seeing him oftener sound overly strict to me. I can't see any reason why you shouldn't go to a drugstore, meet your young friends, and enjoy some light refreshment after the show. If you haven't told her you're engaged, better confide that important fact at once.

Proves Age Difference No Ban To Happiness

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I read a letter in your column a few weeks ago from a young man seeking advice on marrying a young lady six years his senior. I am happy to say two years ago, when I was 24 years old, I married a very lovely lady of 33 years. We have a precious baby girl one year old and we are perfectly congenial. She was a widow with one child, and we live as one really happy family.

"John J."

It's a pleasure to print this letter in the column. The wife is nine years older than her husband. Their family life is ideally happy. When nine years seniority on the part of the wife makes no difference, the wife is no doubt tactful and understanding, and the husband more evolved than most young men of his age.

This chronicle of a happy family will answer a good many letters from people wondering if a marriage where the wife is three, four or five years older than her husband could be happy after the honeymoon.

Your Dreams May Be as 'Real' as They Seem

Your Real Emotions in Dreams

"That dream seemed so real I can still hear the air-raid sirens . . ."

Up and down the dream streets she had rushed, frantically seeking a bomb shelter! Finding refuge in a store where her mother had a charge account, she felt safe.

The dream seemed real because it WAS real, for dreams symbolize our real feelings about life.

This girl's fear of the day-to-day problems she could not solve set up a conflict in her "subconscious," a battle symbolized in the dream by bombs. Deep down, she wished to go back to her carefree childhood.

Your dreams, too, throw a wholesome light on your subconscious. Understanding their meaning, you can thresh out worries that previously festered under the surface.

A dream of losing your engagement ring may mean you suppress a fear that your beau is unfaithful. Or do you dream of wild beasts or of being alone in an empty world?

Psychology can explain all these dreams. Our 32-page booklet has meanings of many dreams and dream symbols. Discusses dreams that "come true."

Fashion Flashes

BRIMFUL of charm is the hat with the big brim. Made for the grand occasion is a big-brimmed off-the-face black Milan straw curtained with black Chantily type lace. Under the brim, at the right and placed to nestle against the hair, are huge red roses.

RIGHT INTO THE TUB go the nicest frocks, since wash fabrics are used for the finest fashions. For evening wear, there is a shirt-waist frock of white pique with a huge pale pink and green water lily print.

WE NEVER GET TIRED of the navy splashed with white. Nice for town wear is a tunic dress of navy sheer with white crocket buttons down the front to the hem of the long tunic. White eyelet embroidery collar and cuffs.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

DEATH OF THOUSANDS DUE TO WATER ACCIDENTS THIS SUMMER IS FORESEEN

It would seem that the efforts of those striving to save lives through safety education must be redoubled. An alarming increase in the rate of motor fatalities during the first months of 1941 is reported by insurance company statisticians. The rate to date is the highest since 1937, when almost 40,000 persons lost their lives in automobile mishaps.

Other statisticians, studying past records and taking into account that more persons will spend their vacations in the U. S. and probably at resorts offering fishing, swimming and boating, than in previous years, predict that 8,000 persons will lose their lives through drowning.

The latter figure would be greatly reduced, obviously, if more persons were acquainted with a few rules concerning behavior in or about the water. It is so easy for both old and young to get swimming and first aid instruction that there is really no excuse for any one going near the water until he or she knows the rules by heart.

But even experienced swimmers are drowned, so knowing the rules isn't enough. The habit of not taking chances must be acquired. For example, you take a big chance whenever you dive in any water before you know its depth and what is on the bottom. The other day, near my home, a boy dived into a shallow pool. His head was thrust by the impact into soft mud. In trying to get out, his legs became entangled in reeds. He didn't come up until a searching party found him and from the condition of the body guessed the cause of his tragic and needless death.

Neither children nor adults should take long swims unless a boat accompanies them. For the strongest swimmer will get into difficulties when exhausted, and no matter how good a swimmer he is, if he gets cramps in deep water, far from shore, he is just as liable to drown as anyone else.

No one should stay in the water very long at a time, particularly if the water is cold, for this exhausts the most robust body's heat and strength.

Boats can always be dangerous. Dinghies and, in fact, any of the smaller sailing craft are liable to upset in a sudden squall of wind. Persons who aren't used to the water and to boats should see to it that they have a life preserver handy when they go out sailing. Canoes capsize easily, yet persons who can't swim a stroke will go out in them.

All persons ought to know how to take care of persons overcome by water, until the doctor arrives. If the victim is unconscious when he is pulled ashore, artificial respiration must be administered at once. Often expert knowledge of it means the difference between life and death.

The mechanics of artificial respiration are quite simple. They will be explained here tomorrow.

ORRA M. ALGER DIES SHORTLY AFTER ATTACK

Was One-Time Newspaper Publisher—Head of Children's Aid Society and Alger Press

Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society for Oshawa and Ontario County for the past 15 years, and one time newspaper publisher, Orra M. Alger, aged 71, President of the Alger Press Limited, died suddenly on Thursday, June 26th, in Oshawa General Hospital.

He was taken ill shortly after noon and taken to the hospital at three o'clock. He died from a heart attack.

Well-known throughout the County due to his social, sporting and business engagements, his sudden death was a shock to his family and friends.

Born at Castleton in 1870, Mr. Alger spent the earlier part of his life in the community as a school teacher there and at Hastings. In 1901 he went to Embro, near Woodstock, where he entered the printing and publishing business. He published a weekly newspaper known as the Embro Courier.

In 1906 he moved to Tweed, where he purchased a weekly paper, The Tweed News. While there he became active in the life of the community, serving in the Methodist Church and on many fraternal societies. For over a year, in addition to being the Publisher of The Tweed News, he was at the same time Publisher and Editor of The Pembroke Standard.

In 1919 he moved to Oshawa and with his two sons, Ewart and Stewart, he founded Alger Press Limited, of which he was President at the time of his death, and the Oshawa Telegram. The paper was a weekly but subsequently became a daily, the first in Oshawa. In 1925 it was sold to the Mundy Printing Co., Ltd., and merged with the Oshawa Reformer, now the Times. The late Mr. Alger was also editor of the Oshawa Telegram and the Sons of England Record, a fraternal magazine.

Mr. Alger became Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society in 1926. He was also an Alderman of the city council for three years. A well known member of Simcoe Street United Church, he served on the church board. For many years he was Chairman of the Christmas Cheer Fund for Oshawa and placement officer for the British Children's Evacuation Committee.

He liked bowling and curling being a member of the Oshawa Bowling and Curling Clubs, and also was a keen fisherman. He was a life member of the Pentalpha Chapter, Cedar Lodge of the Masonic Order and for 18 years a member of the Oshawa Rotary Club. He was also a member of the Sons of England.

Surviving are his wife, Agnes, two sons, Ewart S. and Stewart R., of Oshawa; three daughters, Mrs. Lincoln Elliott, of Tweed, Mrs. W. Presnail of Toronto, and Margaret Alger, at home.

Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck as they appear in Frank Capra's new hurricane of happiness, "Meet John Doe," now till the end of the week at the Belle Theatre.

Cooking Sharps Have New Ideas For Vegetables

Ottawa Expert Expounds Modern Methods for Seasonal Dishes Right From the Gardens

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 2 — (CP) — Because Canadians live in a climate where they cannot have fresh vegetables from their own gardens all-year-round, every advantage should be taken of home-grown vegetables during the next few months, Miss Edith Elliot, food expert of the Agriculture Department's Marketing Service, told the Canadian Press.

"Vegetables raw, vegetables freshly cooked or vegetables canned, should be included in each day's menu," she said. "With people becoming more 'nutrition' conscious every day there is a greater appreciation of the values of vegetables."

Vegetables all supply vitamins, minerals, water and bulk. They are a boon for the too fleshy who by substituting fruits and vegetables for the starchy foods may not only improve their health, but their figures as well.

"Two generous servings of non-starchy vegetable, one starchy and one raw green vegetable or tomatoes every day is an excellent rule" Miss Elliot said.

For Good Health

From the point of view of good health, vegetables are valuable in eliminating poisons from the body. The coarse fibrous material in the leaf and stem vegetables as well as the framework of root vegetables does more to free the body of poisonous waste than any artificial method.

Some foods leave an "acid ash" or residue in the blood after being broken down or burned in the body. These acid-forming foods are meat, fish, eggs, poultry, cereals, crackers and bread. Some fruits and vegetables, as well as dairy products, leave an alkaline ash. A balanced diet will avoid acidosis, she said.

A much wider variety of vegetables may be served raw than many people realize. Radishes, cucumbers, celery, cabbage, onions, carrots, beets, turnips and tomatoes are appetizing when thus served and provide the highest vitamin value in this way.

Cooking Reform

In cooking vegetables "cover with water and boil until tender" is no longer considered a sufficient instruction.

Just as little water as possible should be used for minerals are easily dissolved into the water in which the vegetable is cooked and the longer time required the more mineral will be dissolved.

"Therefore use boiling water and keep boiling constantly," Miss Elliot advised.

Vitamins are injured by heat and oxidation so the saucepan should be closely covered. Salt added to colored vegetables preserves color and accentuates flavor.

Never overcook, drain well, and save the water for sauces or soup is further advice.

"The latest nutritional knowledge advocates cooking the shortest possible time for palatability," said Miss Elliot.

TOO BIG A HURRY

Columbus, July 2 (AP)—At last it's happened. Fire Chief Ed Welch said a ladder truck pulled out in such haste to answer an alarm that the rear wheelman was unable to get aboard. He wasn't missed until the truck crashed into a parked car two blocks away from the fire hall.

Washington, July 2 (AP) — To improve the quality of the regular army's enlisted strength, the United States War Department today applied a sort of "win promotion or get out" policy to its privates. Hereafter a man who has served three years without demonstrating that he has acquired specialist training or is worthy of promotion will be barred from re-enlisting.

Record Tonnage Of Iron Ore Handled During Past Month

Cleveland, July 2 (AP)—Shipments of Lake Superior iron ore on the Great Lakes set a new June record last month at 10,789,574 gross tons, the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported last night.

Shipments for the 30-day month were slightly under the all-month record set in May at 11,061,199 tons, but the difference was less than a day's loading. Over June, 1940, the increase was 13.27 per cent.

The previous record for June was 10,174,434 tons, set in 1929.

The season's total reached 28,825,566 tons, up 66.92 from the comparable 1940 period.

With the president in charge, the meeting opened in the usual way. Mrs. Bunnett was then called on and gave in her pleasing way, some helpful thoughts. The mother in the home can fittingly be called the "household executive". If mother fails the whole family structure falls. We can wisely adopt the Institute creed as a motto for every day living. Encouraging remarks were made regarding the efforts of rural women toward war activities.

A helpful booklet may be obtained from the Department in the ways of substituting honey for sugar in our daily menu, and for canning.

Mrs. Sam Elliott reported to the president she had bleached and dyed two quilt linings which she was donating to the Institute. They were to be retained on the second line and made up some time during the summer.

A Challenge to Winter-Dull Hair

Glamorous Veronica Lake has shining blond hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Does it ever occur to you, lady, that it is a good idea to shine up your glory crown? If tresses lack shimmer and gloss, if they don't sparkle in the sunlight, you are missing out on a great big beauty factor.

When the shafts are dull, you cannot expect the coiffure to qualify. Poor little things haven't had proper care. The shampoo agent may not be strictly high grade, or the rinsing has not been thorough. Not one woman among forty who shampoos her hair does a decent job of it. And in some beauty shops where operators are hurried there is room for improvement.

Daily Brushing

When the hair is beautifully clean, every little silky thread is away from its neighbor, fluttering on its own. There's no such thing as staying slapped down onto the scalp unless the finger wave is fresh-laid. Few brain mats get proper vitalizing attentions. They should be brushed daily, though we know what our beauty clients will say about that; brushing strings out the ringlets. Not always, my children. Use a stiff, narrow brush with short bristles. Groom from scalp to hair ends, then brush the ends around the fingers. Do this at night. Go to bed a curly girl. If you brush and don't arrange your curly cues, of course they will be limp next day.

It is important that the scalp should be kept free of dead skin scales. The scalp surface, to be healthy, should be as smooth as that of the complexion. It can be kept that way by applying hot mineral oil the night before the shampoo, by faithfulness to the five minute scalp friction at the bedtime beautifying fiesta.

Good health is reflected in the hair. Worry, malnutrition, sleeplessness take their miserable toll, make locks look dismal, hinder the new growth that is ever appearing as dead shafts moult away.

PLAINFIELD W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Plainfield W. M. S. was held in the United Church at Plainfield on June the 18th. In the absence of the president, the second vice president, Mrs. Fred Hall, took charge. The theme hymn for the day was read by Mrs. Fred Hall and the corresponding Scripture lesson was read responsively and Mrs. Hall offered prayer.

The day's devotions were in charge of Mrs. Fred Prindle, who chose for her topic the tenth chapter of Luke and a very interesting paper was given on the chapter.

After the business period the second group leader, Mrs. Erle Denyes took charge and opened her part of the meeting with a Litany of Praise. Mrs. S. S. Hazard gave a reading entitled "The Auxiliary Meets Today", and Mrs. Denyes reviewed the Study Books of the year and spoke briefly on the passing of Pastor Lumbo of Chissamba Church in Africa. A lovely solo which was enjoyed by all present was rendered by Miss Jno. Moore of Belleville. Mrs. Fred Prindle gave a reading on Christian Stewardship and interesting items about different people were given by Mrs. S. Parks, Mrs. Violet Elliot, Mrs. P. Hall, Mrs. G. McKenzie and Mrs. B. Moore. Mrs. Ralph Wilder gave a reading and Mrs. McKenzie read a letter from Miss Margaret Dawson entitled "The Mother of Kandimba". Mrs. Moore of Belleville spoke briefly on temperance, social welfare, racial brotherhood and peace and Mrs. McKenzie also spoke on temperance, stressing the importance of not even taking one glass of beer.

The treasurer, Mrs. S. Parks reported $99.76 on hand to date.

A hymn and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting.

SCHOOL PICNIC

To close a successful school year and to celebrate a long holiday, the children of Wallbridge, Maple View, Brookdale and Centenary with their teachers, Mr. Elliott, Miss Sine, Mr. Godwin and Mr. Bird joined together on a very delightful picnic held at the bay on Thursday, June 26th. The school gathered at 9 o'clock, and at a pleasant spot on the bay shore, where the hospitality of the owners of Bide-A-Wee was greatly enjoyed. Everyone joined in a scavenger hunt, while the parents attending, prepared a lovely dinner.

After dinner the boys and girls played ball, went in swimming and had a very thrilling afternoon, races were held and prizes given to the winners. Shortly after four the picnic broke up and everyone journeyed home tired but happy. The parents appreciate the kindness of the teachers in planning such a pleasant time for the children and also all who helped in any way to make it so successful.

A Yankee streak that you haven't heard anything about is a five-game winning streak—and it may turn out to be more important than Joe DiMaggio's sensational string of hits or the club's chain of home runs.

The Bombers are raiding the strong and weak alike these days. Their double victory, 7-2 and 9-2, over Boston Red Sox yesterday gave them a record of nine victories in their last ten games and increased their American baseball league lead despite Cleveland Indians' victory last night at St. Louis.

DiMaggio, whose hitting streak has captured the fans to such an extent that a crowd of 52,832 turned out at Yankee Stadium for what otherwise would have been a drab mid-week doubleheader, came up to expectations.

He made two hits in the opener and one in the five-inning nightcap to tie Willie Keeler's all-time Major League record of hitting in 44 consecutive contests in 1897, when fouls didn't count as strikes.

The Yankees' record streak of 40 home runs in 25 straight tilts ended in the first game. Until yesterday the Yanks hadn't missed hitting a home run since the second half of a doubleheader June 1 in Cleveland.

Weatherly Fined

The Indians have been showing some of their expected doldrums and last night Manager Roger Peckinpaugh fined and suspended Roy Weatherly, one of the league's best centrefielders, for not hustling.

The Tribe tore into St. Louis Browns for a 10-6 triumph, with Hal Trosky and Pitcher Al Milnar hitting home runs and Jeff Heath having a perfect turn at bat with four hits. Even so the Yankee margin was stepped up to 2 1-2 games.

Philadelphia Athletics whipped the Washington Senators, 10-1, with a 16-hit offensive and four-hit hurling by rookie Phil Marchilgrasp until the eighth inning. con, who had a no-hitter in his Marchildon, a native of Penetanguishene, Ont., who finished out last season with Toronto Leafs of the International League, has been going like a house afire of late and now has six victories against four defeats. Last night he hurled the best game of his Major League career.

Tigers Down White Sox

Detroit downed Chicago White Sox 5-1 with Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitching three-hit ball.

St. Louis Cardinals gained exclusive possession of first place in the National League by plastering an 11-7 defeat on Pittsburgh Pirates with a 17-hit assault led by John Mize and Johnny Hopp, each with four hits.

Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a 6-4 decision to the Phillies when Stan Benjamin singled with the bases loaded in the 10th. This was the first time in 11 games this season the tail enders had licked the Dodgers.

The downtrodden Boston Braves came through with a 6-4 victory over New York Giants in the only other National League game. The Braves crowded six hits into one inning for all their runs.

Bowling

An intramural three-game mixed doubles tournament was enjoyed by the members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club as their diversion for the Dominion Day holiday program of sport. Ideal bowling weather was in evidence while upwards of 60 local bowlers took part in the tourney.

The results of the matches were:

Three games high: 1. Mrs. C. Hyde and Charlie Iley; 2. H. Ackerman and C. N. Sulman; 3. A. Watkin and Harvey Stewart; 4. Joe Blackburn and Alf Symons.

Two games high, Mrs. Ward and Russ Richards.

One game high, Mrs. Shaw and Doug Row.

DEACON LASSIES DOWN CORBINS BY 23-14 COUNT

Five Round-Trippers Hit During Game of Lusty Clouting

IN THIRD PLACE

Rallying with a barrage of extra base hits in the latter stages and scoring ten runs in the eighth frame, Larry Schoener's Deacon lassies downed the Corbin Lock gals 23 to 14 in a scheduled game in the City Ladies' Softball League played at the Armouries as the only holiday sports attraction in Belleville. The loss dropped the Corbins into the cellar slot, while the Deacons advanced into third place in the league standing.

The nines battled evenly until the fifth when the Corbins shelled Jean Corneal, Deacons' starting pitcher, from the hilltop with a six-run barrage. Flossie McMurter was rushed to fill the breach and as the Deacons rallied later, Miss McMurter was creditted with the win. Eve Reid hurled the entire game for Corbins.

Deacons retaliated in their half of the fifth, however, with a seven run attack, but it was their ten runs scored in the eighth that cinched the honors. Jean Corneal redeemed herself as she went to right field and later counted two home runs and a brace of doubles. Joyce Woodhouse and Jean Muir also hit round-trippers for the winners, while June Blaind and Pete Haslip hit circuit blows for the losers.

The line ups:

Corbins—Burgess cf, Reid p, Marsh and Hill 2b, Haslip 1b, Blaind c, Jones 3b, Ellis lf, Blake rf and McKenna ss.

Deacons: Ridley 2b, Woodhouse c, D. Dolder 3b, S. Sharpe lf, Corneal p and rf, Weeks 1b, Hansey cf, McMurter rf and p, Dolder and Muir ss.

PETEY SCALZO LOSES TITLE TO DICK LEMOS

Scores Spectacular Five-Round Knockout of Featherweight Champion

ONLY TWENTY-ONE

By ROBERT MYERS
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Los Angeles, July 2 (AP)—There was gay music in the cantinas and unrestrained joy in Little Mexico today. Little Mexico, after years of dreams and wasted hope, had a world champion fighter.

Young Richard Lemos, born within the shadow of the Old Mission in the heart of Los Angeles, won the National Boxing Association featherweight title last night with a spectacular five-round knockout over Petey Scalzo of New York.

For four rounds the two fought on even terms. Then, as the fifth started, Lems, something of an oddity because he is a switch-hitter, shifted to southpaw style and proceeded to wreck the game little Easterner.

Lemos crowded Scalzo into the New Yorker's own corner and winged him with that TNT-loaded left swing. For fully a minute he kept Petey hemmed in. Referee Benny Whitman finally stepped in and separated them. Lemos rushed Scalzo across to the opposite ropes and let fly with a left haymaker.

Dropped For Nine-Count

Scalzo dropped for a 9-count. He was in distress when he reached his feet. One more left hit the Scalzo jaw. Petey pitched over wisewide, landing almost nead down on the canvas. At nine he made a feeble effort to rise. But he couldn't. Manager Pete Reilly and his seconds carried him to the corner. The round was 2 minutes 22 seconds old.

Pandemonium broke loose. There were 9,000 fans in the Olympic Auditorium, and most of them seemed to be Lemos' countrymen. They swarmed to the ringside.

Lupe Velez clambered up on the ring apron and planted a big kiss on the embarrassed Lemos' cheek. Then the band struck up a lively Mexican folk song—the one where everyone joins in and claps. The new champion is 21.

Davis-Zivic Fight Postponed for Night

New York, July 2 (AP)—Kept apart last night by a shower which passed hurriedly through the Bronx just before dark and gave promoter Mike Jacobs a bad fright, welterweight champion Fritzie Zivic and Bummy Davis, the soldier boy, will try again tonight to put on their 12-round non-title fight at the Polo Grounds.

Not enough rain fell last evening to wet anybody, but the threatening weather of the afternoon apparently kept the customers away from the ticket windows, and Uncle Mike jumped at the chance to postpone the bout a day. He hoped it was only the weather which had discouraged the crowd.

In the northern division, the Ottawa New Edinburgh Club took first place with eight points and the Ottawa Rideau second with five points. A club from Kingston, Ont., finished behind the Rideau Club with two points and next in order was a team from Carleton Place which failed to pick up a mark.

NEWARK BEARS EXTEND STREAK TO SEVEN GAMES

Rochester Defeats Leafs Twice to Move Into Second Place

GIANTS ADVANCE

(By the Associated Press)

The current International Baseball League flag chase has provided fans with plenty of queer goings on but none matches the erratic play of Syracuse Chiefs the last few weeks.

Since June 11 the Chiefs have put together two record streaks of the season to date, winning 11 consecutive games and losing the same number. Not even the last-place Toronto Leafs, who have won only 21 of 75 contests, have dropped as many in successsion, and no other club has had more than seven straight wins.

The league-leading Newark Bears handed the Chiefs their 11th straight setback last night, 5-2, and at the same time extended their own victory streak to seven.

Frank Kelleher led the Bears nine-hit attack on three hurlers with his 24th home run of the year and a single in three trips. Joe Krakauskas, the Ontario product, was the losing pitcher.

Take Advantage of Slump

Jersey City Giants, who took advantage of the Chiefs' slump to climb over them into fifth place, increasing their margin by edging out an 8-6 decision over Baltimore Orioles in another night tilt.

The closing race among the second, third and fourth-place clubs took another change with Rochester's Red Wings moving from fourth into the runner-up spot, two percentage points ahead of the Buffalo Bisons and a half game in front of Montreal's Royals.

A double victory over Toronto turned the trick for the Wings, while the Bisons and Royals split a twin-bill.

Hank Gornicki pitched the Wings to an 11-4 triumph in the opener with Charley Brumbeloe and Clem Dreisewerd collaborating on a 17-7 victory in the nightcap.

Buffalo's Freddy Hutchinson rolled to his 14th conquest of the season in the first game at Montreal as his mates backed him up with a 14-hit, 11-2 victory. Jack Graham's scratch single with two out and two on in the seventh inning of the second game gave the Royals the verdict, 3-2.

ATHLETIC MEET HELD AT DEBERT

1st Canadian Scottish Regt. of Vancouver, B.C., Wins the Shield

Debert Camp, N.S., July 2—(CP)—A Dominion Day meet at this big military base yesterday established men of the 1st Canadian Scottish Regiment of Victoria, B.C., as the cream of track and field athletes of the 3rd Division.

The British Columbians amassed 54 points to double the total of the second place outfit, Regina Rifles. The Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars from Montreal were third with 20 points.

Capturing three first, 22-year-old Gordon Ward of the 3rd Anti-Tank Regiment, R.C.A., a former record holder in Quebec City Scholastic competition, was the meet's outstanding performer. Durward McAlaster, Kisbey, Sask., captured two firsts in a meet that attracted 600 contestants from Debert and Camp Sussex, N.B.

Don Cameron, Sudbury, member of the Canadian Scottish, won the mile run in five minutes 4 4-5 seconds. Locey, (initials unavailable) of Cornwall, Ont., took the caber tossing event to gain points for the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders. Another member of the S.D. and G.H., Roy Goodey, Cobourg, Ont., won the shot putt with a toss of 35 feet, 8 inches.

C. Morton, of Hamilton took the standing broad jump for the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps with a leap of 9 feet, 3 1-2 inches.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

The proudest boy in Belleville on Monday night was Douglas Bone, winner of the 1941 Kinsmen Soap Box Derby, and rightly so as Douglas brought back to Belleville the Coyle Trophy, emblematic of the All - Canadian Soap Box Derby Championship won last year by Donald McGowan of Stirling. Incidentally the Stirling entry this year, Jimmy Armstrong, gave a good account of himself in his first race. However it was perseverance that won for Bone, as Doug had failed to win last year, but realized the zenith of his youthful aspirations Monday night. The final heat that saw Bone win was the fastest of the race, motorcycle patrolmen clocking the winner at 32 miles per hour maximum speed. And the finish of the final heat was the closest in the history of the race in Belleville—the finish was so close it could well be called a photo or blanket finish. And don't forget the Kinsmen street carnival was postponed until Wednesday night when the draws from the Derby will be made on Front St.

The lawn bowlers and the girls' softball games were the extent of the Dominion Day sporting activities in Belleville. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club enjoyed an intramural mixed doubles tourney on their own greens, but owing to the scarcity of lady bowlers, the men had to double up in some cases, but the three-game jitney proved ample entertainment for the "kitty clickers."

There was plenty of lusty slugging at the Armouries when the Deacon gals, who have induced Leo "Stub" Barrett to come out and assist in their coaching, trounce the Corbin lassies 23 to 14. A ten-run splurge in the eighth gave the Deacons the advantage and the honours, when Jean Corneal hit two homers and Jean Muir one, all three round-trippers coming when they helped the winners. Joyce Woodhouse also had a home run for Deacons, while the veteran, "Pete" Haslip and H. McKenna, hit circuit blows for the cellar - slot Corbins.

Wally Hilton, former Western University grid star and Bellevillian of athletic prowess, deserted the ranks of the bachelors and is now basking in the sunshine of marital bliss. Wally was married last week to Miss Lillian Marguerite Aikenhead of London, Ont. The Hiltons will take up residence at Deloro, where Wally is employed. The bestest of the best is extended to the Hiltons for a happy future.

Do you remember when an Australian touring cricket team, including such greats as Don Bradman and Stanley McCabe, defeated an Eastern Canada eleven at Toronto by nine wickets, nine years ago today? The Canadians made 176 for eight, declared and 103; the Aussies replying with 225 for eight, declared and 55 for one. Bradman compiled 40 and 52.

Bill McGowan, veteran umpire of the American League staff, has his chest thrown out a little more than usual—and not without good reason.

Early in the spring, McGowan conducted an umpiring school in Washington, D.C., and nearly three dozen young men turned out. They came from far and near and all were quick to show their aptitude for the profession.

Last week, Billy received a wire from J. P. Wells, president of the Bi-State League, informing him that his arbiting staff was now made up exclusively of McGowan graduates. They are Art McGonegal, New York City; Red Fritz from Florida; Sol Somma, ex-New York University football star; Paul Heller and Bob Moser, Quakertown, Pa. and Omar Kelly, Algoma, Ia., former Chicago Cardinal pro gridder.

McGowan says he placed all of the boys who took instructions under him. They are scattered in various O. B. leagues, including the Alabama State, Wisconsin State and Pennsylvania State Association.

Harold Bawden's Corby A. C. won top honors in the Dominion Day softball tournament held in Hastings yesterday, beating "Dit" Clapper's Hastings nine in the elimination and then taking the Peterborough Military Camp into tow in the final game of the tourney. Connie Harris hurled against the Hastings team and won his game 8 to 6, it being one of the best games of the day. Johnnie Bawden pitched the final game as Corbys beat the Military boys 20 to 10. In this game Bawden had 22 strikeouts. Lumberg hit a home run and Kiser a triple in the first game, but Harris materially helped his own cause with a double and two singles in four times at bat. Eddie Starr well known Peterboro hockey player, had five hits in six tries and led Hastings. In the second game Kiser had a round-tripper, triple and double, Bawden had two triples and Cy Barriage got four hits in five tries, and Ted Henn a brace of two-base blows.

SPORT SPICE—There seems no stopping this man DiMaggio from swinging a prolific willow, he has hit safely in the last 44 consecutive games, thereby equalling the record made in 1897 by Wee Willie Keeler.....Just one more river to cross for "Di Magg", one more hit and he'll shatter all batting records....The Yankees' streak of hitting home runs consecutively was snapped at 25 yesterday when they failed to click for a round-tripper in a doubleheader at Boston...... DiMaggio says Mel Harder of the Indians is the toughest pitcher he has to face....Next in line are Bob Feller and submarine-hurler Eldon Auker....A Washington fan swiped DiMaggio's pet bat between innings of the doubleheader yesterday and Joe went hitless the next three times up, but hit the fourth time with a borrowed bat from Tom Hendrick's pet pile of seasoned timber....Kingston lost their first home stand yesterday, dropping a 14 to 11 decision to Ottawa in the Interprovincial League.... Don't talk about it.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 2 (AP)—Eighty per cent of the telephone calls to the sports department of a Pittsburgh newspaper the other night concerned Joe DiMaggio's hitting streak....The Dodgers have had five players beaned since the start of last season and if that isn't a modern record for one club, sue us ....Ted Williams, who aspired to be a fireman, is doing even better—he's a ball of fire himself.

Did you know that Willie Keeler, whose consecutive hitting streak Joe DiMaggio equalled yesterday, once beat out five infield hits in one game, all of them to short.... Don McNeil has the G-man bug and may hang up his racquet at the end of this season—if he can get a job.

Bob Seeds, the former Giant, is riding the Baltimore bench for pitiful hitting....Since his illness, Joe Medwick has been using a lighter bat and the dividends are rolling in....Frankie Kovacs, the clown prince of tennis, registered for the draft yesterday and may be on his way soon.

Drops Clothes Basket And Fight Begins

St. Louis, July 2 (AP)—A Negro woman, who had charged a neighbor with assault and battery, took the stand in court yesterday to tell what happened.

"Judge, Your Honor," she said, "it was like this. I was coming up the back stairs and she was coming down with her laundry. She said to me, 'if your little boy throws mud on this wash I'm goin' to whup him. And if I whup him he's not goin' to like it. And if you don't like it I'm going to whup you. And I don't think you're going to like it so we might as well start now'"

"And with that, Judge, she drops the basket and the fight begins."

Acquits Broughton On Murder Count

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, July 2—(CP)—Sir Delves Broughton, 57, was acquitted today of a charge of murder in connection with the death of the Earl of Erroll, heriditary High Constable of Scotland.

The jury deliberated 3 1-2 hours on evidence presented to a colonial court intermittently since mid-March, the longest trial in the history of the colony.

Lord Erroll was found shot through the head in an automobile parked on a moonlit road last Jan. 24 a few hours after he had left a dinner party attended by Sir Delves and Lady Broughton. The Broughtons had been married in December a Durban, South Africa, and came here for their honeymoon.

A police statement read in court early in the trial quoted Sir Delves as saying his wife and the Earl were in love and planned to marry once a divorce could be arranged.

Sir Delves and his bride made a pact before their wedding, the statement said, under which he agreed to leave his wife if they ever had differences. Sir Delves took a "philosophical" attitude toward the attachment between his bride and the Earl when it became known to him the statement said, adding he dropped a note from his bride into Lord Erroll's grave.

Nazi Drive Near Marshes Slows Down

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 2 (AP)— The first great crisis of the Russo-German War is developing in the vital centre of the 2,000-mile front. Both Moscow and Berlin indicate that this is the case, although their claims are otherwise utterly conflicting.

If the Nazi version, recounting new but unspecified victories both north and south of the Pripet marshlands, is accepted at face value, Red Army resistance is already demoralized. A swift German sweep to and beyond the line reached by German-Austrian allies in the first Great War is impending.

Moscow paints a different picture, although admitting retirements. The reports from the Soviet capital suggest that the Russians are withdrawing according to plan, and in orderly fashion, leaving behind, a country laid waste and stripped of everything that could benefit the foe.

Berlin accounts of further Nazi advances in Southeastern Poland, where the direct gateway to the Ukraine lies, tell of such destruction by the retiring Red forces. That of itself indicates that the Berlin version of an already badly demoralized enemy is at least exaggerated. There is also official German testimony of fierce Russian counter-attacks at various points. These reports conflict with Nazi implications that a Red rout is in progress either in the Lwow-Luck area or the Minsk-Smolensk region.

Initial Steam Lost

Only in the Minsk area have Nazi penetrations yet approached the line of 1918 which Russian armies had been driven by the Austro-Germans at the time of Russian capitulation following the Red revolution. That line crossed the Minsk-Smolensk Road at the great eastward bend of the Dnieper River, near Orsha. It spanned Russia from the Gulf of Finland, west of Leningrad, to Rostow on the Don, giving land access to Transcaucasia. All of White Russia and the Ukraine were then in enemy hands, yet Russia was still a powerful foe. She was crippled and by Austro-German incursions, but by internal chaos of which there is yet no intimation in this year.

What actually is taking place ly. There is some indication as this is written, however, that on both fronts the German attack is being slowed down sufficiently to raise a question whether it has not lost much of its initial steam.

The thrust of panzer divisions driven eastward around Minsk, possibly to or beyond the old 1918 final front, still lacks the essential characteristics of a dangerous salient. It is too narrow, probably covering no more than the road itself, and may be subject to attack from either flank.

Broad Base Needed

An intensive Nazi effort to widen that thrust at the base by capture of Minsk is unofficially reported. Hitler headquarters made no claim for Minsk, however, and without a broad base the thrust toward Smolensk is probably incapable of being exploited either in a further sweep toward Moscow or in turning movements right or left.

The Nazis will have a choice if they succeed in widening the drive along the Minsk - Smolensk road sufficiently to rush up supporting infantry and artillery. They could swing southward down the Dnieper to threaten Kiev from the north, as well as the west. That would permit attack from the rear on what appears to be the main Russian army still balking the direct German advance on Kiev and the Ukraine through the Lwow-Luck gateway south of the Pripet marsh lands. Red armies south and south east of the marshes might be thus encircled as well as those eastward along the Bug River in the Bialystok region.

That would seem the most logical Nazi move if the Minsk-Smolensk advance can be maintained and exploited. It would certainly force Russian evacuation of Bessarabia and much if not all of the Ukraine, perhaps to the 1918 Kharkov-Rostov line. Yet on both flanks the Red army still seems holding firmly. Obviously Moscow does not regard the admittedly serious situation in the centre as hopeless or irretrievable.

Mackenzie King Faces Heavy Day Of Inspections

Vancouver, July 2 (CP)—Another day of inspecting Pacific Coast defence works and war industries faced Prime Minister Mackenzie King today as he arrived here from Victoria where he conducted extensive Dominion Day inspections and declared that complete naval units on both coasts would play a major role in making Canada's future a safe one.

Apparently unwearied by his extensive four of naval, army and air establishments at Victoria, Mr. King arrived here by boat this morning and prepared for another busy day before leaving for Edmonton tonight.

This morning he is scheduled to inspect Vancouver defences and visit shipyards where merchant vessels and naval craft are being turned out. Later he will tour elementary flying training school No. 8 at Sea Island and review the airmen being turned out under the Empire Air Training Plan.

To Visit Factory

A visit to an aircraft factory is also scheduled and in the afternoon the Prime Minister will drive to nearby New Westminster for an inspection of the military units and then to Boundary Bay for a visit to No. 18 elementary flying training school, a newly-established centre and one of the largest in Canada.

During his extensive inspections yesterday, the Prime Minister took a serious interest in the Royal Canadian naval barracks at Esquimalt, the new naval college 'Royal Roads' and the officer training school at Gordon Head. He lunched with General R. O. Alexander, Officer Commanding the Pacific command and spent the evening privately before embarking for the mainland.

Future in Their Hands

He told cadets in training as officers at "Royal Roads" that they held Canada's future in their hands and added he was inspired to believe they would not only preserve freedom here but restore it to other countries.

The Prime Minister declared that the naval requirements of the Dominion were now being designed to meet the developments of modern war. Although he did not elaborate his remarks were taken by some to envision a Canadian navy made up of all types of war vessels.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

A SOUND broke the stillness. A sound that caught them all to a momentary paralysis as they listened, straining their ears. It was the unmistakable sound of a motorboat. "Eureka!" Betsy cried sharply. "We're saved. It's the grocery boy with the morning mail and the day's supplies."

"I'd forgotten about him" Tom was halfway through the door even as he spoke. The others rushed after him, leaving only Terry and Bill beside the window, Brooks and Natalie at the other side of the room.

Brooks looked up at Natalie and groaned softly as the sunlight across his eyes made him wince with pain. He grinned at her and said, "I had a heck of a dream—"

"It wasn't a dream, darling. Somebody gave you a terrible blow on the head, and you've been 'out' for hours! It seemed like years," said Natalie huskily, and her hand closed hard over his.

"Oh, yes, I remember—it was because they said you were being held prisoner. They didn't hurt you?"

"Oh, no, darling. They only held me prisoner, along with Tom, to be sure that nothing would interrupt their escape from the island," said Natalie swiftly.

Brooks shut his eyes and there was a line along his jaw that looked as though it had been carved from stone. "I guess I went pretty crazy when I found you were gone. Why did you run out like that? Why didn't you stay with the others"

"I know I should have, darling—forgive me." she pleaded with a humility entirely new to her and to him.

She bent above him, looking into his eyes, and for the first time there were no curtains across her eyes. She had thrown away all pretense; she was letting him look straight into her heart of hearts and read there whatever he wanted to see. She loved him with all her heart. For a little while she had almost lost him, but it hadn't taken that to prove to her how much she loved him. She had known that from the very start. But of course he didn't love her. Love was something old-fashioned and rather stupid, he had said—

"Dearest!" said Brooks unevenly. "Thank the Lord for a sock on the bean—if it makes you look at me like that!"

Natalie bent her head and set her mouth, soft and sweet and faintly tremulous, on his.

In their corner across the room, Terry whispered to Bill, "So help me, I believe it's love."

"And why not, may I ask?" Bill was quite lofty about it.

"I didn't know people as rich as Natalie Schuyler could afford love!" said Terry.

"Snob!" Bill accused her. "She's human, same as you—even is she is a little more intelligent and self-controlled."

Terry nodded soberly. "Sure—if I was as intelligent and as self-controlled as Natalie, I wouldn't have married you—you big lug!" she told him sternly, but the tone of the voice made the epithet a caress. She bent her head and kissed him, her hand holding his so tightly that the cheap little wedding ring cut into his flesh.

The others came trooping back from the pier, and Betsy reported, "Tom's gone to the mainland for a doctor, and to report what happened last night. He'll be back within an hour."

"Thanks to Mrs. Edmonds' very efficient service, I'm not sure we need a doctor," said Bill.

"Oh, yes we do. I've always wanted to be a nurse. Think I'm going to pass up such a swell chance of practicing at home?" said Terry, twisting her fingers lightly in his arm and giving it a not too gentle tug. Terry belonged to the generation that must mask its sentiment behind a rough exterior; but the look in her eyes was shining and tender and very sweet.

Tom made a record trip to the mainland. When he had brought the doctor to the Hacienca, and had introduced the short, stocky, dark man beside him as from the local police, he and the newcomer vanished to the scene of last night's activities.

"This is Mr. Powell," Tom had introduced the man. "He wants to see the swamp where we found that—er—deceased."

"He can have my share of it," said Terry firmly, and Powell looked at her curiously.

"It was Mrs. Mackay who found the man," explained Tom.

"I—stepped on him," explained Terry, and looked a little sick at the memory.

"I see. Rotten experience," said Hugh Powell. "I may have to ask you a few questions later, Mrs. McKay—but I'll try to be as little bother as possible. And now, Forman, if you don't mind—"

"Shall I come along, Forman?" suggested the major with a hint of eagerness.

"Not at the moment, if you don't mind, Major," answered Hugh politely. "Later, I would like to have a little talk with all of you, if I may. But at the moment, I'd rather look over the scene with only Mr. Forman."

Tom led the way along the beach, explaining as he went what had happened. Hugh interrupted now and then with a question that showed Tom he was thinking hard. When they had reached the scene of last night's activities, Hugh prowled about, stepping lightly as a cat, scanning every inch of the ground, for possible clues.

Afterward, the two men sat on a log on the beach and smoked, while Tom explained, a little ashamed, his own reactions.

"Of course I know Morton Blake is a responsible, reputable business man, and it's about the craziest thing in the world to think he could possibly know anything about what happened last night. But he seems so terribly anxious to get control of the island, and I can't imagine why—unless the fact that the island would be a rather good base to use in smuggling aliens into the States," he confessed.

Hugh Powell grinned faintly. "You'd be surprised how many supposedly responsible, reputable business men we've found mixed up in businesses not half as profitable as smuggling aliens," he admitted frankly. "The fact that Markham left a notation in his will that the island was to be used exclusively as a honeymoon retreat for at least five years, or until such time as the United States is no longer in danger of an invasion by a foreign country, sounds as though Markham himself might have had some thought that the island would prove interesting to a foreign country."

Tom looked startled. "Oh—you know about that clause in Mr. Markham's will?"

Hugh grinned and nodded. "I know a good bit about Mr. Markham — and Morton Blake," he agreed cryptically. "I admit the whole set-up sounds pretty fantastic—but that's the dangerous thing about get-ups like these; they sound incredible and fantastic until you begin to realize they're on the level—and by that time it's almost too late to do anything."

"Then you think this island has been used before as a base for smuggling aliens into the United States?" asked Tom curiously.

"I feel so sure of it that I'd like to bet you—" began Hugh, and then cut himself short. "But let that pass for the moment. I'll have to get in touch with my office. I'll be back over this afternoon with a plan for action. In the meanwhile, I think it would be an excellent idea if the crowd of you got some rest. I think you can feel pretty safe from now on. About the safest place for a week or two is the scene of a crime! And after a week or two—" He checked himself again, and as he and Tom walked down to the little pier, and he stepped into the waiting boat, there was a curious expression on the man's dark, squarely-cut fact.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

TOM WENT back to the Hacienda after Hugh's boat had dashed away from the pier. The doctor had finished his job and the grocery boy's boat was waiting to take him to the mainland. Tom had arranged for a boat and a boatman to be hired by the island itself until things adjusted themselves. This boat would arrive later in the morning.

"No serious damage to either gentleman," the doctor explained briskly to Tom. "Mr. Marchbanks will be having a pretty severe headache for a few days. And Mr. McKay's arm will have to be carried in a sling for a couple or three weeks. But barring such minor unpleasantnesses, I think they will be quite all right. I'll come over in the morning for another look at them, if you think best. Or if you need me before then, you'll have your hired boat and can send for me."

Orwin and Lucy walked with the doctor down to the pier and Donald drew Tom aside for a moment.

"I'm on vacation, Forman. But after all, a story is a story. My paper would be darned glad to get one, if I cared to send it in. What do you say? Shall I report this—or let it rest?" he asked.

"Powell's with the FBI," Tom answered. "I believe he'd appreciate it if you'd sort of soft-pedal this for the time being. He'll be back this afternoon, after a conference, no doubt, with his superiors in Washington. He'll tell you whether it would be all right to break the story."

Donald nodded. "That's okey with me. After all, there's not much we could say about what has happened, except that a man was found dead on the island and that some shipwrecked sailors dashed in and stirred things up a bit. The story that is interesting and really big is the one behind what has actually happened."

"Sure," Tom agreed. "And as soon as Powell gives the word, that's the one you can write."

Betsy had sorted the batch of mail that had been brought ashore earlier, and Donald, out of the corner of his eye, saw the flimsy yellow envelope that marked it a telegram in the several envelopes that Betsy handed to June.

Later, as Donald and June walked back to their own cottage, Donald asked idly, though there was a queer look in his eyes, "Anything exciting in the mail?"

June put her hand in the wide pocket of her skirt and handed him two letters. "One with an open-faced envelope," she told him teasingly. "The other is type written. I hope it's business."

Donald grinned and tucked the unopened envelopes into his pocket. He looked down at June's averted face and said, "Is your mother still doing a slow burn?"

"She's not quite so bitter," agreed June evasively, and Donald said no more. But there HAD been a telegram, and he wanted to know what was in it. After all, he told himself grimly, she was his wife and he had a right to know. Anything that concerned her, concerned him.

During the next few hours he made it his business to find that telegram. He didn't stop to feel any shame or compunction for spying on his wife; he was pretty grim about the whole thing. And when eventually he found the telegram, torn across and across, he pieced it together on the top of the small desk in the bedroom while June was busy in the kitchen. He had no difficulty in reading the message.

It had been forwarded from the big, old-fashioned apartment where June and her mother lived, in Washington Heights, too far uptown in New York City to be "smart," and therefore inexpensive. It was from the man who had been for the past five years June's business manager. And it was as explosive as the censorship of Western Union would permit.

"What do you mean you've retired? Nobody with any sense retires at your age, and at your success. Stop. Behave yourself and cut out the marriage talk. Stop. Any silly little ten-dollars-a-week clerk can get married—but you're Jacobi. Stop. Have booked you for one radio appearance Bijou Music Hall at two thousand dollars. Stop. Have movie contract lined up. Stop. You're just beginning to get somewhere. Stop. And you want to retire and get married. Stop. Stop. Stop. You're breaking my heart. Stop. Will expect you in Hollywood one month from today. Stop. And don't cross me up or you'll get the walloping of a lifetime. Stop. And I do mean stop.
Henderson."

Donald stared down at the scraps of paper. Then savagely he crumpled them in his hand and thrust them into his pocket as June called to him from the living room. She looked curiously, almost startled, at his flushed, sullen face as he came out to the lunch she had prepared. But something in his eyes kept her silent.

ment paper and will be tied with red ribbons.

Official advice from Military District No. 3, Kingston, has been received at the city hall, Belleville, that the proclamation of the call to arms will be carried to Belleville by an officer of His Majesty's Service, escorted by an armed party. The party will arrive in front of the city hall steps at one o'clock, D.S.T. on Friday, July 4th.

As Mayor Thompson is out of the city and will not have returned by that time, Alderman Harry J. Clarke who is acting in the absence of the mayor as the civil magistrate, will be Acting Mayor and officiate at the reading of the proclamation from the city hall building.

Acting Mayor Alderman Clarke will have with him members of the city council on this occasion.

It is expected that there will be a large concourse of citizens to witness this unique event which is a modern form of the ancient custom of proclaiming a "call to arms."

powers and the state of affairs among them.

"I feel that a really grave state of emergency is developing before our eyes through the world, particularly in East Asia, with direct concern to our country."

Both Russia and Japan's Axis partners sought clarification of the government announcement. German ambassador Eugen Ott and Italian imbassador Mario Indelli called on Matsuoka immediately after the statement was issued. They were followed by Russian Ambassador Constantin Smetanin.

Goodyear Maintains Earnings in 1941

With letter to shareholders enclosing quarterly dividend cheque, President A. G. Partridge stated:

"While completed reports for the first six months of this year are not available, our total sales and earnings compare very favorably with the same period of 1940.

"The response of the Preferred shareholders in tendering their stock for sale to the Company has made it unnecessary, at this time, to make the call for redemption."

LIVING BONUS

a bonus.

The government proposed by order in council that the basic wages should not be increased and that cost of living increases be taken care of by bonuses and the union had accepted this. The government must keep faith, the Minister said, and insist that the bonus should apply to the higher rates of wages as well as the lower.

No Change in Policy of Government

Mr. McLarty said the cost of living bonus order changes represent no change in government policy, and are designed solely to clarify the original order so there would be no misinterpretation of the government policy regarding war wages of workers.

The original order was passed "to maintain industrial peace during the war by setting a fair standard of wages which took into account any possibility of increases in the cost of living by providing for the payment of cost of living bonuses when such rises occur," the Minister said.

The order directs that wages paid in the 1926-29 period or higher wages paid thereafter be considered fair and reasonable. Where the cost of living bonus is paid, the government order provides it be $1.25 a week for each five per cent rise in the cost of living. There are two exceptions covering male workers under 21 years of age, earning less than 50 cents an hour and women earning less than 50 cents an hour. In these cases the bonus will be equal to one per cent of their basic weekly rate of pay for each one per cent in the rise in the cost of living.

Moderate Policy of Order-in-Council

Mr. McLarty said the bonus order in council set forth "a moderate policy" and "without it there is no possible alternative than complete relaxation of all government controls, whether of wages, prices or rents.

"In that case there could only be one result—rapid rises in wages and in the cost of living without benefit to anyone except the profiteer and finally uncontrollable inflation with all the instability and misery that it brings."

The Labor Minister said the provinces had been consulted as to their co-operation in the bonus policy and support had been indicated. His department would bring the matter before them again in developing a similar policy throughout the country in all cases where the bonus is granted upon application of workers.

Payment of Bonus is Not Mandatory

"The payment of the bonus is not mandatory,". Mr. McLarty said. "We lay down the basis under which any board must apply its payment."

As further industries become engaged in production of war requirements, federal labor policies and the cost of living bonus—where approved—will become applicable in these plants.

Mr. McLarty said that it was estimated an increase of 25 cents a week in the bonus payment was sufficient to meet an increase of one per cent in the lost of living index.

"The government is convinced that without Order in Council P.C. 7440 (the cost of living bonus order) which stabilizes wage rates at a fair and reasonable level and protects wage earners against undue rises in the cost of living, a condition of industrial chaos might very likely occur which would not only seriously impair the war effort of the Canadian people but would impose heavier burdens upon the taxpayer," said the Minister.

Mr. McLarty said that the position of civil servants in respect to the bonus payment would have to be decided by the cabinet committee which deals with civil service matters.

HITLER EXALTS STATE TO PLACE OF RELIGION

Fuehrer Used Human Needs and Desires to Bolster Up Pernicious Nazi Doctrines

Appeal to three fundamental human principles was primarily responsible for Hitler's rise to power, Bertil Forsgren, Swedish pastor now touring the democratic countries after being expelled from Nazi Germany as "Public Enemy No. One" declared here on Monday afternoon.

Speaking to the Belleville Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon, Mr. Forsgren declared it was an "honor" to be declared a public enemy of Hitler.

He charged the book written by Anne Lindbergh, "The Way of the Future" was not what the title implied, but rather it was response to the "way of the past."

Hitler 'Not Way of Future'

Several years spent in Germany prior to and immediately following Hitler's rise, gave him an insight into Hitlerism and what it stood for, the speaker declared. "The things that developed in Germany under Hitler's cruel regime and leadership was not the way of the future," he said, "but response to things of the past."

"It was not only an evil to be crushed as soon as possible," Mr. Forsgren pointed out, "but something must be understood to give the right answer. There must be something behind it—something strong and appealing or hundreds of thousands of people would not respond to it."

Fuehrer Principle Challenge to Democracy

Outstanding in Hitler's principles is that called the "Fuehrer Principle" the speaker said. "It is a challenge to free democracy and to mankind. Human beings want leadership for the desire is laid down in every human heart. If human things believe in God, they naturally are attracted to leadership. They want someone to lead them, someone they can love and respect."

"We as human beings do not live within ourselves but with a responsibility to one another," Mr. Forsgren said. "We are members of the same human body, and have the same natural divine need in us."

Hitler and the State

Hitler knew this, the speaker charged, and roused the German people to merge together, to give themselves to the state.

He understood the need for all for some kind of religion; he appealed to the need in nature for some kind of worship, but he put the state in the place of religion. The former German leaders neglected and refused to regard these three principles, for they were not real leaders. They had a certain form of democratic government, but it was the worst form.

"Democracy without leadership must fall and collapse," he said.

"What we need is to find a way of the future; to find a leader. If we cannot find one let me give you mine, Jesus Christ. We must awaken to the fact that our freedom and liberty are not to make our lives comfortable and easy, but to serve one another better, serving our country in faith and a self-sacrificing manner. If we cannot find the right answer to Hitler democracy is doomed."

Need of Religion

The need of religion is not altogether a form of church and worship, but the deepest highest need to believe in Almighty God, who is more than a God. He is a father and a best friend.

German Christianity understood the need for leadership, and the way of the future, for a few months before Hitler rose to power it attempted a revival. Meetings were held in various cities. But it was not enough. "The need today is a personal challenge to God, not to doctrines, as a friend and leader.

British Liberty

"We do not realise in Canada what a grace of God it is to live under the glorious Union Jack," Mr. Forsgren said, in conclusion. "It is the wonderful symbol of liberty. If you ever spent any time under the Swastika you would thank God for such a flag and for what it stands for. God Save the King. God Bless the British Empire and the Union Jack."

The speaker was introduced by Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck, while Club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian J. R. Pickering.

ADVANCE FORCES

Fall Into Entanglements

There were reports here that steel spearheads the Nazis drove into the Minsk area had fallen into entanglements. This was not elaborated officially.

(The Nazis claimed the capture of Riga, old Latvian capital, in a march northeast toward Leningrad; reported Nazi speed troops had reached the Berezina River southeast of Minsk, and said other advances were continuing into the Ukraine on both sides of Lwow.)

The Russian communique made no mention of fighting in the direction of Bobruisk, on the Berezina River in the heart of White Russia, to which earlier war bulletins had referred.

Fierce Russian resistance was reported in the far north where the Red army was said to be standing off a push by numerically-superior Nazi forces from Finninsh territory toward Russiubjs, ice-free port of Murmansk.

The communique said Russian counter attacks and a tight defence frustrated several attempts to break through the Karelian Isthmus line toward Leningrad from Finland.

Red army forces pitted against another push in the direction of Leningrad "engaged in stubborn fighting against enemy tanks and infantry, frustrating their attempts to penetrate towards the crossing over the western Dvina." The river cuts through the centre of Latvia from Dvinsk to Riga Bay.

On the southern flank of the front the Red army, while acknowledging withdrawal from Lwow, claimed that a strong Nazi drive toward the Ukraine through the Luck area had been stopped after days of fighting.

WAVES OF PLANES

Warships Straddled

Both the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, 26,000-ton German battleships, are in Brest and have been straddled several times by British raiders. It is believed they have suffered such serious damage that they cannot be moved.

These recently were joined, according to reports, by a 10,000-ton Hipper class cruiser, presumably the Prinz Eugen, which was heavily damaged in the sea battle in which her raiding partner, the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck, was sunk.

Frisian Islands Attacked

The Air Ministry statement that fighter command aircraft carried out the blasting of Nazi airdromes raised a question as to whether the R.A.F. is equipping its Spitfires and Hurricanes with bomb racks.

Of previous operations a communique said that on the night of June 30 an enemy fighter was shot down by a British bomber.

In addition, it was confirmed today that in an engagement between R.A.F. bombers and Nazi fighters off the German Frisian Islands in daylight Tuesday, a total of three enemy fighters were destroyed.

Yesterday, British bombers smashed at the German northwest coast by daylight for the second successive day, and several squadrons roared over northern France during the day and last night. Few Nazi planes were sighted.

Railway Yard Hit

In the Frisian attack bombs were seen to burst among hangars and other buildings of a seaplane base. A railway yard near Oldenburg, not far from Germany's North Sea coast, was bombed and fires started. Barges were machine-gunned in a nearby canal.

During the raids on France, the English coast trembled from the concussion of bombs bursting. English coast residents said the sky was filled for hours with the steady roar of British aircraft.

Ottawa, July 2 (CP)—Creation of a new organization to handle refugee interns in Canada separate from the interment operations branch which will continue responsibility for combatant prisoners of war and other civilian internees, was announced today by Hon. Pierre Casgrain, Secretary of State.

A statement from Mr. Casgrain says that several hundred of the civilian prisoners brought to Canada from Great Britain for confinement and designated refugee internees have now been returned to Great Britain and the remainder can be accommodated in four or five camps.

ed attacks across the frontier into Russia from central and northern Finland. No details in this apparently developing battle were given, however.

Heavy losses through air attack on Russian forces retreating eastward from Lwow, Minsk and into Estonia were claimed by the High Command. On the Galician front, at the other end of the main thrust into Russia through the Bialystok-Minsk sector, it said Hungarian forces attacking through Carpathian mountain passes had "joined the German attack on schedule."

Almost 200 miles beyond the White Russian capital of Minsk on the road to Moscow, the Germans claimed, the rail junction town of Smolensk was under heavy aerial bombardment.

A military spokesman claimed Monday that advance units were within sight of Smolensk, but the High Command so far has said only that German troops reached the Berezina River, less than a thi the way from Minsk to Smo

Following Retreat

To the south, between the Pri marshes and the Carpathians, t German army, aided by Slova forces, was following up a Russia retreat into the Ukraine, the High Command claimed. It reported advances into the Soviet breadbasket by columns north and south of captured Lwow.

The High Command claimed Nazi forces striking northeast through the Baltic States moved into Riga Monday after pushing up from Lifau, 40 miles southeast, and crossing the Dvina River at many places from Riga Bay to Dvinsk.

Advance forces were said to have thrust on from the north bank of the river, while the air force hammered at the Russian town of Pskov and positions near Peipus Lake, between Estonia and Russia. The Germans claimed the Reds falling back to this area for another stand in defence of Leningrad.

Interest was aroused in Berlin by the High Command's report of air force activity off Fisher Peninsula, north of Murmansk, and of the bombing of the harbor of thise ice-free Russian port north of the Arctic Circle.

The High Command claimed a Russian destroyer was sunk and another damaged severely there.

It was at Murmansk in October, 1939, when Germany and Russia were friendly, that Germany's blue-ribbon liner, the Bremen, and a score of other German ships were hidden until they could slip quietly back into German waters.

relenting determination that never shall we flag—or fail—or falter in this conflict."

Mr. Churchill welcomed this assurance and added: "The end may be far off. We cannot tell. It depends on the enemy. How long he will resist we cannot tell. How long that wicked man will torture and afflict nations, how often or in what direction he will set his murder machine in motion, we cannot tell."

The torch, symbolic of the success of Canada's $600,000,000 victory Loan last month, will be kept at the Prime Minister's official residence.

An interested spectator at this ceremony was Hon. C. G. Power, Canadian Air Minister, who flew the Atlantic Monday night and landed early yesterday at a northern port.

In a press interview Mr. Power said he is here to consider problems hinging on the extension of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, particularly the matter of ensuring sufficient training planes.

Peterson and Davoud didn't know it until later, but the Atlantic battle in which the Bismarck was sunk was being fought at the time they were making their crossing. "We didn't see a thing," Peterson said. "Not even a Messerschmitt."

Peterson, actively flying with the R.C.A.F. since 1935, was in Calgary for six months before going to Trenton to take charge of the C. F. S. Davoud and Lipton were assistant chief flying instructors at Trenton.

Davoud has been here before, for three years with an R.A.F. fighter squadron. Lipton has been on instruction duties for the last two years.

The Canadians were posted to an operational training unit when they arrived here. They expect soon to go to night fighter stations.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The transfer of General Sir Archibald Wavell from the Middle East to India, and his replacement by General Sir Claude Auchinleck, go without official explanation in London. Speculation ranges from the possibility greater tasks await the victor of Cerenaica in New Delhi to rumors the commander-in-chief has been removed under fire.

In the criticism that followed the loss of Eastern Libya to German armored forces and the evacuation of Greece and Crete, Gen. Wavell largely escaped personal blame, but as the commander-in-chief receives credit for the victories of his armies so he must shoulder the resonsibility for defeats, whether or not the mistakes can be traced to him.

The most forceful critic of the direction of affairs in the Middle East has been Australia. This was particularly true after the Greek and Crete campaigns, in which the Australian forces lost heavily because of inadequate air support and numerical inferiority in the field.

Argued for Advance

In Australian circles in London it is said that last Winter Australian staff officers advised Gen. Wavell against his defensive dispositions after the Army of the Nile overran Cirenaica, apparently arguing for extension of the advance across Tripoli. Gen. Wavell is said to have replied that the 300 miles of desert between his army and the Axis forces in Tripoli would hold any advance to small proportions.

But this, if the reports are true, was a professional difference of opinion and not of much concern to the general public. But when the Australians and New Zealanders, together with United Kingdom forces, had to fight two unequal battles in the space of a few weeks, demands were voiced in Australia that adequate air support be assured before Australian forces again went into battle.

The commander-in-chief also will be relieved of much of the political responsibility of his widespread command by the appointment of Oliver Lyttleton to represent the war cabinet in the Middle East. Gen. Wavell had a political department in his headquarters, with high officials in advistory capacities. Henceforth Mr. Lyttleton will assume these responsibilities.

VICHY REPORTS BEIRUT ATTACK

Says British Aerial Bombardment One of Most Intense During War

Vichy, France, July 2 (AP)—Military circles said today the Lebanese capital of Beirut was attacked uninterruptedly last night in one of the most intense British aerial bombardments since the war spread to the Levant States. Extent of damage was not disclosed.

Beirut, Lebanon, July 2 (AP) — Vichy mandate officials today addressed a protest to the United States government against what was described as "terroristic" British bombardments of Beirut.

The Lebanon protest was handed to the United States Consul with a request that it be transmitted to Washington and eventually to London.

British raids on Beirut since Sunday night were believed responsible for the protest. Last night four heavy raids occurred.

Loses Life in Lake Despite Efforts Of His Companion

Kincardine, Ont., July 2 (CP) — After a four-hour struggle with cold and rough waters of Lake Huron off Kincardine, Rolston MacLeod, 29-year-old Kincardine man, lost his life despite the effort of his companion, Kenneth Ivison, also of Kincardine, to hold him on their overturned boat.

A sudden squall capsized the little dinghy which MacLeod had built and sailed for several years. The two climbed atop the craft, believing they could be seen from the pier.

When help was not coming as darkness settled down they started swimming to shore, hanging on to the boat.

A quarter mile from shore MacLeod was overcome by cold and lost his grasp on the boat. Ivison clutched him and held him for an hour, but he slipped away again.

Ivison lost the boat as he neared shore and swam to safety.

TURKS PRACTISE OPERATIONS ACROSS THE BOSPORUS

Istanbul, July 1 (Delayed)—(AP)—The Turkish army and navy are practising transporting infantry and motorized units across the Bosporus from the European to the Asiatic side of Turkey, simulating a retreat from Thrace and the rest of European Turkey. Such a retreat from the European side, observers commented, would amount to abandonment of control of the Dardanelles.

POLICE BLOTTER

Belleville and district celebrated the Dominion Day holiday without serious crime or motor accidents marring the Confederation commemoration.

A mail box was knocked off a post at the intersection of West Bridge and Dunbar Streets last evening. P.C. Taylor investigated, and reported the mail box must have been struck by the protruding platform of a truck. The box was placed in its accustomed position by the Post Office Department today.

Claims Tires Slashed

Oscar Moldover told police yesterday some mischievous person had slashed the tires of his truck with a knife. The vehicle was parked in an alleyway leading into his place of business at 51 Station St. when the destruction was made.

Dr. A. C. Locke complained that the anchor of his sailing craft had been stolen at the harbour some time over the week-end. The sailing craft was anchored to a buoy, the boat's anchor being taken from the craft.

Bicycle License Reported Stolen

Stewart Newman, 296 Charles St. reported the theft of his bicycle license to the police yesterday.

Detective Fred Isard was seeking the identity of a member of the R.C.A.F., stationed at Trenton, who is wanted for questioning in a serious matter, that implicated the man with a 15-year-old girl. Chief Kidd stated there was no report to be given out in the matter at this time, however.

E. C. Moynes, 31 West Bridge St. complained to police that lawn ornaments were being stolen at night from his premises. The ornaments disappear after the family retire, Mr.Moynes stated.

Roosevelt Turns Back Plant to the Owners

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2—(AP)—President Roosevelt turned back to the owners today the North American Aviation Company plant at Inglewood, California.

The government took over the plant on June 9 and troops moved in, after a strike had held up production of warplanes.

Mr. Roosevelt said in a statement that he had determined that the plant would be privately operated in a manner consistent with the needs of National defence, and had signed an executive order terminating government control.

He warned, however, that "should efforts be made again to interfere with this essential production, it will not hesitate to take whatever steps may hereafter be necessary to assure its continuance."

FUGITIVE NAZI PRISONER SHOT

Lieut. Martin Mueller Resists Arrest, Brandished Club at Camp Guard and Lieutenant

Schreiber, Ont., July 2 (CP) —An unidentified railroad worker received credit today for the tip which put guards on the trail of an escaped prisoner of war who, when he resisted capture and attacked guards, was shot to death.

The prisoner, Lieut. Martin Mueller, a Nazi airman, escaped from a camp for officer prisoners in this northwestern Ontario area Sunday night and was overtaken late Monday.

Armed with a three-foot birch club he tried to pounce on a camp guard and a Lieutenant Leary when they asked his identity. The servicemen hit him twice in vital spots with bullets from their revolvers as he brandished his club.

Fourth escaped Nazi war prisoner to be shot and killed in Canada while resisting recapture, Mueller crumpled to the ground, killed instantly by the two revolver slugs. One ripped through his arm and into his breast. The other pierced his neck.

Internment authorities said they overtook him about 21 miles from the camp and gave credit to a railway trainman for putting them on the trail so rapidly.

The trainman reported seeing a man hiding in a culvert and guards immediately converged on this area. The lieutenant and his accompanying guard spotted the man crouching low in a rock cut about 50 feet from Lake Superior.

Had Stolen Rowboat

Later guards discovered a rowboat the man stole and used to get out to Lake Superior after fleeing the internment camp. He travelled some 20 miles along the lake in the boat and then came in to shore, apparently hoping to board a passing freight train and get clear away from the wilderness area about the camp.

Mueller was the 62nd. Nazi war prisoner to escape from prison guards in Canada since hostilities started. Two were killed resisting arrest last April and another was killed under similiar circumstances last October. Only one prisoner, Baron Franz Von Werra, who managed to reach the United States, has retained his freedom.

Woman Burned In Toronto Fire

Toronto, July 2 (CP)—One woman was severely burned and another injured in a fire which broke out in rooming house on Gerrard Street in midtown Toronto today. Two women were rescued from the flames, while two other women leaped to safety from a bedroom window.

The injured are Miss Marcel Cheynie, severly burned about the face, neck and arms, and Mrs. A. Ferguson, who injured her arms and legs when she jumped 20 feet from a first floor window.

An unidentified passerby smashed open the front door and carried Miss Cheynie to safety while a neighbor, A. Tripp, rescued Mrs. F. Craig and her daughter, Frances, 13, who were trapped on the third floor.

Mrs. Ferguson, the landlady, said her little dog, Tiny, aroused her and one of the roomers aided in lowering her out of the window and she dropped the rest of the way.

Police said the cause of the fire was unknown and it was confined to Miss Cheynie's bedroom.

Wavell Beloved By Egyptians

Cairo, July 2—(AP)—First reaction here to Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's transfer to India was of regret since he enjoys in Egypt respect and affection that no other personality has possessed in recent times.

He is credited with a big part in influencing public opinion in the Middle East in favor of the Allies.

Say Sextuplets Born in 1866, Four Grew Up

Silver Lake, N.Y., July 2—(CP)—The birth of sextuplets in 1866 at Chicago, an event apparently not recorded in medical authorities was claimed today in a rather mysterious statement by Mrs. Alincia Bushnell Parker, who said she is the last of the six to survive.

Mrs. Parker asserted the sextuplets were born Sept. 8, 1866. She said she had just received word of the death of her sister, Mrs. Alice Elizabeth Hughes of Flagstaff, Ariz.

She said four of the Bushnell babies grew to adulthood. Lucy died at the age of two months and Laberto at eight months. She said Norberto died in Buffalo, N.Y., in 1934 and Alberto died about a year later in Albion, N.Y.

Mrs. Parker said the birth of the sextuplets was kept secret, even from the four children who grew up, until their mother revealed it to them on her deathbed. The births were registered, she said, in Chicago by the attending physician, Dr. James Edwards.

Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bushnell of Chicago, she said.

At the time the Dionne Quintuplets were born at Callander, Ont., in March, 1934, medical authorities said there was no previous record of quintuplets having survived more than a few hours. There apparently was no record at all of the birth of sextuplets.

Navy Secretary Not Going Back On His Address

Washington, July 2 (AP)— Navy Secretary Knox flatly stated today that no United States vessels on Atlantic parols had engaged in convoying, had become involved in combat, had suffered any loss of life in their crews or any loss of equipment.

The navy chief also was interrogated about criticism in Congress of his demand this week that the United States seize on the present moment to sweep 'the German menace" from the Atlantic. The Secretary declined to reply to the criticisms or to say whether the speech in which he made the demand had presidential or cabinet approval.

When asked whether it would "be fair to say you are sticking by your guns on the speech," Knox boomed: "Yes, of course."

Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Montana), chief of the Isolationists, said yesterday that Knox should be removed from office for making such a speech.

R. A. F. BOMBERS SMASH AT RUHR, RHINELAND

Nazi Spearheads Blocked Around Borisov, Bobruisk

Enemy Repeatedly Attempted to Cross Brezina River But Frustrated by Counter-Attacks

VIOLENT FIGHTING

Moscow, July 3 (AP)—The vanguard of Moscow-bound German invaders was reported by the Russian High Command today to have been thrown back in repeated attempts to cross the Beresina River where in 1812 the waters were reddened by the blood of Napoleon's men under harassed retreat from the Russian capital.

Nearly 300 miles to the south of Borisov, where the battle of the Berezina centred, the Red army also was reported to have halted in "a heavy defeat" a mechanized Nazi advance toward Shepetovka; some 20 miles inside the old border of the Ukraine on the road to Kiev.

Other parts of the Ukraine invasion force were said to have attempted a break-through to the south toward Tarnopol, east of Lwow and south of Luck, still in the Ukraine's Polish buffer zone. These forces apparently had veered southward from Luck.

Advance Stemmed

"Throughout the whole night our troops in heavy fighting stemmed the advance of enemy troops," a communique said.

"Fighting continues by our air force, which shot down 61 enemy planes in air combats through July 2. We lost 26 aircraft."

Thus, according to the latest Russian communique, two major battles raged on this, the 12th day of the Russian-German struggle — near Borisov, 400 miles from Moscow on the Minsk-Moscow motor road, and in the Shepetovka-Tarnapol region, some 200 miles from Kiev.

It appeared that the full force of the Germans had not yet reached the "bloody Berezina" at Borisov, for the Red High Command made a point of saying only that "advanced detachments" had tried to cross the river.

Claim of Crossing Denied

(In Berlin it was claimed German advance units had crossed the Berezina on the way to Smolensk.)

Last night, the communique said, Red troops and motorized forces of the Germans fought fiercely in the Borisov area. It was to Borisov on Nov. 26, 1812, that the main body of Napoleon's army retreated, close upon the heels of an engineer force which struggled deep in the icy water to lay a bridge of escape from the slashing attacks of a victorious Russian army. The Russians destroyed the bridge at Borisov before the French could use it.

(Presumably the modern bridge likewise has been destroyed by the Red army.)

Hitler's Headquarters Claim 'Unimaginable Chaos' Has Broken Over the Red Armies

CLAIMS LOSSES SMALL

Berlin, July 3 (AP)—The German High Command claimed today that the resistance of the Red army "appears to have been broken" and that an attack is under way on the entire front from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea.

The Prut River, boundary between Rumania and Soviet Bessarabia, has been crossed by German-Rumanian forces driving from Moldavia, the war bulletin claimed.

"While hitherto the Soviet Russian leadership apparently tried to catch the German advance near the border and start its own offensive" the communique asserted. "it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken.

"Backward movements of the enemy have become apparent on the entire front. The destructive battle east of Bialystok, in general, is concluded. As already announced in a special report, its effects are of world importance."

The earlier special communique had claimed that "unimaginable chaos" had broken over the Red armies in the Bialystok area.

Claim 160,000 Captured

Hitler's headquarters claimed that from June 22 to July 1 more than 160,000 Russians had been captured. The communique said the Russians offered stiff resistance and made desperate attempts to break out of encirclements only to lose many times as many men as those taken prisoner.

German losses were termed "gratifyingly small." No figures were revealed.

During the same period, it was claimed 5,774 tanks, 2,330 guns, four armored trains and 4,725 planes were destroyed or captured.

Dienst Aus Deutschland told its readers Nazi "speed troops" were "progressing in a dash past Lwow" and that the Pripet marshes had been left behind. These troops have as their objective, Dienst said, the city of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

On the Baltic front commentators claimed the Nazis had crossed the Dvina River leaving broken parts of Russian forces behind.

Want British Farmers To Plow Additional 2,000,000 Acres

London, July 3 (CP)—Agriculture Minister R. S. Hudson called on British farmers today to plow an additional 2,000,000 acres of land to bring up to 6,000,000 the United Kingdom's food production acreage.

Mr. Hudson said he wanted as "much land as humanly possible" plowed and sown this fall and added "we want a great deal more wheat and beans."

Next spring, he said, "we must increase our acreage of potatoes and increase the sugar beet crop to the maximum sugar factories can deal with."

Construction of Air Raid Shelters In Ontario Under Consideration

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—Plans for construction of air raid shelters in Ontario are under consideration by the Civilian Defence Committee, Attorney General Conant, chairman of the Committee, said today, adding that Ontario must await Ottawa's direction as to policy.

"We're discussing with Ottawa the whole question of works and equipment," Mr. Conant said. "Air raid shelters come under works and equipment."

Other matters included in this heading, Mr. Conant said, are fire-fighting equipment, demolition equipment, first aid, warning signal systems, mechanization and transport including ambulances.

"It is necessary for us to develop plans for the provision of air raid shelters so that they can be made effective in a short time if they become necessary."

Questions as to whether to construct shelters within buildings or underground and payment of cost will be determined between Federal and Provincial governments and the municipalities.

The provincial committee meets again on Tuesday when the issues will be discussed, Mr. Conant said.

CANADA'S MIGHTY NEW CONTINGENT TAKEN TO CAMPS

Largest Number of Men Sent to Britain in This War at One Time Have Uneventful Crossing

LIVE UNDER CANVAS

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, July 3—(CP Cable)—Canada's mighty new contingent of troops, the largest sent to this war, were scattered today to a score of Canadian camps in England and Scotland by long lines of troop trains, which took them from the debarkation port.

Bereted soldiers of the army tank brigade, first such outfit to be raised in the Dominion, streamed into the tented camps where they will shortly receive tanks and armored vehicles for their final brush-up training before taking an operational role with the Canadian corps.

Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, corps commander, plans to visit the brigade soon to see the crack troopers commanded by Brig. F. F. Worthington who is living under

TWO SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

Accused Thank Attorney General for Fair and Impartial Trial

Charlottetown, July 3 (CP) — Frederick Phillips, 29, and Earl Lund, 25, were sentenced to be hanged Aug. 20 by Mr. Justice A. C. Saunders today for the murder of Peter J. Traynor, 78-year-old shopkeeper, in his store Jan. 30. They drew the first death sentences of the 20th century on Prince Edward Island.

The two Charlottetown men were convicted of murder last Saturday by a Supreme Court jury.

Both men were calm today when Mr. Justice Saunders read the death sentence.

Asked if they had anything to say, Phillips maintained his innocence and added there was nothing to say that could turn the course of events. He thanked Attorney General Thane A. Campbell for providing counsel and Mr. Justice Saunders for a fair and impartial trial.

Lund thanked the Attorney General and Mr. Justice Saunders and also said he was innocent.

Mr. Justice Saunders said he was convinced of the guilt of the two men and suggested that they make a full confession so that others would realize that "crime doesn't pay on Prince Edward Island."

OCCUPANTS RESCUED

Toronto, July 2 (CP)—A training plane of the Royal Norwegian Air Force plunged into Toronto Bay today, but both occupants of the ship were rescued. It is believed that the plane was forced down by engine trouble.

Rescue craft rushed to the aid of the two men who were clinging to the plane, which later sank.

'Scorched Earth' Policy And Guerilla Warfare Advocated by Stalin

Moscow, July 3 (AP) — Premier Joseph Stalin called upon the Russian people today to meet the advancing German armies with a vast "scorched earth" policy and with universal guerilla warfare.

He warned his people they were menaced by "a grave danger" and acknowledged that already Hitler's troops have captured Lithuania, most of Latvia, Western White Russia and part of the Western Ukraine.

But, he added, it was recognized at home and abroad "that ours is a just cause, that the enemy will be defeated, that we are bound to win."

Stalin, making one of his rare speeches, attributed Nazi successes thus far "to the fact that the war of Fascist Germany on the U. S. S. R. began under conditions favorable for German forces and unfavorable for Soviet forces."

Lays Down Rules

Speaking in his role as chairman of the new defence committee, a post he only recently assumed, Stalin laid down these rules for fighting:

"In case of a forced retreat of Red army units, all rolling stock must be evacuated, the enemy must not be left a single engine, a single railway car, not a single pound of grain or a gallon of fuel.

"Collective farmers must drive off all their cattle and turn over their grain to the safe-keeping of state authorities for transportation to the rear. All valuable property including non-ferrous metals, grain and fuel which cannot be withdrawn must without fail be destroyed.

"In areas occupied by the enemy, guerilla units, mounted and foot, must be formed, diversionist groups must be organized to combat enemy troops, to foment guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, roads, damage telephone and telegraph lines and to set fire to forests, stores and transports."

PACIFIC DEFENCE AND INDUSTRIES PLEASE MR. KING

Prime Minister Silent on Urgings for Action Looking Towards Conscription

PRAISES TRAINING PLAN

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver, July 3.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today travelled eastward after three full days inspecting the Pacific Coast defence and industrial establishments which, he told The Canadian Press, "pleased me beyond all words".

The Prime Minister remained silent on urgings which came before him in Vancouver for action looking foward conscription for overseas service, but was outspoken in expression of satisfaction with what he had seen.

If there were any misgivings among the people of Canada regarding this country's war effort, there was now no basis for them, he said when he opened an elementary air training school at Boundary Bay, near here.

Satisfied With Canada's Effort

What he had seen in and about Vancouver and Victoria had satisfied him as to what Canada was doing and could do in the war effort, Mr. King said.

At the flying school, Mr. King declared his belief that the Commonwealth Air Training Plan would be one of the decisive forces in winning the war.

Throughout the Vancouver trip the Prime Minister's party, which included several carloads of newspaper reporters and cameramen, was escorted by motorcycle police and a radio-equipped police car manned by plainclothesmen.

Included in the party at all times was Maj.-Gen. R. O. Alexander, officer commanding Pacific Command and other officers of the army, navy and air force.

Journey Through Rocky Mts

Today the Prime Minister will travel through the Rocky Mountains to Edmonton which he will reach late this evening. He will address a joint luncheon meeting of Service Clubs and other organizations at Edmonton tomorrow and is expected to make some further comments on demands which have reached him in both Calgary and Vancouver for conscription for overseas service.

8,000,000 POUNDS ONTARIO TOBACCO GOES TO ENGLAND

Will be Shipped in Next 12 Months Providing Shipping Space Available

PRICE T OBE SET

Ottawa, July 3 (CP)—The Department of Trade and Commerce announced today that United Kingdom authorities have agreed to import 8,000,000 pounds of Canadian tobacco in the next 12 months, "provided the necessary shipping space is available."

The announcement said "it is anticipated" shipments will not commence before September.

The 8,000,000 pounds will be allotted by United Kingdom authorities in "proportion to their purchases of Canadian tobacco in former years," the announcement said.

Arrangements for purchase will be made by importers through connections in Canada.

In the 1939-40 crop area the United Kingdom also agreed to take 8,000,000 pounds of tobacco from Canada.

Prices to be paid for the tobacco will be a "matter of negotiation between the parties concerned," a department spokesman said.

Shipments will be made from accumulated Canadian stocks.

Italian Hospital Ship Detained, Being Used By British Admiralty

London, July 3 (CP)—The British government has announced that an Italian hospital ship intercepted off Aden will be detained and used for a minimum period of six months to replace a British hospital ship damaged by enemy action, the British Broadcasting Corporation reports.

BBC reported that last year the government protested to the enemy against 31 deliberate and flagrant attacks on hospital ships, all marked in accordance with The Hague convention.

The government now stated it is not prepared to tolerate any such violations of the convention which received the signatures of both Germany and Italy.

Hitler Checks Communiques.

Berlin, July 3 (AP)—A Nazi spokesman said today all communiques of the German high command are "checked over personally and often re-worded" by Hitler.

A general draft of the past day's military events is handed to Hitler by an adjutant and he decides what is to be made known, the spokesman said.

(This probably explains the grandiose phrases such as "world historic importance" and "unimaginable chaos" that have been appearing in the Nazi communiques during the Russian campaign.)

'BRITAIN HOLDS SEAS, BEGINNING TO HOLD THE AIR'

New British Middle East Command Declares Might of India Steadily Growing

FAITH IN VICTORY

London, July 3 (CP)—Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, new British Middle East Commander, considers a Nazi victory over Russia and a possible break-through into eastern Asia of little consequence because "we hold the seas and I feel we are beginning to hold the air, too."

Sir Claude expressed his opinion in a farewell speech as Commander in Chief in India, it was reported here today.

"The might of India is growing at an ever-increasing pace, side by side with that of other members of our Commonwealth of Nations," Sir Claude said.

"As to the future I view it with increasing confidence and unshakeable belief in our ultimate victory. I have never tried to hide my opinion that there are hard and anxious times ahead, but I see signs that the tide is turning, be it ever so slowly."

"One hears arguments and demands that India's fighting forces should be concentrated in India so as to be able to defend her as and when the enemy comes knocking at her gates," Sir Claude said.

Attack Enemy Wherever He is

"This is the surest way to court defeat and disaster utter and complete. All history proves it. The enemy must be kept at a distance and must be attacked wherever he is.

"The further from India we can send our troops, our ships and our aircraft, the more secure will we be. The best defence is attack and attack we must and will."

MEMORIAL STILL STANDING

London, July 3 (C.P. Cable) — The Air Ministry news service today quoted a 22-year-old Canadian pilot from Saskatchewan as saying on his return from a Royal Air Force fighter command sweep over northern France that the Canadian memorial at Vimy Ridge is still standing.

The memorial was reported damaged during the German invasion of France last year.

SEVERAL RECEIVE WINGS

Moncton, N.B., July 3 (CP) — Graduates of No. 8 Advanced Training School, Royal Canadian Air Force, received their wings at simple ceremonies today.

All those graduating held the rank of sergeant. The list included: F. G. Fellows, Sarnia, Ont.; A. R. Deeks, Iroquois, Ont.; J. M. Howey, Exeter, Ont., and W. E. N. Honey, Exeter, Ont., and W E. N. Field, Picton, Ont.

Japanese Ship Carrying Cargo to U.S. Ordered Not to Proceed to Destination

Manila, July 3 (AP)—The Tabacalera company of Manila was notified today that the Japanese merchantman Kysuyu Maru, carrying cargo from the Philippines to the United States, has been requisitioned by the Japanese government and ordered not to proceed to its destination.

Manila shipping quarters expressed the opinion that the Japanese government might be preparing to requisition all Japanese ships operating between the Philippines, Japan and the United States.

Reports circulating in reliable Manila quarters said the Japanese government had ordered all ships in Philippine waters to return immediately to their home ports.

The Japanese consul general said he had heard the reports but had no official confirmation of them.

The advices from Kobe said the Kysuyu Maru had been halted at that Japanese port and the cargo discharged there "at the risk and expense of the owners of the shipments."

Cargo for United States

Officials at the Tabacalera Company, local agents for the vessel, said no reason was given for the action. They said the ship was carrying coconut oil, hemp and chrome ore, all materials essential to the United States defence program. It also carried sugar.

Reliable sources said the Japanese merchantman Noziba Maru, anchored in Manila Bay, would be ordered to unload its cargo of 6,000 tons of chrome ore consigned to the United States and then sail to its home port.

Philippine shippers fear trade between the United States and the Philippines will be practically halted if all the Japanese ships are requisitioned by Tokyo.

Using Japanese Vessels

They pointed out shippers have been using Japanese vessels for much of the cargo consigned to the United States.

It was reported the Bordeaux Maru is now on its way to Kobe with chrome ore for the United States and will be ordered to unload when it reaches the Japanese port

Some close observers said they believed the Japanese government action was in retaliation for the recent order applying the United States export control licensing system to the Philippines.

Japanese ships now are permitted to carry essential defence materials to the United States but so far they are not licensed to take out coconut oil, chrome ore or hemp from Japan.

3 British Tanks Lead Column Into Syrian City

Palmyra One of Strong Points of Resistance Occupied After Barrage

VICHY ADMITS LOSS

Jerusalem, July 3 —(CP) —It was officially announced tonight that Palmyra surrendered at 3:30 this afternoon.

Vichy, France, July 3—(AP)—The Vichy Government acknowledged tonight that Palmyra, one of the strong points of resistance to the Allied invasion of Syria, had fallen.

A communique said that the place was occupied at 1 a.m., after an artillery barrage. A British column pointed by three tanks entered the town, it was said.

(A Jerusalem dispatch placed the surrender at 3:30 p.m.)

Italian General At Debra Tabor Willing to Quit

One of the Last Strongholds of Resistance in Ethiopia Taken by British Forces

Cairo, July 3—(AP)—The Italian commander at Debra Tabor, one of the last strongholds of Italian resistance in Ethiopia, has agreed to surrender with about 4,200 men, Middle East Headquarters announced today.

It said the terms were the same as those imposed on the Duke of Aosta, Viceroy of Ethiopia, when he capitulated May 19 at Amba Alaji and was compelled to surrender all his men and equipment except officers' small arms.

Debra Tabor is in Northwest Ethiopia, just east of Lake Tana.

The 4,200 men who thus fall to the British forces include about 3,000 Italians and 1,200 African troops.

3 NAZI CITIES SET AFIRE BY R. A. F. BOMBING

Britain Continues 'Round-Clock' Offensive Against German War Facilities

SUPPLY SHIP HIT

London July 3 (CP)—Masses of Royal Air Force planes, keeping up relentless day and night assaults on Germany and Nazi-occupied territory, launched what appeared to be another major daylight attack across the Channel today.

While fighter planes scoured the air and water to clear the way British bombers sped over Northern France following up overnight attacks which were concentrated on the German cities of Cologne, Duisberg and Bremen. Large fires broke out in industrial sections of these cities.

R.A.F. fighters skimmed over the Channel at terrific speed evidently on the lookout for Nazi surface vessels as they returned from a foray over France just before large formations of bombers and guardian fighters headed out from the English south coast.

The night attack on Bremen, often-bombed Nazi port and shipbuilding centre was particularly heavy, the Air Ministry said. Also attacked overnight were docks at Cherbourg in occupied France and Nazi oil storage tanks in Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

George N. Spencer, Frankford's Ex-Reeve, Now Flying Officer

Prominent business man and a lifelong resident of the village of Frankford, Ex-Reeve George N. Spencer has offered his services to his country and will report to the Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Pool in Toronto on July 10th.

Mr. Spencer has been given the rank of Flying Officer and will assume his duties as a flying instructor shortly after reporting for duty.

He takes with him an enviable flying record, and a background of instructional experience that should stand him in good stead in his new environment. For the past ten years he has been doing solo flying and took two years intermittent instruction before going in the air alone.

Air-minded since a youngster, it was about twelve years ago when he decided to find out for himself what this flying business was all about. He joined the Kingston Flying Club in 1929 and immediately delved deep into the mysteries of piloting an airplane. Methodical to an extreme, quick to learn, he soon mastered the "stick," but he made sure of himself and took two years' instruction before attempting solo flights.

Since his first flight he has flown consistently for the past ten years. His confidence in himself has never been shaken and he is regarded as one of the best civilian pilots ever turned out by the Kingston Club. He is a chartered member of that organization and for some time was honored with a position on its board of directors.

Flying Officer Spencer enjoys a well-merited popularity in both his native village and his county. He has acted as town councillor for some time and for a year was given the reeveship. He sat on the County Council during that period and in that time proved himself an able and efficient representative of his community.

Rotary Karnival Promises Five Days' Hilarious Fun

Entertainment of High Calibre Features Queen City Shows — Starts Friday, July 4th

FOR CRIPPLED KIDDIES

Five days of hilarious fun, mirth, melody and entertainment de luxe is in store for the residents of the city and district, starting Friday, July 4th, and lasting through until the 9th, when the Belleville Rotary Club Grand Karnival gets under way in Victoria Park.

That this, the first venture of its kind undertaken by the well-known local service club, will be a success is indicated in the high calibre of entertainment secured for the purpose. Victoria Park, selected by the club for the reason of its coolness and proximity to the downtown district, will likely be the mecca for thousands when the show gets under way on Friday. There will be no admission to the park and the public can rove at leisure through the spacious grounds.

There will be all sorts of games, including the popular Bingo with prizes that are worth a king's ransom. Games of chance with the popular wheels, novelties, mysteries and all the ingredients that go to make for fun and entertainment.

"Rotary Ann," the dollar-covered doll whose beauty is adorned with apparel comprised entirely of one-dollar bills, will be drawn for the last night of the Karnival. This little lady is a worthwhile prize in herself and her gown, while the amount cannot be divulged, will go a long way toward paying that income tax. "Ann" is a beautiful blonde and at present is on display in the window of the Charles Symons gentlemen's furnishing store on Front Street.

Members of the Queen City Shows arrived in the city today and lost no time in laying the foundation of their various booths and entertainment devices.

The funds from the Karnival, as has been before stated, will be devoted to the Crippled Children's Fund of the club, and the public in attending the function will not only be getting the acme of entertainment and fund, but will be aiding a humanitarian cause.

Make it a date to visit Victoria Park nightly and enjoy the cool bay breezes and the Rotary Karnival.

Aircraftman Killed In Training Plane

Moose Jaw, Sask., July 3 (CP)—Lac. William Darling of Revelstoke, B.C., was killed and Fo. J. Constabaris (home town unavailable) was injured last night when their Harvard training plane from the No. 32 Service Flying Training School here crashed near Buttress, 16 miles south of Moose Jaw.

Royal Canadian Air Force officials are investigating the crash, the cause of which was not immediately determined.

Lac. Darling is survived by his widow, Mrs. L. M. Darling, a bride of a few months.

Picton and District

Picton, July 3 (Special)—Sister Naven of Cobourg, Juvenile Director for Ontario East, was presented at Picton L.O.L. when the Alice Caton Memorial Juvenile Lodge was instituted. The new lodge was named in honor of Worshipful Sister Alice Caton, who was Grand Mistress of Ontario East at the time of her death. Her granddaughter, Alice Caton was installed as the first chairlady. Members of Coronation Lodge No. 168, Trenton, were present on this occasion and assisted in installing the nineteen members.

During the evening Bibles were presented to the new lodge by Worshipful Sisters Naven, Greer and Kirkham. Sister Naven was presented with a lovely gift by the lodge. Following lodge, all enjoyed a banquet provided by members of Picton L.O.B.A.

The golf club house was the scene of an enjoyable tea Wednesday after noon, sponsored by the Picton War Emergency Committee. Flags and flowers were used in decoration. The hostesses were Mrs. A. O. Sharpe, Lady A. Seton, Mrs. C. D. Wilson, Mrs. Edmund Carter and Miss Rebecca Hubbs. Many enjoyed a social time at this cool spot on the bay shore.

Sir Alexander and Lady Seton entertained many friends in the Officers' Mess at the armouries. Gladioli were used in decoration and a novel attraction was a model plane made of flowers.

Rain early in the week was very welcome in those sections where it fell but reports indicate that it was not general. A good downpour would be of great benefit to pastures and hoe crops. Hay is very short and farmers fear a shortage of feed this winter.

Dr. and Mrs. Morley Currie have joined Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Frankish of Toronto and they will enjoy a vacation at their cottage at Siloam.

Picton Boy Scouts have voted $25 to assist Boy Scouts overseas who have lost equipment as a result of the war.

Mr. Eugene (Joe) Bond who has been ill in P. E. C. Hospital for the past month, is convalescing at his home on Church Street.

Mrs. Jerry Heffernan of Bloomfield, and Mrs. Jas. McAlpine of Picton, are receiving the sympathy of many friends. The funeral of their father, Mr. Hott, who passed away at his home at Demorestville, following a heart seizure, was held in St. Gregory's Church on Monday morning, with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Miss Phyllis Weldmark, nurse-in-training, of Peterboro, is spending holidays with her mother, Mrs. Hazel Weldmark.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. (Buff) Cooper, Donna and Bill, motored to Lindsay on Monday for the boat races.

Master Kenneth Stafford who has been at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Al. Stafford this year, and attended school in Picton, is holidaying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stafford, Trenton. Little Nadine Stafford of Trenton is spending a few weeks in Picton.

Her husband predeceased her many years ago, as did one daughter and a son, Edward. Surviving are her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Wannamaker, three granddaughters and a number of great-grandchildren. Mrs. Lambe was a devout memger of St. Gregory's Church, where Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. Fr. J. A. Meehan on Wednesday morning, with interment in Mount Olivet cemetery.

PERSECUTIONS OF THE CHURCHES UNDER HITLER

Pastor Forsgren Tells of Suffering of Jews and Christians Under Hitlerism

STORIES OF CRUELTY

A large audience heard Pastor Bertil Forsgren of Stockholm, Sweden, Tuesday evening in the City Hall Auditorium, where the Swedish preacher is conducting a patriotic Christian campaign throughout this week at 8 o'clock each evening. Despite the intense heat, the listeners followed the speaker with rapt attention as he spoke on the subject, "The Churches Under Hitler's Rulership and the Persecution of Jews and Christians." Mr. Forsgren expressed the wish that as many as possible of His Majesty's Forces would attend the Wednesday evening meeting when he would deal with the subject that has played such a tremendous factor in Hitler's successes to date, namely: "How Hitler Wins the Youth." Said Mr. Forsgren, "This subject is of the most vital importance, because we must win youth to win this war." He stated, that while in Ingersoll, Ontario, the Company "D" unit of the Oxford Rifles attended the Town Hall in a body, to hear this address. Afterwards, the Commanding Officer of the unit, wrote him (Mr. Forsgren), a letter of thanks on behalf of his men, because of their great appreciation of the address.

Tonight (Thursday), Mr. Forsgren speaks on "The New Nazi Religion."

"The most impossible thing a preacher of the Gospel can attempt to do, is to try to please man. The only business of the God-called preacher is to preach the Word of God and do the will of God. This explains the chief reason why the Church did not survive as a worthwhile spiritual factor in Germany after the advent of Hitler. Except for a brave minority in every denomination, the vast majority of the preachers forgot trying to please God in their anxiety to please Adolph Hitler."

The Jews were subject to very brutal persecution immediately, when Hitler came into power, the speaker declared, but the churches were first given a chance to surrender. Before Hitler came into power, every part of the city had its local Nazi Storm Troopers. When he came to power, they virtually took over every city and street, marching up and down, led by some fanatical Nazi hate-stirring music. Each such unit had two "strong men" in it. Any one who did not raise the hand and say "Heil Hitler" as the Storm Troopers passed by, was at once beaten up by the "strong man." The Jews were the special objects of such attacks, the speaker asserted, and the cruelties that they thus endured are beyond imagination.

Sufferings of Jews

But there were other ways the helpless Jews suffered, and through which untold numbers were forced out of business and literally starved to death, if they by chance missed a violent death at the hands of the Storm Troopers, or in the concentration camps. In front of every Jewish owned store, two Storm Troopers were always stationed. No one was hindered from entering, but upon leaving, the Nazis Storm Troopers imprinted a stamp upon the forehead of the customer leaving, which read, I have been untrue to the Fuehrer and Fatherland, I have bought from a Jew." Even the Christian Gentiles who had no hatred could not withstand such pressure and were thus forced to stop patronizing the Jews who could not help they were born Jews, more than we can help we were born Gentiles. Gentile stores had signs on them, "Here is no Jew allowed to buy."

Persecution of Christians

"Hitler approached the Christians very much differently," said Mr. Forsgren. "Shortly after coming into power, the Nazi government issued a decree, that all organizations, including social organizations, sport clubs, service clubs, churches and everything similar, would be given certain length of time, during which two-thirds of the Board of Directors, Deacons' Board or similar organization would have to be members of the Nazi party. If not, they would be forbidden. Naturally, the church of which I was pastor refused to obey this, and that was one reason for my arrest, amongst other reasons which I will speak on another night. In this way, Hitler got control of the Lutheran State church, and the free or non-conformist groups." Mr. Forsgren referred to one noble example of a Lutheran preacher in East Prussia which did not yield to Nazi pressure. Rosenberg, the Nazi Minister of Education, had sent out blasphemous "German Christian" literature to be taught to children. This pastor in his church, instructed the parents not to read the anti-Christian literature. The local Nazis at once complained to Berlin, where the minister was called in question by his church superior officers. The presiding church official in Berlin, besides his ministerial duties was also the Captain of a unit of Storm Troopers, for which he received 150 marks per month. You can imagine what treatment the pastor received from such an official.

Preacher Defies Nazis

When given a choice of publicly recanting or forfeiting his place in the ministry and everything that meant, he left the pulpit and with his family was turned out on the streets. Mr. Forgren said that the fate of such is only known to God Himself. Speaking of pastor Martin Niomoeller, Mr. Forsgren said that he doubted very much if he is still alive, as conditions in the concentration camps are so horrible and the physical violence suffered so intense, that he doubted if any one could live under it for three years. Niomoeller was a very patriotic man, as every Christian should be, if the government is such that it can have the respect and support of God-fearing Christians. Niomoeller ardently supported Hitler in his rise to power, believing that Hitler was going to bring order out of chaos. But as soon as he (Niomoeller) learned that Hitler wanted to gain control of the church and its message, he fearlessly withstood Hitler. We should thank God for men like him.

Deacon Dragged Out of Bed

Mr. Forsgren told of how a deacon in his own church in Hamburg was dragged out of bed in the middle of the night because he had expressed dislike for the anti-Christian characteristics of Nazism. His wife went to the police officials to make enquiries concerning the specific charges against him, where he was, etc. Every day for two weeks, she received the same answer from the police, "We don't know." Finally, one day two Gestapo police rang the door bell and handed her a box. It contained the ashes of her husband. The Gestapo always followed that procedure with people who died in the concentration camps for two reasons, first, with a brutal, barbaric sense of victory and satisfaction, secondly, to conceal the marks of the physical violence suffered.

Mr. Forsgren told of the blasphemous perversions of Christianity in Nazifying it. In all the Lutheran churches which accepted his domination, and they were no exceptions if they were allowed to continue, the Swastika, the emblem of hatred, was hung above the Cross, the emblem of love. Whenever flowers were placed in a church building, they were invariably grouped around a picture of Hitler. Mr. Forsgren stated that instead of giving a newly married couple a new Bible, the State Church preacher must give the newlyweds a beautiful black leather bound copy of 'Mein Kampf.' "Think of such a thing to begin married life on, 'My Battle.'" Mr. Forsgren told of reading a funeral notice of an outstanding cleric which had the usual black border, the place of birth, concluding with these words, "He died firm in the faith of Adolph Hitler." Commented Mr. Forsgren, "That is bad and terrible to live on, but tragic and damning to die on."

Blasphemous Perversions of Hymns

The same anti-Christian blasphemy has been extended to the great German hymns. Fritz von Rabenau, under Hitler's own supervision has re-written the Christmas hymn "Silent Night" as follows:

Silent night, holy night,
The Leader (meaning Hitler) alone patiently watches.
Blessing Germany, watching it,
Only thinking of her, silent night,
 holy night.
All asleep but one lone Adolf Hitler
Protects the fate of Germany
Leads her to greatness, glory and fortune,
Grant to us Germans merited power.

The preacher concluded his address with a personal appeal for all to accept Christ as personal Saviour, and asking Christians to devote themselves more unselfishly of serving God and others than ever before. Pastor Kulbeck closed the service with prayer and the benediction.

Vichy Reports New Allied Columns Move into Syria

Vichy, July 3—(AP) — Military advices today said two new British and Free French columns were moving into Syria from Iraq in addition to those attacking Palmyra and Deir-Ez-Zor.

One of the new columns was said to be attacking Tell Kotchek on the Istanbul-Bagdad railway at the point where it crosses the northern corner of Syria while the other was described as threatening Djebel Simdjar, commanding the entrance to a desert highway a little farther south.

Reinforcements were said to be arriving for the forces besieging the Vichy garrison at Palmyra and opposing forces were reported to be maintaining contact at Deir-Ez-Zor, in the eastern Syrian desert.

Forestry Units Included

New forestry corps companies were hustled to Scottish camps where they will start lumbering operations immediately on a project as gigantic as anything the United Kingdom has ever seen.

Light anti-aircraft drafts went to training school where they joined several thousand other Canadian gunners preparing for work with the Canadian corps. Thousands of miscellaneous reinforcements were welcomed to the holding unit camps.

Air force personnel was taken to the R.A.F. reception depot and will be allotted soon to various squadrons.

Senior officers of a new Montreal medical unit went to the hospital they will occupy and a group of nursing sisters were taken to London to await a move into the army area.

Hospital Unit in Convoy

The troops came ashore by the thousands from a huge convoy which brought them across the Atlantic without incident.

The Canadians whistled, laughed and sang as they poured off the gray ships.

Only once during the crossing did an escort ship drop depth charges, the men said. Whether there was a Nazi submarine in the vicinity they did not know.

The contingent included a complete 1,200-bed hospital outfit from Montreal with more than 80 nursing sisters, the lumbermen soldiers to complete the Canadian Forestry Corps operating in Scotland, reinforcements for infantry, artillery, and a large number of airmen and some navy men. There were also some Belgians, Hollanders and Norwegians who received their training in Canada.

The first and largest group to land consisted of tank troopers. It is complete with a repair shop, signal section, service corps and medical sections.

Geoffrey H. Shakespeare, Secretary for overseas trade, mounted a pile of baggage to welcome the men to Britain.

He said that "if Germany cleans up Russia, it will be our turn next. In that case the only obstruction in the path of the Nazis is the embattled force of empire."

Forced to New Course

London, July 3 (CP Cable)—Sighting of a submarine on the surface in the vicinity of the convoy bearing thousands of Canadian troops to Britain forced the big liners to take a new course during the crossing of the Atlantic. Destroyers went off to hunt the marauder and made it keep its distance.

A Reuters news correspondent aboard one of the escorting British destroyers said: "The submarine was sighted far off, on the opposite side of the convoy from us. The submarine, sighting us, evidently made a crash dive. For half an hour she was hunted without avail.

"Until the convoy was well on its new course and out of harm's way the hunters kept her down to prevent her reporting us or observing our movements. But she might have reported us already to waiting partners. That made us wonder a little."

The presence of the lurking submarine went unobserved by many soldiers and airmen aboard the big transports. When they landed they reported depth charges had been dropped but said they were not sure whether there was a submarine or not.

No further sign of any enemy vessels was seen by the convoy and the transports totalling nearly 140,000 tons safely headed into port. No hostile aircraft were sighted in the area of possible air attack.

'SCORCHED EARTH'

repeated at intervals during the day on public loudspeaker systems and on house radios, marked the first time the Russian people had heard Stalin's voice since 1936 when he announced the constitution.

Pravda, Izvestia and other morning newspapers devoted their entire front pages to the text of the half-hour speech together with portraits of Stalin.

Asserting that "millions of the masses of our people will rise," Stalin, speaking in measured tones, announced that workers in Leningrad and Moscow already had started the organization of thousands into peoples' armies to support the Red army and urged similar action in "every city under threat of invasion."

He expressed gratitude to Britain and to the United States and referred to the peoples of Europe and America as "loyal Allies."

"Our war for the freedom of our country," he said, "will merge with the struggle of the peoples of Europe and America for their independence, for democratic liberties..

Churchill Praised For Speech

"In this connection, the historic utterance of British Prime Minister Churchill regarding aid to the Soviet Union and the declaration of the U.S.A. government signifying readiness to render aid to our country, which can only evoke a feeling of gratitude in the hearts of the peoples of the Soviet Union, are fully comprehensible and sympathetic."

(Listeners in London reported that Stalin spoke nervously and somewhat haltingly and that several times they could hear water being poured into a glass.)

His main theme, however, he expressed at the very beginning of his long speech:

"A grave danger overhangs our country."

Issue One of Life or Death

"Above all it is essential that our people, the Soviet people, should understand the full immensity of the danger that threatens the issue is one of life or death for the Soviet State, for the peoples of the U. S. S. R.; the issue is whether peoples of the Soviet Union shall remain free or fall into slavery.

"The Soviet people must realize this and abandon all heedlessness, they must mobilize themselves and reorganize all their work on new, wartime lines, when there can be no mercy to the enemy."

He cautioned against "disorganizers of the rear, deserters, panic-mongers, rumor-mongers, spies, diversionists, parachutists," and declared there was no room for cowards or whimperers. All industry, he said, would have to rush into production of armaments and effective air raid precautions must be organized.

Stalin declared that "history shows that there are no invincible armies and never have been." He recalled that Russia once beat Napoleon.

Says Hitler Broke Pact

He told the people, it was Hitler who had broken the non-aggression pact between Russia and Germany but that the signing of it was not an error on the part of the Soviets. In the first place, he said, Russia in love of peace could not turn down a treaty even when offered "by such fiends and cannibals as Hitler and Ribbentrop."

In the second place, he continued, it gained Russia a year and a half "opportunity of preparing its forces to repulse Fascist Germany should she risk an attack on our country despite the pact."

Germany, Stalin said, gained an advantageous position for her troops for a short period but lost politically by "exposing herself in the eyes of the entire world as a blood-thirty aggressor."

Russia's gain, on the other hand, "is a serious and lasting factor that is bound to form the basis for development of decisive military successes of the Red Army in the war with Fascist Germany."

CALL TO ARMS

In ancient days there was the call to arms which established a nation on war footing.

Today that call is still heard. Never in history was a more sinister threat aimed at the principle of progress and of justice and democracy than the Nazi menace. Today usually we take our notice of proclamations through the newspapers mainly or by notices on billboards or outside buildings. It was not always so. For long generations couriers carried the proclamations which were read to the people in cities, towns and villages, which are their very home.

.Tomorrow (Friday) in Belleville there will be witnessed a modernized form of the manner in which the people of England of old were warned of danger and impressed with their duties. It was the bearing the formal proclamation to the citizens who would meet in the public place and there hear the document read. Either today or Friday in every centre, small or great, such scenes are being enacted for their dramatic effect—to stimulate the interest of the people, to bring home to people's hearts and bosoms the very needs of the hour.

It is expected that many will be in front of the city hall when the proclamation is received by military courier from Military Division No. 3 Kingston by Acting Mayor Alderman H. J. Clarke. It is hoped that this ceremony will be well attended for the scene should appeal in the understanding of the all-out war effort of the Dominion.

Everyone has read of such scenes in history or fiction or has seen them in motion pictures dealing with other eras. When the proclamation is brought to Belleville, everyone present will be a participant in such a scene.

Every loyal citizen must give his or her help to assure the victory for democracy. There is need for "stout-hearted able-bodied men to volunteer for active service in the army." The words of the proclamation in the "Call to Arms" are brief and to the point. They should have an effect considering the fact that they are delivered through the time-honored ceremony. What appealed to another age and inspired men and women should appeal here in this twentieth century.

SELLING BRITISH GOODS

When Seattle declared "Buy British" week, one firm "felt like raising the Union Jack so much of England" is represented in their stocks. That store on June 15th devoted an entire page advertisement in bringing British goods to the attention of their customers in the Post-Intelligencer.

In very fact this firm did raise the British flag, a very large Union Jack in colors with the words "'Buy British' Week" beneath and a reminder to the public that there is quality in goods marked "Made in Great Britain." It notes that the firm had always carried British goods because "there are certain items that the English pride themselves on for fine craftsmanship and finish. A large Union Jack was in the centre of the page.

Every article mentioned is a British product. A number of smaller Union Jacks in colors are distributed throughout the page.

Here is a firm dealing in British goods 4,782 miles away from the scene of their manufacture.

This means something. It shows where the heart of the people of the United States is in regard to the present conflict. It shows the reliability and the sense of honesty in business for which products of British workmanship have always been noted.

It is well to know that there is so deep an appreciation of what Britain means to the world and to know that such a city as Seattle celebrated a "Buy British" week. It is another proof of what does not need proving that the United States people are with us in this struggle for the preservation of the liberties of the world.

Mr. L. E. McLean, general manager of the Corbin Lock Company of Canada Limited, who was recently in Seattle on business, saw this issue of the paper in question and was so impressed with it that he brought a copy home with him to Belleville.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

BELLEVILLE GIRLS FEATURE MAGAZINE

Those glamorous gals, who smile bewitchingly from magazine covers in all the colors of their youthful beauty and gay apparel, do more than pose before a camera. Before that picture smiles at you from your favorite periodical the beauties go through a rigorous preparatory routine that calls for hours of patience, work and nerve-trying experiments.

So says Kay Lafferty, pretty brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lafferty, 10 Highland Avenue. And Kay should know. For some time she has been spending her spare time as a model in Toronto where she has appeared before prominent artists and photographers.

Highlighting Kay's career as a professional model is her work which appears on the front cover of the current issue of the "Chatelaine" magazine. And by the same token, Kay's effort to put her native city in the model limelight is substantially supported by Misses Sheila and Philippa Burrows, attractive daughters of S. R. (Sandy) Burrows of local insurance and community singing fame. The Misses Burrows, well known here for their athletic ability, are photographed in action pictures of tennis and golf, their pictures illustrating in an outstanding manner articles on these sports.

Kay Lafferty's dark brunette beauty smiles from the front cover in an engaging manner. Her dark hair, typical of the proverbial Irish colleen is haloed by a sweeping off-the-face straw hat. Yellow and white flowers set off her beauty in startling fashion. Her naturally attractive features are not spoiled by the magic of make-up and she is easily recognizable.

She was selected from a large number of models for this particular photograph. Apart from "specials" such as this, she models for several firms in the Queen City and her picture has appeared in prominent department store catalogues, displaying to fine advantage several phases of milady's apparel.

Suggestion that being an artist's or a photographer's model was the proverbial life of Reilly brought a negative shake of the pretty dark head. "It is no such thing, but it represents hours of long tedious work," smiled Kay, who is spending a couple of months with her parents here before resuming her vocation in Toronto.

"For instance," she continued, "this particular photograph took four hours of steady posing before the sponsors and photographers were satisfied. It meant plenty of running around, sitting beneath the stifling heat of powerful lights and continuous attention to make-up."

There was an hour under the skilful fingers of hairdressers. Then a cross-city dash to a prominent department store to select the proper gown. Back to the studio where the make-up experts took over the job.

"This is one of the most important features of the preparatory "exercises," Kay says. "By the time those people got through with me I was a delicate tan shade. I had a color that Joe Louis would covet. It was necessary, however, due to the quirks and quisms of the lighting."

But the original make-up operations were perhaps the easiest part of this particular sphere of "getting ready." Every hour the make-up had to be "fixed" anew. Every few minutes studio attendants would remove perspiration caused by the intense heat of the lights.

.Six beautiful bouquets of flowers were necessary before the final shot was taken. The posies wilted beneath the unmerciful heat almost as quickly as they were brought in.

There were poses photographed—then more poses. Turn here, turn there Eyes had to be kept closed to protect them from the brilliant glare of the lights. Then, at a given signal, they were suddenly opened, the Lafferty smile flashed across Kay's features—there came a click and the "shot" was made. This performance continued for upwards of four hours.

"It is pretty strenuous work at times, but I like it," Kay says.

New York, that pot o' gold at the end of many a model's rainbow, has as yet no definite allure for the Belleville beauty. "If I were going to make modelling my life vocation, or at least a permanent job while I have the qualifications, I might go to the big city," she says, "but thus far I like it fine in Toronto. Belleville is not so far away either."

GOLFER'S WAIL

World over, golfers tell the pro
  From year to year they wonder whether
The happy day they'll ever know
  When they will put two shots together
The perfect drive as drives are reckoned
Is followed with a faulty second.

This wail is heard at every club:
  "Never my two good strokes are mated!
Always that second one I dub,
  Always to blunder I am fated."
This is what breaks a golfer's heart—
His good shots fall so far apart.

If from the tee my ball goes far
  To find the fairway smooth and grassy,
Then ten to one the chances are
  I'll hook or slice with spoon or brassie.
Off flies the ball to gorse or heather;
Seldom two good shots come together.

A CALL TO ARMS

Whereas Liberty is threatened throughout the world by the forces of TYRANNY

AND Whereas Canada of her own free will is pledged to fight for FREEDOM by the side of Britain

AND Whereas the security and the welfare of every man, woman and child in Canada and of free peoples everywhere DEPEND UPON VICTORY

AND Whereas victory cannot be assured without the help of every LOYAL CITIZEN OF THIS DOMINION

Now be it known that there is URGENT NEED for stout-hearted able-bodied men to volunteer for ACTIVE SERVICE in the CANADIAN ARMY

Wherefore Canada sends out a

Call to Arms

And charges all true Canadians to heed and to help.

Given at National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, this First day of July in the Year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-one, and in the seventy-fifth year of Confederation.

Minister of National Defence

GOD SAVE THE KING

As a feature of the present recruiting campaign, a CALL TO ARMS in old-time style is being simultaneously delivered to the Municipal Offices of the cities, towns and villages of the Dominion. The intention is to impress upon all Canadians the reality of the present threat to Canada, and to inspire an awareness of the imperative need for men for active service. The CALL TO ARMS of 1941 is reproduced above.

Since the ancient day when the warning fires of King Alfred the Great sprang to light from hill to hill across a threatened countryside, the CALL TO ARMS has been an unfailing rallying cry to the British tribes at war. There has been no challenge to the security of Canada when its summoning message has not run like a flame from ocean to ocean to bring a grim and swift response. There has been no emergency threatening Canada when the CALL TO ARMS has not been answered by an instant and resolute mustering of Canada's citizen soldiery.

Whether it was the drum's beat behind the frontier stockade, or the silver voice of 1914 bugles, Canadians rallied instantly to the defence of their country. Whether it was the bells which roused Quebec City when de Salaberry's French-Canadians defeated the invader at Chateauguay in 1775, or the cannon's boom which told York of its peril in 1813, the result was the same. Whether it shocked or thrilled or angered, the CALL TO ARMS has not failed to inspire all loyal Canadians to stand to their arms in a concerted defence of freedom.

Pilot's Uniform Stolen in Raid

London. — (By Mail) — Reggie Thomas, former Olympic and A.A.A. champion miler and now a flight-lieutenant in the R.A.F., awoke on the morning after a blitz on Bristol to find that all he had left was a pair of shoes. While he was trying to get another outfit, Michael Joseph Downes, a 34-year-old aircraft fitter, left the hotel dressed as a flight-lieutenant, complete with wings, and carrying all the athlete's kit.

For Downes that meant the beginning of a two-months life of fraud for Flight-Lieut. Thomas two and a half hours' detention in a police station as a suspected person before he was able to prove his identity.

Downes came to London posing as a Canadian airman with the D.F.M. and D.F.C.

He told people how he had been shot down in dog fights over Britain, and his expert general knowledge of aircraft enabled him to "cut a dash among the ladies."

He proposed marriage to a girl studying music at a university after knowing her a fortnight. She accepted and introduced him to her parents.

The notice of their engagement was published in the press—mentioning both Downes' "decorations."

He gave her as a wedding present jewellery he had stolen from his former landlady and then borrowed $150 from her to buy some wedding presents.

Driving through Hyde Park in a taxi one day he saw a car broken down. So he stopped and asked if he could be of any help.

It was the car of Lord Rennell of Rodd, 83-year-old peer, who was British ambassador to Rome during the last war.

Downes drove Lord Rennell to his destination, and during the journey mentioned his decorations and his Canadian birth.

Lord Rennell, who was taken in by the "hero" and his Canadian accent, had him to stay at his country house and lent him $250 when he asked for it.

It was a woman who proved Downes' downfall — and the fact that Reggie Thomas' uniform did not quite fit him. The trousers were too long.

The woman noticed that Downes' trousers had been turned up, which she knew was a breach of R.A.F. regulations.

So she reported the matter to the police and they found that his real "decorations" were ten previous convictions.

When he was found guilty at the Old Bailey recently of receiving a uniform knowing it to have been stolen, stealing jewellery, defrauding a girl of $150 by pretending he was an officer and meant to marry her, and defrauding a bank of $150 with a forged cheque, he asked that 24 other offences be taken into consideration.

Detective-Sergt. Penny revealed that Downes received that uniform —he said he bought it from a hotel porter—on the very day he was released after his last prison sentence.

Downes' two-months' life of make-believe is now costing him two years' imprisonment.—Hamilton Spectator.

INDIAN MEDICINE

Southwestern Indians are thinking of sending a good-will delegation to Mexico to study the religious use of peyote among the aborigines south of the Rio Grande.

For generations the natives on both sides of the Mexican border have used an intoxicating drug obtained from a small spineless cactus resembling a radish in size and shape and variously called whisky-root, mescal and peyote.

The small part of this cactus growing above ground produces a beautiful white blossom, which later is displaced by a tuft of white down known as the fescal button or bean.

"Peyote," pronounced "pa-yo-ta," is derived from Aztec Indian "peyotl" meaning caterpillar and referring to the downy centre of the button.

The narcotic effects of peyote are obtained either by eating the mescal buttons and roots or by drinking a concoction made from them.

Peyote dilates the pupils of the eyes, slows up the pulse, relaxes the muscles and causes the subject to fall into a trance in which he sees visions accompanied with feelings of peace, brotherly love and good-will toward others.

Among Indians taking peyote is associated with a religious ritual which includes sitting around a midnight fire, meditating, praying, performing a peculiar baptism ceremony, dancing, and chanting to drums and rattles.

They regard peyote as of divine origin and the embodiment of the Great Spirit and attach much the same significance to the drug that orthodox Christians attach to the bread and wine in the Holy Sacrament.

The Western Indians resist every effort to suppress its use as a violation of their religious rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights.

The Native American Church, Inc., composed of members of 23 tribes, was organized about 20 years ago largely to oppose the prohibition of the use of peyote in religious rituals.

When Montana and Nevada a year or two ago outlawed the use of various drugs the Indians petitioned the legislatures to exempt peyote when used ceremonially.

Peyote possesses valuable medicinal properties and some Indians look upon it almost as a panacea.

Whether peyote is fundamentally detrimental to health has long been a subject of controversy.

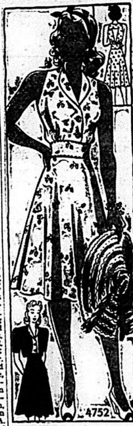
Sleeveless Frock And Bolero

PATTERN 4752



"Having a wonderful time", this sunny style seems to say. It's Pattern 4752 by Anne Adams, and the perfect ensemble for vacation wear. The bodice of the sun-frock is soft and bloused, with plenty of roomy freedom. It buttons down the front and has young curved revers! There's an optional suntan cut-out in back, in the form of a triangle. That wide set-in girdle nicely shows off your little waistline, and the flaring two-section skirt may be either street or knee length. The jaunty short-sleeved bolero makes a useful addition to this style—let it match or contrast. You might make a suntan dress in gay cotton; then stitch up another closed-back style in a cool shantung or linen, to wear with the jacket.

Pattern 4752 is available in junior miss sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. Size 13, street length dress, takes 2 3-4 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send TWENTY CENTS (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Get Out and Hoof It, Girls! Good for Figures—and Dates

Alice Marble, tennis champ ion, is slender and graceful.

By HELEN FOLLETT

BOYS ARE wise to the little softy who sits around and looks mysterious, takes pretty poses and powders her nose every half hour. They don't drag her places. She's only half alive, doesn't belong to this period of energy. They're keen about the outdoor lassie who does things. If there's a mile long walk back to a filling station to get gasoline, she tags along, doesn't sit in the car and look sorrowful and abused.

The time has come when the smart girl is interested in outdoor life, doesn't care if her hair goes stringy and her nose shows a shine. She knows it puts ginger in her heels, starshine in her eyes, and gives her a good appetite.

Outdoor Exercise

She's up and coming. She develops a sound musculature, sleeps well and, if a few freckles have found camping ground on her complexion, it is nothing for her to weep about.

Swimming has the world beaten as a figure molding exercise. Tennis is fine for arms and back, makes for grace and agility. Rowing knocks adipose tissues off the hips and thighs. Archery is a wonderful exercise, producing a full chest and normal breasts. The plainest woman looke like a Diana when she takes her stand, draws back the bow string, lets her go.

Too few American women are interested in walking, ever realize how much good a long tramp will do them. Spoiled by motor cars. Can't even run around the corner to see a friend, must always go chugging along in the benzine buggy.

If you are housebound, detach yourself from your soft cushions. Get out and hoof it. If you can't swim, learn; it's as easy as pie to plough through the waves. Lots of places where one can swim in the winter time.

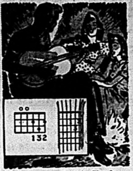
Fun to Play the Guitar and Easy to Learn How



Diagrams Explain Chords

Could anything be more fun than a campfire "sing," good company and a gay guitar?

Nothing—except being the guitarist! It's grand to be the one who strums the lovely harmonies; yet the actual playing is easy!

Little diagrams picturing your guitar fingerboard, its strings and cross bars, appear on all popular sheet music. They show you, with black dots and O's, which strings to play for which chords—so you can strum chord accompaniments for a song without even knowing how to read notes.

You soon learn how to use your hands and fingers. With our diagram for the D Major chord we've shown the fingering for the left hand. You press the strings with the first, second and third fingers of this hand where the black dots indicate. At the same time pluck these strings over the sound hole with your right hand, also the strings marked "O."

Simple! To accompany the jolly "Little Brown Jug" you need only learn this and two other chords.

Our 32-page instruction book shows you how to hold and tune guitar; explains fingering, technique, elements of music. Gives basic chords, 7 favorite airs for practice.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of EASY LESSONS IN GUITAR PLAYING to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of your instruction book.

Mrs. Joe Louis Sues for Divorce

By EARL HILLIGAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, July 3 (AP)—Two weeks after a dinner for which she said "I cooked everything he liked in hopes we'd patch things up," Mrs. Joe Louis has filed suit for divorce from the world's heavyweight boxing champion. She charged extreme and repeated cruelty.

In the action, filed yesterday, she said the Bomber dealt her "a violent blow in the mouth with his hand," Jan. 2, 1940, and "hit her in the face and stepped on her ankle" April 19.

"We separated after that last incident," said Mrs. Louis, the former Marva Trotter of Chicago. "But two weeks ago we had dinner together. I fixed everything he likes, but it just didn't work out.

Still Very Friendly

"Joe and I are very friendly, really we are," she said. "We got along beautifully up to the first of the year. But Joe was just too busy for a family life—or at least he used that as an excuse. I guess his business just wasn't conducive to making a home."

Mr. Louis, 24, asked restoration of her maiden name and temporary alimony. Informed of the suit, Louis appeared stunned, denied striking his wife, but said he would not contest the action.

He said they had had differences arising over her insistence she accompany him to training camps and on exhibition tours.

They were married in New York Sept. 24, 1935, the night Joe knocked out Max Baer early in a career in which he won the heavyweight title from Jim Braddock in June, 1937, swept through 18 successful title defences and earned almost $2,000,000.

Calvin Youmans, 85, of Cordova, Recalls Early Days in Belmont Twp.

Marmora—The old saying "He is smart for his years" may be applied to Calvin (Cab) Youmans, resident of Belmont Township for the past eighty three years, who celebrated his eighty fifth birthday at Cordova on February 2nd of this year. Mr. Youmans who was born in Hungerford Township, son of the late Eleazer Youmans and Columbia Ellis was two years of age when his parents moved to Belmont Township to take up land, now comprising the farm occupied by Frank Sopha. His father cleared the forest of that day to build his original log shanty. This had one stove to heat it and to do the cooking. Later, the father erected an addition to the dwelling and then built a fireplace. The son picked up the chips to burn them as the father was putting on the addition. "Cab" attended a log school house in the 4th concession of Belmont Township. Among those he received his education from where Mary Halcombe, Mary Preston and Robert Duffers. He did his first plowing when quite young. "Like most boys, when I was a boy, I went to the shanty when I was about fifteen," he said. "I first worked for a man named Willer and after that I did chopping and sawing for the Rathbun Company. I was a river driver too and Jacob Wilkes and David McGarvey are two of the men living today who have been in the same gang with me. Of course there are several others that I might remember if given a little time to think."

"The one thing I can remember best of all," he continued, "are the counties and county towns of Ontario which I learned when attending school. I am surprised at myself that I can remember these as I was taught them. I suppose I must have been well taught them." Mr. Youmans has been a widower for about a quarter of a century. His wife, Eliza Buchanan was a resident of Chandos Township when he first met her. When she was three years of age, she came with her parents from Ireland. Eight children were born of the marriage. Two, Mrs. H. Rowen (Charlotte), and Mrs. W. Hornsby (Margaret Ethel) are deceased. The other children are Herbert, Bla[illegible] George, Cordova; William, Pineview; John Albert, Belmont Township; Frank, Cordova and Nursing Sister Mary Youman, Reg. N., formerly of Belleville General Hospital staff who is awaiting the call to overseas duty.

Mr. Youmans is a member of the former Methodist, now the United Church. He joined the Orange Order at the age of 18. Throughout his long life he has had little sickness and his interest in the affairs of his district and the Dominion as a whole is still most keen. He enjoys a visit to Marmora to meet old acquaintances as his relatives are able to take him.

Drawing Made

The drawing for the pair of hemstitched towels donated by Mrs. B. Regis to augment the funds of Marmora War Workers' Association resulted in Mrs. Wesley Smith of Havelock holder of ticket 136, being declared the winner. As a result the War Workers' Association will benefit to the extent of ten dollars.

Five candidates received the Apostolic rite of Confirmation at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday morning on the occasion of the annual visit to the parish of Right Rev. John Lyons, D.D., Lord Bishop of Ontario. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion and hymns used had a double significance, that of Confirmation vows and that of rededication to the country's service as brought out in the Prime Minister's National Dedication Days' proclamation. The Bishop's striking message upon the text "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ", 2 Corinthians 5-20, touched upon the Christian labours of St. Paul, while he was a tentmaker, a layman and the need of rededication of souls to Christ's work in addition to dedication to national service. The candidates presented by the rector, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell were also impressively addressed concerning the meaning of the laying on of hands and exhorted to live in constant remembrance of the important step in life which they had taken. During the offertory Mrs. Percy Gray sang "I will be faithful."

HURLERS DOING A FINE JOB IN INT. LEAGUE

Ed Head and George Washburn Nearly Ready for Return to Big Leagues

LEAFS DEFEATED

(By the Associated Press)

Ed Head and George Washburn, two young pitchers who failed to make the grade in the major baseball league at the start of the seaso, are doing swell jobs in the International circuit.

Head, farmhand of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has won 10 of 13 games with Montreal Royals while Washburn has a record of five victories and two losses with Newark Bears since being sent down by New York Yankees.

Each turned in a two-hitter yesterday, Head shutting out Rochester Red Wings 7-0 and Washburn beating Syracuse Chiefs, 3-1.

The Royals backed up their star hurler with a 12-hit attack on two Red Wings pitchers, driving starter by Vandenberg to cover in the second inning with a four-run outburst.

Victory enabled Montreal to regain third place and dropped the Wings from second to fourth.

Newark blasted 17 hits off a quartet of Syracuse moundsmen to coast to its eighth consecutive triumph behind Washburn's twirling.

It was the 12th successive loss for the Chiefs.

Buffalo Bisons climbed back into second place, crushing Toronto Leafs 11-2 in the only other game played. Rain forced postponement of the scheduled Jersey City-Baltimore encounter.

Virgil Trucks went the distance for Buffalo, giving up eight safeties while fanning 15 and walking two, to gain his tenth victory.

CORBYS CLINCH FIRST PLACE IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Trounce Sacos 14-3 by Scoring Seven Runs in Third Inning

CEMENTMEN WIN

Corby A. C. cinched first place in the City Senior Softball League by beating the SACOs 14 to 3 at Coleman Flats last evening. While the Bawden-Barriage-led Corbys were making sure of first place, the Point Anne "Cementmen" fortified their hold on second place by trouncing the Esquire juniors 11 to 1 at Ox Point in a doubleheader staged in the league.

Corbys scored seven runs in the third inning against the SACOS and then coasted in to win in a breeze. John Bawden hurled six scoreless innings and allowed two hits, as Connie Harris pitched the last three innings and was nicked for a brace of safeties also, but the SACOs scored their two unearned counters in the seventh and eighth. Bawden struck out ten in six frames, and Harris whiffed three in as many innings, but walked five. Jim Hunter, laboring on the hilltop for the SACOs was given weird support in the field.

Complete Triple Play

The game was not as commonplace as the score would indicate, as Corbys completed a triple play in the fourth inning when Ethier lined to Cy Barriage, who tossed to Henn at second, Henn completing the play to first. As there was one out at the time the triple play, although executed perfectly, did not appear in the score sheet. Each team added to the game with fast double plays, however.

Johnnie Hamilton, Corby's newly acquired first baseman, led the hitters with four hits in six tries and was deprived of a ninth inning home run, when he failed to touch first base on a mighty round-tripper to deep left. Cy Barriage had two triples and Whalen one three-bagger, as Henn and Kiser also hit well. Day counted two of the SACOs' four hits, one a double off Bawden in the fourth.

The line-ups:

Corbys—Henn 2b; Ronsky 3b; Hamilton 1b; Cy Barriage ss; Kiser and H. Bawden rf; J. Bawden and Harris p; Chuck Barriage lf; Lunberg cf and Whalen c.

SACO—Storey 1b; Peoples ss; Hunter p; Day cf; Ethier 3b; B. Thompson rf; Frane lf; Prout and Robertson 2b and M. Thompson c.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Corbys	307 002 020	14	15	2
SACO	000 000 120	3	4	7

Umpires—Pointer and Young.

Cementmen Win

It was just too much "Ding" Luffman down at Point Anne when Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen downed Red Townsend's Esquire juniors 11 to 1 to firmly entrench themselves in second place in the league standing. Art Genereaux hit a home run for the home nine, while Doug Bennett, Luffman and Whitehead came through with timely hits also. Mike Powers labored on the hilltop for the Juniors, but the Ox Point batters were on top.

The score by innings:		R
Esquire Jrs.	000 001 000	1
Pt. Anne	210 312 02x	11

Batteries: Point Anne—Luffman and Green; Esquire—Power and Bradden.

Dimag Tries for Triple Crown After Setting All-Time Record Of Hitting in 45 Straight Games

Yankee Centrefielder Greatest Player, Excluding Pitchers, in Present Era of Baseball

TO HONOR GEHRIG

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

JOE DIMAGGIO, the greatest player, excluding pitchers, in the present era of baseball, has reached his goal of a new all - time Major League record for hitting in 46 consecutive games, and now can try shooting for another prize — the "triple crown of batting."

This bauble is the three-way championship in percentage hitting, home runs and runs batted in and is one of the most elusive batting honors in the game.

In the last 15 years it has been won only by the immortal Lou Gehrig, who, incidentally, is to be memorialized by the New York Yankees and fans in a ceremony in Yankee Stadium before tomorrow's doubleheader. Gehrig captured all three in 1934 when he hit .363, collected 49 home runs and batted in 165 tallies.

Rogers Hornsby did it twice in the National League in 1922 and 1925.

A Sizzling Home Run

DiMaggio's blow yesterday to break the 44-year-old mark of Willie Keeler for hitting in the most consecutive game was a sizzling home run, his 18th of the season and preserved his leadership in this department.

In batting in three runs to help the Yanks rip open the Boston Red Sox 8-4 he also lifted himself within four "RBI" of the league leader, teammate Charley Keller, who hit his 17th homer in yesterday's game. Joe's batting average of .348 is 53 points behind the pace of Boston's Ted Williams.

Yesterday's victory was New York's sixth straight and 20th in 24 games in a furious surge that has given the Yanks a lead of three full games of Cleveland Indians, idle yesterday.

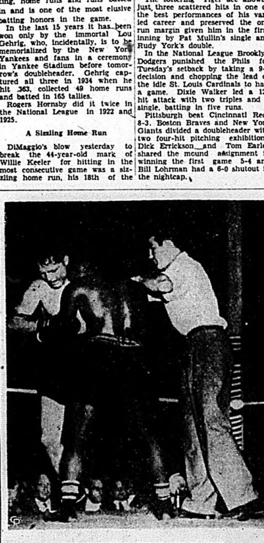
A's Clip Senators

In other American League tussles Philadelphia Athletics clipped Washington Senators 7-6 on Bob Johnson's 17th home run in the 10th inning and Detroit nosed out Chicago White Sox 1-0 in a spectacular night game pitching duel between Buck Newsom and Bill Deitrich.

The tottering Tiger ace allowed just three scattered hits in one of the best performances of his varied career and preserved the one run margin given him in the first inning by Pat Mullin's single and Rudy York's double.

In the National League Brooklyn Dodgers punished the Phils for Tuesday's setback by taking a 9-3 decision and chopping the lead of the idle St. Louis Cardinals to half a game. Dixie Walker led a 12-hit attack with two triples and a single, batting in five runs.

Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati Reds 8-3. Boston Braves and New York Giants divided a doubleheader with two four-hit pitching exhibitions. Dick Errickson and Tom Earley shared the mound assignment in winning the first game 5-4 and Bill Lohrman had a 6-0 shutout in the nightcap.



HANDSOME BILLY THIRD MAN IN RING

New York, July 3 (AP)—Bummy Davis, the unpopular little waif from Brooklyn, can go back and tell his army buddies in Texas that he put up a courageous fight before he bowed to Fritzie Zivic last night at the Polo Grounds.

In fact, the ringside regulars were trying to remember today any boxer who had absorbed a worse licking in a local ring just before Bummy finally sagged against the ropes in the 10th round and signified that he had taken enugh.

Bummy's face was smeared with blood and he was helpless, his head and body being torn by the machine gun punches of the welterweight champion, when Referee Arthur Donovan called it off.

Zivic did an artistic job on the soldier boy, taking full revenge for the foul shots that Davis poured into his trunks at their first meeting last November. It was so one-sided that the crowd began moving out before the scrap was half over. That is unusual for an audience that has paid up to $11 for a ringside chair.

Helpless in Clinches

All Davis had was a left hook, and he was helpless in the clinches. Zivic, who had waited eight months for another chance at Bummy, had just about everything, including a left jab that was in Bummy's face all night.

It wasn't a fight, really, from the eighth round on. Bummy was just proving that he could take it and the disappointing crowd of 8,968 which paid a gross of $36,185 was proving the same thing. There was a great relief for everybody when Bummy, walloped to the body in the 10th, went back against the ropes with a pained expression on his pan that said plainer than words that he had enough.

Sports Roundup

New York, July 3—(AP)—What's this about Jimmy Foxx getting a cracked rib in a friendly wrestling match with Ted Williams in the Red Sox Club House? The official announcement said Foxx received a torn cartilage when hit by a ball . . . But the Grapevine says several of the Sox yelled "There goes the pennant", when Jimmy was pinned by Williams.

Mebbe you noticed that when Joe Dimaggio broke Willie Keller's record of hitting safely in 44 consecutive games, it happened exactly 44 years after Wee Willie posted the mark. . . And Old Bill Dahlen, former Cub and Dodger shortstop, who held the record (42 games) prior to Keeler, was in the Yankee stadium to see Joe turn the trick.

Sport strays.

Dizzy Dean can't make up his mind about that St. Louis sportscasting offer. . .The Puerto Rican Sports Commission has revoked the $25 fine and one-year suspension it slapped on Satchel Paige, great negro pitcher, for "incivility" to an umpire . . . Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has satisfied his life's ambition of breeding his own horse, saddling a champion and having a liveried chauffeur.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Local softball fans and more particularly the Corby A. C. squad who competed in the Dominion Day softball tournament, were high in their praise of the softball layout at Hastings. "The infield is skinned and the pitcher's slab set in level with the ground. The field is level and fielders can get around in fine shape," stated one member of the Corby squad as he lauded the Hastings diamond.

"If the heads of softball want to see a softball set-up that is a credit to a community as small as Hastings, they'd be advised to take a jaunt out there and look the place over There's a scoreboard for the accommodation of the patrons, while the grandstand seats are a comfort, alongside of the planks over at Coleman Flats," remarked Harold Bateman, City Comptroller who followed the Corbys to Hastings on Tuesday and apparently enjoyed the day's outing cheering the Corby's team to victory.

The struggle, if there ever was such a contest possible, for first place in the Senior Softball League, was settled last night when the Corby A.C. downed the SACOS. Regardless as to the outcome of their remaining two games, the Bawden-Barriage-led nine cinched the top rung of the league ladder and thereby draws the favourite position for the City League play-offs. However, the other three spots in the league play-offs are not decided as yet as Point Anne, Esquire and the Reliance will all be battling in their remaining games to stay out of that fourth slot, as the fourth-placed club will be drawn against Corbys in the first league playdowns. Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen fortified their hold on second place by winning over the Esquire kids last night and now enjoy a slight advantage over Reliance and the kids. Incidentally it was like old times over at the Flats last night when Gerald Ethier, former Belleville softballer, played third base for SACO and although home on vacation, showed he can still play the game, as he fielded well and got a hit.

Do you remember when Johnny Coulson of Toronto and Vancouver's Noel de Mille were eliminated in Diamond Sculls heats seven years ago today at the English Henley regatta? Coulson was dumped in the Thames at the start when his oar broke and de Mille lagged 2 1-2 lengths behind H. L. Warren of Cambridge, who won the heat.

A street intersection, only a few hundred feet from the spot where Lou Gehrig performed some of his greatest diamond exploits, will be named in honor of the late first baseman of the Yankees, if a bill introduced by Joseph E. Kinsley, New York City councilman, is adopted. Kinsley proposed that the intersection of Grand Concourse and East 161st street, two blocks from Yankee Stadium, be named Lou Gehrig Plaza.

"So far as sport is concerned tomorrow is just Tuesday, in fact not even an ordinary Tuesday, as there isn't a sporting event in Peterborough," lamented Sports Scribe Fred Craig in Monday's issue of the Liftlock City Press, as he then continued to reminisce of the good old days in Peterboro sporting circles. Mister Craig goes on to say that Jake Solomon, the father of the old C.O.B.L., was the originator of morning games in Peterboro, an innovation that later became an institution in Peterboro baseball circles when capacity crowds jammed the park, especially when Belleville was the opposition. Fred says of all the morning games ever played in Peterboro, the game between Belleville and the Petes played exactly 20 years ago Tuesday when it took the Petes twelve innings to beat Freddie Goyer and Belleville, was the best. "The feature of that struggle came when the infuriated Peterboro fans nearly tossed the umpire into the river," relates Craig. Those were the real old days of baseball that are gone, but not forgotten.

Lloyd Hicks did not compete in the A.P.B.A. races at Lindsay on Tuesday simply because his new 250 c.c. craft is not ready for speed events as yet. Lloyd says he'll christen the craft Miss Rugene, his other racing craft having been named Baby Rugene. Mr. Hicks hopes to have his new boat ready for the big A.P.B.A. races at Valleyfield, Que., on July 26th however. Incidentally Keith Gilmore, of Picton, won the 135 class at Lindsay with his Jitterbug, while Buff Cooper's Donna Marie was forced out in the first heat of the 250 class at Lindsay.

Joe DiMaggio became the first player in the history of the Major Leagues to hit safely in 45 consecutive league games yesterday when his fifth inning round-tripper not only helped the Yankees to win 8-4 over the Red Sox, but established this unique hitting record. Away back in 1897, when foul balls were not counted as strikes against a batter, Wee Willie Keeler, then playing for the old Baltimore Orioles in the National League, hit safely in 44 consecutive games, but it was not until 44 years later that this string of 44 consecutive games of hitting was broken by one Joe DiMaggio, who has established himself as one of the game's greatest players. Incidentally Joe DiMaggio and the rest of the New York Yankees will appear at the Maple Leaf Stadium next Monday afternoon in an exhibition game against a team picked between Baltimore and Toronto.

SPORT SPICE—Joe Louis seems to be having more trouble outside the ring than in it. . . . Maybe Joe was worying about his marital status when he took 13 rounds to dispose of Billie Conn recently, however, now Champion Joe faces a new threat, his wife charges cruelty in a divorce suit. She claims Joe hit her twice—well maybe he was getting in a little extra training prior to his "bum-a-month" campaign. . . . Soxy Grey got one and "Nugger" Bennett two hits as Frood lost to Coniston yesterday. . . . The Quinte Tennis Club took three of five matches played with the West Sides last evening to fortify their hold on first place in the Trent Valley Tennis League. . . . The ninth annual all-star Major League game will be played at Detroit next Tuesday. . . . The Dodgers gained on the idle Cardinals by beating the Phillies 9-3 yesterday. . . . Ah, those colling breezes.

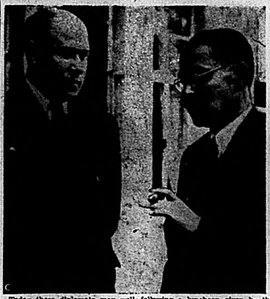
WONDERING WHERE THEY GO FROM HERE?



Today these diplomats may well be pondering their next move in the world's political and military chess board. At RIGHT is Constantin Smetanin, Soviet Russia's ambassador to Japan, and his guest is Nippon's Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka. The picture was taken following a luncheon given by the Red emissary to honor Matsuoka for arranging the Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact. Now Russia is at war with Germany—Japan's partner in the Axis lineup, and Smetanin perhaps can recall a similar pact signed by his country with Berlin.

Some Sequences Of R.C.A.F. Picture To be Made at Trenton

Ottawa, July 3 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Air Force announced receipt of word from Hollywood last night that personnel from the movie capital, taking part in production of a moving picture based on the Royal Canadian Air Force, will leave for Canada July 11.

The picture is to be called "Captains of the Clouds." It will feature the R.C.A.F. and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

James Cagney, George Brent and Dennis Morgan will have leading roles. Some sequences will be made at North Bay and Trenton, Ont., and some in Ottawa.

The script was written by the Canadian author Norman Reilly Raine.

R.C.A.F. authorities said they had offered full co-operation with Warner Brothers Inc., in making the picture.

WANT PAY BOOSTED

Kansas City, July 3 (AP)—High-flying pilots of Trans-Continental and Western Air's giant stratoliners want their pay boosted to a level they contend is commensurate with the altitude at which they work.

A hree-member mediation board is conducting hearings on demands of the 44 pilots and co-pilots for increases of 25 to 30 per cent in their wages which Transcontinental and Western Air officials say average $9,100 a year for pilots and $3,300 for co-pilots.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

We know, because 4 out of 5 told investigators they personally prefer its taste. Your family will thank you if you serve Kellogg's tomorrow.

Flavour experts agree. Year after year, housewives have voted Kellogg's tops for flavour. But the experts, men and women with trained palates, unhesitatingly pick Kellogg's, too. 10,000 SERVE IN FARM FORCE

Additional Call Made for 2,000 Collegiate Students and Young Women for Farms

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—The Ontario Farm Service Force has reached its objective of an enrolment of 10,000 young men and women, boys and girls, to aid farmers in the province, it was announced today by the director of the scheme, A. Maclaren of the Ontario Labor Department.

To date actually more than 10,000 have been placed on farms and in orchards throughout the province. A call went out for an additional 2,000 collegiate students and young women to work on Ontario farms during the next two weeks.

The 10th Farm Service Force centre was established today at Jordan in the Niagara Peninsula, when 25 farmerettes from London entered camp to start picking fruit. An additional 25 high school girls, from Galt, will enter this centre Friday and 10 farmerettes will leave Kitchener Friday for the centre at Virgil, Ont.

80,000 MEN NOW OVERSEAS

Further Trans-Atlantic Movements of Considerable Size Planned for This Year

Ottawa, July 3 (CP)—Arrival of a new contingent of Canadian troops, the largest yet in the present war, and including the 1st Canadian army tank brigade, brings the number of Canadians serving in the United Kingdom to about 80,000 it is believed.

The last previously reported figure on the strength of the Canadian army overseas was 70,000. Further trans-Atlantic movements of considerable size are planned for this year.

The 3rd Division, now in training in Eastern Canada, and the armored division, training at Camp Borden, are to be sent across to round out the Canadian establishment which now consists of an army corps of two divisions with the army tank brigade.

The army program also calls for sending reinforcements to units now overseas as occasion requires. Part of the reason of the present recruiting drive in which 32,000 men are sought is to obtain men for reinforcements.

POLICE COURT

Charles Fox, Point Anne, and formerly a civilian employee at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, was convicted of the theft of two shirts and a pair of trousers, the property of the Canadian Government, today when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. Fox was given a three months' suspended sentence upon the payment of costs amounting to $14.25 and making restitution.

The accused man pleaded he had found the articles in a garbage pail at the Trenton Air Station, where he was employed as a janitor, on June 10th last. Lorne McDonald, who was a fellow-worker with Fox, corroborated this statement. The charge was preferred by Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson, who found the goods in Fox's home.

"Perhaps this man's knowledge of taking the goods found in garbage was scant and I'm not pressing for any strong punishment, but Government employees must realize it is a serious offence to steal from the Government," stated Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

"You knew these were Government property and you should have reported the same," added His Worship as he found Fox guilty.

Ten Haled Into Court

Bruce Martin, tax collector for Thurlow Township, hailed ten residents of the Township into court charging them yith failure to obtain their 1941 dog tag licence, as provided under Bylaw No. 957. Convictions were registered in the ten cases and the offenders ordered to pay the costs of the court, after proving possession of a dog licence.

Millard Miller, an aged man found wandering at large along the highway early today, was detained on a charge of vagrancy until his identity could be established.

Capture of Otto Kretschmer, U-Boat Ace, Told by Oiler, Who Witnessed Attack By Pack of U-Boats on a British Convoy

(By the Canadian Press)

The grim story of an attack by a pack of U-boats upon a large convoy approaching the shores of Britain and the resulting capture of Commander Otto Kretschmer, U-boat ace, is told by a Saint John man who was an eye witness of the attack.

At least three German submarines were accounted for, he said.

He is Charles Damery, 30, who was serving as an oiler on a British steamship when the attack occurred.

"Ours was the slowest ship in the convoy and we were having quite a time all the way across," he said. "We knew we were being trailed by subs and our escort destroyers were keeping a constant, sharp outlook.

"Then, all of a sudden, the attack.

"It was a bold one. They came right among us, popping up for a sight, slinging their torpedoes and then crash-diving.

Took to the Boats

"A torpedo struck us in No. 3 hold and we took to the boats. There were about 40 of us and we didn't find out until later that the explosion of the torpedo took the life of the bosun and another man.

"A torpedo passed right under our lifeboat, going for our already stricken ship. But the ship had veered off when steam was shut off and the torpedo missed her. It struck a tanker in the convoy.

"A destroyer picked us up and then went after the subs with another destroyer. Our depth charges finally caught up with the Jerries.

"Three of the subs surfaced like corks, badly disabled by the explosions. The sea was dotted with Nazi sailors. They kept yelling "Kamerad" and "Au Secour" (help.) One of the subs in the distance signalled an S.O.S. with her light.

Picked Up 45 Survivors

"We picked up about 45 survivors from the three subs. When Commander Otto Kretschmer came aboard the destroyer he gave a stiff Nazi salute, arm extended, and said 'heil Hitler.'

"The destroyer skipper said 'none of that stuff here' and Kretschmer smirked and heiled Hitler again.

"He was a hawk-faced man of about 40, I'd say, and he boasted that he'd have got more of us if he hadn't run out of torpedoes. His English was almost perfect, there was only the slightest trace of accent.

"He kept asking questions about equipment on the destroyer but outside that kept pretty mum. If he was happy or sorry about being captured, he didn't show it. The destroyer crew was mighty happy to have bagged such a big shot. He was ranked next to Gunther Prien, the U-boat commander who'd made the successful attack at Scapa Flow early in the war, but Prien is now believed dead so that made him the No. 1 prize.

Sailors Surprised

"The rank and file of the German sailors thought they were going to be liquidated for their U-boat activities. When they were told they'd be put in an internment camp in Britain they were surprised.

"One of them said: 'That's excellent. But very stupid of you. The Germans are going to own Britain in a few weeks.'"

Damery said that the U-boat pack took a heavy toll before it was mostly accounted for. It was believed a fourth sub was destroyed, he said.

Damery plans to be off to sea again soon. Another ship on which he had served was lost in an ordinary shipwreck.

Escaped Prisoner Shot

Ober Lieutenant Martin Mueller, escaped German prisoner, was shot to death when he attacked two guards, who were searching for him, with a home-made club. He was cornered on the shores of Lake Superior, a half mile from Jackfish.

Cannifton Wins Over Shannonville

Playing on their home diamond the Shannonville "Hawks" could not seem to shake the jinx that the Cannifton "Sluggers" have over them and lost by a shut-out 4-0.

Scoring three runs in the first inning on hits by L. Jarrell, J. Curley, Gannon and Bleekman and adding one in the second gave O. May another shut-out.

Maracle with a two-base hit was the only Shannonville hitter to solve May's offerings, while errors did not help the losers' cause. Line-ups:

Cannifton—L. Jarrel, 3b; Jim Curley, 1b; M. Gannon, 2b; B. Bleeckman, ss; Ed. Jarrel, c; O. May, p; I. May, cf; Hall lf; Smallhorn, rf.

Shannonville—B. Reid, 2b; B. Cook, ss; Snider, cf; Ken Juby, p; Maracle, 1b; Barbestock, 3b; P. Coutts, c; B. Houston, rf; Lewis, lf.

is considering the use of plastic

Toronto, July 3.— (CP)—Ontario is considering the use of plastic licence plates to conserve steel for war purposes, J. P. Bickell Ontario Registrar of Motor Vehicles, said today. Abandonment of front plates if steel plates are continued, is another possibility.

No action toward changing from steel to plastics has been taken, but an official is preparing figures for the Department of Highways showing comparative costs. Ontario steel plates for 1942 are being manufactured.

Ontario Facing Milk Shortage if Dry Weather Prevails

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—If prevailing dry weather continues Ontario may soon face a shortage of milk, Agriculture Minister Hon. P. M. Dewan said today. Mr. Dewan added no alarm is to be felt now but the situation may become dangerous unless the dry spell ends.

"We'll have to be optimistic," the minister said. "We'll have rain which should improve the situation."

Commenting on a statement by Roy Lick, secretary of the Ontario Milk Producers League, who said some parts of Ontario including Toronto face a shortage due to dry weather and inadequate pastures, Mr. Dewan said feed costs have risen partly because of the United States demand for concentrated meal, but he saw no explanation for a general rise in price on all types of feeds for cattle.

Mr. Lick said the situation is serious, especially in the larger centres, and he did not see much hope for improvement.

Will Help Expedite War News Censorship

London, July 3 (CP)—Senior officers of the admiralty, army and air ministries have been assigned to the Ministry of Information to expedite the censorship of war news, it was announced today.

The officers will pass on all subjects except those involving high policy. Such subjects would be referred directly to the heads of the three service ministries, it was said.

The assignment follows a series of conflicts between the M.O.I. and service ministries. The M.O.I. has felt censorship judgment should be its prerogative while the services regard the M.O.I. as a mere agency to distribute their information.

Bruce Lockhart, the author, has been appointed deputy undersecretary of Foreign Affairs to advise the M.O.I. on news concerning foreign relations.

MISS MACPHAIL URGES PLANNING

Tells Women's Institute Members Methods Should be Studied for Rehabitation After War

Kitchener, Ont., July 3 (CP)—Members of the Women's Institute were urged yesterday by Miss Agnes Macphail, former U.F.O. Member of Parliament for Gray North, to carry on with their war work but not to forget the purpose for which the institutes were formed, that of building up the community.

Miss Macphail said study should be made now of methods for rehabilitating the men of the armed forces after the war is over. "After the war," she said, "we are going to move into a kind of world where human values will be more important than material values, and in that world women will play a tremendous part in public life."

Miss Macphail said also "there is something wrong with us in Canada when we can countenance starvation besides surpluses." She told of a visit to one section in Saskatchewan where there was so much wheat it couldn't be absorbed but there was home after home "without enough flour for the next baking of bread.

She said that adult education, the co-operative movement, farm organization, trades unions and pensions at 60 for Canadians were ideals that the Women's Institutes should be considering as a means of building a new world after the war.

American Legion To Make Friendly Invasion of Canada

Canada and Toronto are to be invaded tomorrow, but not by an enemy of this country. On the contrary thousands of members of the American Legion will arrive in Toronto on Friday to attend the annual executive meeting of the Canadian Corps Association in a "Goodwill Invasion" when Canadian and American veterans of the last Great War will fraternize in the largest gathering of its kind ever held.

A large number of war veterans from the various Veteran units in Belleville will be present at this unique gathering, that is to include over 10,000 delegates from the State of Michigan alone, it was learned here today. One of the largest programs ever attempted in Canada has been arranged for the entertainment of thousands of American and Canadian Veterans, including a display of Canada's armed forces never before attempted in the Dominion. All plans are under the direction of the Canadian Corps Association and all local veterans are urged to report to the heads of their respective veteran units if they intend to journey to Toronto to attend this gathering of war veterans.

Thief Makes Sure Birds Will be Fed

Brantford, Ont., July 3 (CP) — Adding insult to injury, a chicken thief made off with 60 prize pullets belonging to Burford Township farmer then took five bushels of feed for the birds.

The owner of the chickens was attending a picnic. Neighbors saw the thief in action in daylight with a truck but thought he had bought the birds.

It was the second large theft of chickens in Brant County in a week. A St. George district farmer lost 20 hens in a midnight raid a few days ago.

Says Rumors of Prices Spread

Halifax, July 3 —(CP)— Rumors that Canadian gasoline prices are so high they are making motoring almost prohibitive are being spread through the United States, C. M. Rawding, Boston, manager of an agency for tours through Nova Scotia, said last night.

Mr. Rawding said persons who did not take the trouble to check the stories themselves and did not know the situation were being influenced not to cross into Canada.

HOW NAZI YOUTH ARE TAUGHT

Swedish Pastor Points Out Manner in Which Hitlerism Gained Control Over Young

Speaking in the City Hall auditorium last night on the subject, "How Hitler Wins the Youth", Pastor Bertil Forsgren said, "One of the common mistaken impressions that prevails outside of Germany is, that in Hitler in his appeal to youth, sought to gain the support of only the gangster type and rough element. It is true that he sought the support of that class, and inculcated a spirit of cruelty and barbarity into those who previously were not thus inclined. But in the subtlety of the Nazi appeal to all classes, he first sought to win the cream of the youth of Germany to his cause, for in so doing that he would, through their influence win all.

"The point of his technique was that he first exposed the corruption and selfishness of their former leaders, both political and religious. With a burning passion, he then made his specious challenge to them to save their country by giving him their love and cooperation. He asked them to put their faith in the Nazi regime; he asked for faithfulness and unquestioning obedience to him as leader, and finally, asked unhesitating willingness to sacrifice and serve".

Eggless Days When Eggs Were Plentiful

"I will give you two concrete illustrations of how he ingrained the spirit of sacrifice into both the youth and nation as a whole. I remember away back in 1933 in Hamburg, 6 years before the war started, we had eggless days. Why? Because the chickens were not laying? No, to teach sacrifice, and to actually put the eggs into storage for the time when war would come. Another illustration. The second largest stockyards in the world are located in Hamburg, the only larger nes obeing in Chicago, Illinois. A member of my church was employed in the stockyards. There were days in 1933, 1934 and 1935 when frequently ten thousand hogs would be slaughtered in Hamburg in one day, and the next day you could not buy a bit of pork. The same two reasons. To inculcate sacrificial service and prepare for the day of war".

Pastor Forsgren made the plea, "We must be willing to sacrifice far more than we are now doing" in the all-out effort to crush Hitlerism.

Parental Training Blotted Out

He told his listeners how at six years of age, all children in Germany must join the Hitler youth organization known as the "S. A." In Germany, public schools are operated on Saturday. Sunday being the only day without public school. But they must always attend the "S.A." on Sunday night, the one night off being during the week, when they must rest because the steady grind so tires them. Thus the religious training of the youth is completely crowded out, also parental instruction. In these youth centres, even down to the beginners at six years, they are in brown uniforms and actually carry real arms and are trained in the use of fire-arms, and put on their own demonstrations. On the march, they usually sing the following song as a theme: (translated into the English equivalent), being:

"We are the merry Hitler youth
We need no Christian virtue
For our leader, Adolph Hitler,
Is our redeemer, our intercessor".

Mr. Forsgren spoke of the great moral corruption that is a consequence of this movement of the young.

He also told of the defiant attitude of the youth of Germany towards their parents, defying them to punish them while they are wearing the 'S.A.' uniform.

The speaker closed his address with a triumphant note stating that though Hitler, supported by his fanatical youth, cannot go on for ever, and even he himself must one day die and meet God. Stressing the need of winning our youth for Christ, the pastor made a fervent appeal for a greater consecration to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Tonight (Thursday), the subject will be, "The New Nazi Religion Which Makes Hitler Its Christ". On Friday night, Mr. Forsgren's subject will be "My Experiences With the Gestapo and Why and How I was Banished from Germany". All of the evening services are held in the City Hall Auditorium at 8 o'clock.

AT THE McCARTHY

"She Knew All the Answers"

One of the sauciest, most amusing comedies of the season, Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone in "She Knew All the Answers" will more than delight movie-goers this weekend at the McCarthy Theatre.

Miss Bennett is seen in the title role of the irresistible new comedy, as a night club star who wants to marry a millionaire playboy even though his guardian doesn't approve. Mr. Tone is the guardian in question, a sour-faced symbol of ultra-conservatism until he succumbs to Miss Bennett's blandishments. The mirthful screen play penned by Harry Segall, Kenneth Earl and Curtis Kenyon is based upon a popular magazine story by Jane Allen. Charles R Rogers produced "She Knew All The Answers" and Richard Wallace directed with swift, sure understanding of sophisticated suavity. John Hubbard, Eva Arden and William Tracy are important members of the featured cast.

After seeing her elopement halted by Tone's arbitrary edict that, if it continues, playboy Hubbard will lose his inheritance, Miss Bennett talks her way into a job in one's office. He doesn't know who she is, he does know that she knows little or nothing about office routine. How little she knows is promptly revealed—she upsets the entire office, irritates her employers, destroys the equanimity of Wall Street, loses and makes a fortune and delightful efforts to make good.

In the process of making good, in order to win Tone's approval to her marriage, Miss Bennett also succeeds in upsetting Tone's dignity to such an extent that he emerges as a more-than-likeable human being.

Closing sequences of "She Knew All the Answers" strike a new, and engaging point high in hilarity. Wallace has effectively contrived to present not only the principals but their alter egos—their consciences—in happy conflict. If the McCarthy theatre screen seems somewhat overburdened at times with Bennett and Hubbards, there is no harm done it simply means twice as much comedy as before.

Charles Starrett

A real "wild west" western "Thundering Frontier" is feature presentation number two this weekend at the McCarthy Theatre and it brings back to the screen popular Charles Starrett, ace of Hollywood's cowboy stars, in the starring role, riding and scrapping as never before. You're sure to claim this the best western of any year. An excellent Walt Disney, (Mickey Mouse) cartoon and a new thrilling episode of "The Green Archer" round out a swell show from beginning to end.

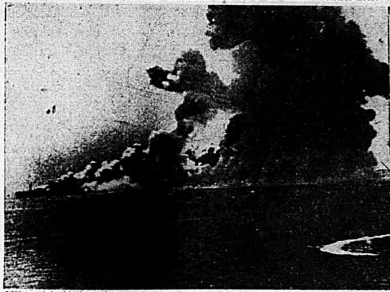
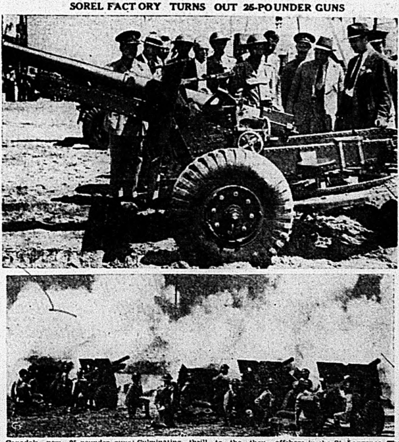
BRITISH BOMBERS SCORE ON AXIS CONVOY IN MEDITERRANEAN



A 5,000-ton Axis ship burns from bow to stern after being attacked by a British Blenheim bomber in the Mediterranean. The ship was one of a convoy spotted by a reconnaissance plane. A destroyer can be seen wheeling at the RIGHT. Other British aircraft engaging in the attack bombed a heavily ladened ship of 8,000-tons which exploded so violently that all the attacking airplanes were badly shaken. Debris was thrown in all directions and a column of smoke rose 1,500 feet.

SOREL FACTORY TURNS OUT 25-POUNDER GUNS



Canada's new 25-pounder guns went on display, TOP, for the first time during ceremonies staged at Sorel, Que., on Dominion Day. Culminating thrill to the thousands of visitors was the sight of six guns going into action and firing a salute to corvettes anchored offshore in the St. Lawrence. Three of the guns are seen. BOTTOM, which clearly shows in bold cumulous cloud formation the smoke which belched from their barrels.

WALL STREET

New York, July 3—(CP) — The buying idea predominated in today's stock market but bidders were notably shy in the cases of many leaders. Fractional advances were plentiful near the fourth hour but minus signs were seen here and there.

Among stocks Standard-Oil (N.J.) and American Woolen Pfd. moved into new high ground for the year. Up most of the time were Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Consolidated Aircraft, Bethlehem Steel, Great Northern, Santa Fe, Kennecott, Texas Corp., Woolworth and J. I. Case.

Without much climbing ability were General Motors, Chrysler, North American and Oliver Farm.

Canadian issues were strong. McIntyre led the gainers, up 1 1-2 points and Walkers advanced 1-2 and Distillers Seagram 1-4. In the bond market Canada 4s were 1-4 point higher.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—The trading in the early hours on Toronto exchange today followed the recent pattern of dull action and few changes. Gold and industrial stocks ruled a bit higher and other groups held steady. Turnover totalled 72,000 shares for the first three hours.

Brazilian had another flurry and the price firmed 1-2 to 8. Other minor gainers in the interlisted group were C.P.R., Imperial Oil and Massey-Harris Pfd. British American Oil, Gypsum and Loblaw A were down slightly.

Buffalo-Ankerite, San Antonio, Chesterville and Preston showed small gains against minor losses for MacLeod-Cockshutt, Sylvanite, Wright-Hargreaves and Pickle Crow. Steep Rock and Falconbridge were up slightly and Pend Oreille lower by a few cents, Western oils posted no changes.

Slight Advance In Egg Prices

Toronto, July 3—After being extremely light all last week, butter receipts continued to fall off sharply on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Top-grade egg prices advance one-half cent a dozen on a firm market.

The butter market held firm due to the lack of fresh receipts and the good demand. The firm undertone was attributed in part to speculative demand, a better demand for prints and to the fact that some creameries appear to be storing for their own use. The Ontario Creamery Association reports that production of creamery butter for the week ending June 21st. amounted to 1,399,715 pounds, compared with 1,464,955 pounds for the same week last year. This represents a decrease of 4.45 per cent.

With receipts not sufficient to meet the good demand, the egg market opened firm and held firm all day as top-grade egg prices advanced an additional ½ cent a dozen. An increase of 1 cent a dozen was felt in the retail section.

Auction Sale For Bombed Victims Nets $560

It was a heterogeneous collection of articles, animals and whatnots, that the good folk of the city and district took to Cannifton School Grounds yesterday where an auction sale was held for the benefit of the bombed war victims of embattled Britain.

But they had the desired effect. For when the smoke of the auctioneering battle had cleared the handsome sum of $560 was realized, and will be forwarded to the Toronto Evening Telegram Fund for war victims.

The vital need for funds to assist the heroic people of Britain was paramount in the minds of those who so generously supported the sale. They came from near and far, and their offerings were many and variable. They brought practically everything in the calendar. Young rabbits and old rabbits, mewing kittens and stately cats added to the animal collection but the proceeds added to the general fund. The buying was fast and furious and the gathering momentum of fun in buying and selling was climaxed in the substantial amount realized.

Norman Montgomery, well-known local auctioneer, was the hardest-worked man on the ground but he came through with flying colors. Mr. Montgomery as well as Reeve Roscoe Robson of Thurlow Township and his trusty band of directors gave their efforts gratis to the general cause.

Pripet Centre Of Hitler's Attempt

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 3 (AP)—Moscow contends that Nazi drives on both sides of the critical Pripet Marsh area have been slowed down while the Germans tell of Red armies trapped, smashed and captured east of the marshes. On the surface these statements appear to be in sharp disagreement, yet they both may be true.

Accepting at face value the Nazi versions of 100,000 Red soldiers and a vast booty in tanks taken in the Bialystok trap, east of the marshes, it does not necessarily mean collapse of the Russian centre. If the Russians are correct in stating that Nazi panzer spearheads eastward of Minsk have been stalled, and that the German advance thru' the Lwow-Luck gateway to the Ukraine also has been halted, some sort of stabilization of the front on the so-called "Stalin Line" may be possible.

That line follows the general course of the old Russian frontier of two years ago, before the buffer defenses in Poland, the Baltic States and Bessarabia were erected. It is reported to be fortified in depth, and only in the Minsk-Smolensk area has it yet been pierced so far as either Russian or German claims indicate.

There is another aspect to the German claim of 100,000 Red troops captured in the Bialystok trap. Estimates as to the number of Russian troops in the trap, the exact nature of which has never been quite clear, have run from 300,000 to 500,000. These estimates did seem credible, but if they were accurate the bulk of the armies in the trap may have escaped.

In any case Moscow would not write the Bialystok operation off as a total loss if it proved to be an effective rear-guard action, which helped stem the tide of Nazi advances both north and south of the marshes. It is those thrusts that carry the danger of a great Red army debacle in the centre.

An accurate estimate of the situation is not possible on the meagre official advices afforded by either belligerent. That the Russian plight is grave cannot be doubted, yet German failure to force the Pripet bastion on a wide front before Russian armies on both extended flanks could fall back to the long established defence lines would be as serious a setback to Hitler. He is staking everything on a quick and crushing field victory in that control sector of the battlefront.

GIRLS AND WOMEN ASKED TO RESGISTER

Registration for girls and young women of the ages of twenty years and over for work in a large munitions plant near Toronto was opened in the Employment Office on Campbell Street today.

According to Superintendent W. D. Ross ,the wages offered in the new plant will start at 30 cents per hour. Board in the district is quoted at being from six to seven dollars weekly. Married women are eligible for the work providing they are free to do so.

The girls and women are needed immediately and Superintendent Ross urged that registration be made at once. Potential registrants can secure additional information at the Employment Office.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Stalin's speech broadcast over the Soviet radio to the Russian people is unusually realistic and candid for the declaration of a Soviet leader. It indicates the Kremlin is not discounting the possibility of enormous German successes and has a plan to deal with them.

To cope with this situation he prescribes the "scorched earth" policy that saved Russia in the Napoleonic invasion and has mired down Japan in the current war in China.

Already the Germans admit finding some sectors they have occupied completely devastated. This is a change from Nazi experience in previous invasions, when rolling stock, food and oil supplies in many cases were left intact by fleeing troops and civilians.

It is said that Hitler counts on feeding his armies off the land they occupy and that this so far has proved practicable.

Asked to Blow up Bridges

Stalin calls on every man and woman to "foment guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, roads, damage telephone and telegraph lines and to set fire to forests, stores and transports."

From this line of conduct advised for the people, it follows that when, and if, the Germans reach Moscow, they will find the city in ruins and no one in authority left with whom to negotiate, just as Napoleon found the Russian metropolis, when he entered in triumph expecting to be welcomed by the nobles.

As for the immediate military situation, Stalin says the main forces of the Red army are now coming into action. He sees Soviet resistance growing more stubborn each mile with the German advance.

The Bolshevist leader defines the political issue of the war as whether the Russian people prefer life under Soviet rule, grim as it has been, to being "Germanized" under the Nazi system of enslavement.

In effect, he tells them life under Stalin is preferable to life under Hitler, the better of two evils.

Cannifton Hurler Limits Shannonville To Lone Single

With Orval May limiting the homesters to one lone single, the second-place Cannifton nine set the third slot Shannonville "Hawks" down with a sparkling 4-0 victory in a scheduled South Hastings League baseball fixture played at Shannonville last evening.

Ken. Juby, Shannonville No. 1 hurler, got away to a bad start in the early innings and was nicked for four runs before the third inning, but for the balance of the route settled away and held the winners off the score sheet.

For the winners, Cearley was the best offensively, getting two safeties including one double, while Lorne Jarrell, Ed Jarrell and Bleekman also went well at the plate. For the losers, Maracle was the only batter to hit safely as May turned the Shannonville batters back almost in succession.

Batteries—Cannifton: May and Ed Jarrell; Shannonville: Ken Juby and Coutts.

WORKMEN BUSY CUTTING WEEDS

With workmen of the City Public Works Department busily cutting weeds and other growths in the city, City Engineer Charles Mott today urged residents to co-operate in the movement. While a number of house occupants have conformed to an earlier request to rid their property of weeds, a like number have failed to do so.

It is not fair to those residents who cut their weeds, to have seed from uncut growths deposited on their properties from a neighboring lot, the engineer pointed out.

Inspection will be made next week, he added, and uncut weeds will be destroyed and the cost charged to occupants of the house or property involved.

WINDOW BROKEN IN STORE FRONT

Upon hearing the breaking of glass along Front St. shortly after three o'clock this morning, P. C. William Evans investigated the cause of the noise only to discover that a large plate glass window leading into the Ashley fur establishment, had been broken. Further investigation by the officer resulted in a member of the R.C.A.F. Service Police being questioned at the police station. The Air Force policeman admitted breaking the window and assured Sergeant Arthur Booth he would make full restitution, which amounted to $41.

U. S. Endorses Proposal Made By Uruguay

Washington, July 3 (AP)— The United States, holding that "the safety of the Americas hangs in the balance today," wholeheartedly endorsed the proposal of Uruguay that the 21 American Republics exchange specific pledges of "constructive and practical co-operation" for defence.

The endorsement carried an appeal to the other Republics to subscribe to the proposal because the western hemisphere was facing a threat of "aggression without comparison in history."

Under the Uruguayan proposal, submitted to all hemisphere republics June 21, the nations would pledge themselves not to "treat as a belligerent any American country which, in defence of its own rights, should find itself in a state of war with nations of other continents."

(Uruguay, which took the same action in the first Great War, submitted the proposal June 21. Canadian officials expressed satisfaction at that time.

Canada Not a Member

(Canada, the only nation of the Americas at war, is not a member of the Pan-American Union but has been referred to by President Roosevelt as a member of the Pan-American Compact.)

(The practical effect of all the republics uniting in such a policy of benevolent neutrality would be that the United States—if it became involved in war—could utilize the naval bases, airfields and other defence facilities of South and Central American nations.)

The United States reply to Uruguay's proposal was made public last night by the State Departmen.t The note, signed by Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, pointed out that the United States already has pledged itself to permit the other American republics to utilize all United States defence facilities and has provided practical financial assistance to the other American nations to aid in strengthening the continent's defence.

Main Duck Island Bought by New Yorker

Point Traverse, July 3—The Main Duck Island comprising of some one thousand acres of land, 22 miles from Cape Vincent, 40 miles west of Kingston and 12 miles off the Point Traverse mainland of Prince Edward County, has been purchased by a wealthy New York City land promoter.

The Main Duck was originally held in trust by the Crown for the Allenwick tribe. The first deed ever made out for the island was some forty-five years ago. Obscure French histories give vague and hurried references of wrecks on the Isle au Couis.

The Main Duck was owned by Claude W. Cole up until the time of his death in May, 1938, which he sovereigned over for some forty years. Since her husband's demise, Mrs. Cole was owner of the island before being purchased just recently.

3 NAZI CITIES

A German supply ship, plying the English Channel near the French coast, was struck by a projectile from a torpedo-carrying plane.

British pilots said stiff resistance was encountered from Nazi aircraft and anti-aircraft batteries in these operations, in which the R. A. F. again outclassed the enemy.

In these operations four British bombers were lost. One German fighter was shot down in flames over the Netherlands by one of Britain's heaviest bombers.

Quiet in England

The British Isles enjoyed one of the quietest nights since start of the air war. No bombs fell although a few enemy planes flew inland.

The R.A.F. night offensive followed a fierce hammering of enemy positions yesterday and last night on the coastal and inland areas of Northern France. Eighteen Nazi fighters were shot down in daylight operations yesterday. Ten British planes were lost. The American Eagle fighting squadron took part in the sorties and destroyed three Nazi aircraft.

Main target was a large airdrome not far from the factory town of Lille and high explosive bombs burst on the runways and buildings as the bombers swooped low despite a heavy barrage from ground guns and attacks on Nazi planes. A railway junction near Lille also was blasted.

Heavy explosions rolled across the Channel from the direction of Boulogne last night after several squadrons of British planes roared across the straits.

Noted Producer Dies in New York

New York, July 3 (AP)—Sam H. Harris, 69, one of Broadway's most successful theatrical managers and producers, died today.

He was thrown on his own resources when he was 11 and within six years had organized several entertainments. He combined his talents with those of George M. Cohan, the actor, from 1904 to 1920. This was resumed in 1936.

Among the successful shows Harris produced independently were "Little Old New York," "Rain," "Cocoanuts", "Animal Crackers," "Of Thee I sing," "As Thousands Cheer," "You Can't Take it With You," "Of Mice and Men."

He was married to Mrs. Kathleen Brent Watson, sister of George Brent, motion picture actor, in March, 1939.

NAZI SPEARHEADS

Only Local Action

As for other fronts, including the far north Murmansk sector, where the Russians claimed to have defeated about two infantry divisions attacking on the Sredni Peninsula, the latest Russian communique reported only "night patrol activity and fighting of local character."

Reports on the Borisov sector, deepest point of the German thrust into Russia proper, elaborated an earlier admission that the invaders had pushed about 80 miles beyond Minsk to Bobruisk. Bobruisk is about 70 miles east of Slutsk which apparently is caught with Minsk, Borisov and Bobruisk in a fan-shaped offensive from the break-through at Baranowicze, in Poland under the old Russian border.

An earlier communique said that the German spearheads aimed at Moscow had been blocked in the Borisov-Slutsk-Bobruisk region.

Borisov is 50 miles northeast of Minsk on the motor road to Moscow, which lies approximately 370 miles further on to the northeast. Slutsk is 60 miles due south of the White Russian capital while Bobruisk is 100 miles to the southeast.

(Neither Russian nor German military communiques thus far have made direct mention of Minsk and military observers believe the Nazis by-passed the city in order to get a hold on the Minsk-Moscow highway.)

The struggle around Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port at the head of an important rail line from Leningrad, led to "stubborn and fierce fighting", the Russians said.

"In the direction of Murmansk", the communique said, "our troops halted by fire and counter-attacks an enemy offensive of about two divisions against the Sredni Peninsula and to the southeart inflicted a great defeat upon him".

The Russian air force was said to have bombed the Rumanian capital of Bucharest, blowing up an arsenal.

In the fighting in White Russia, Red Army infantry units "destroyed hundreds of enemy tanks" in Nazi mechanized units cut off from the infantry," the communique added.

London, July 3 (CP)—An authoritative British source said today it was "quite possible" isolated Russian forces had been mopped up by the Germans in their campaign against the Soviet.

But he reported that there was "a general feeling the German drives were slowing up."

The reason, he said, might be consolidation of communications harried by Russian units and preparations for a drive across the Dvina River southwest of Leningrad.

He acknowledged that a definitely powerful thrust had been developing in the Dvinsk area which would strike at Leningrad and the industrial regions near that second city of Russia, saying this movement had been "working up" for 48 hours.

In the drive into the Minsk region toward Moscow, fighting is "on a depth of 200 miles," this source said, "and it looks as though large bodies of Russian troops around the Bialystok area, west of Minsk, have been mopped up by the Germans."

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Hugh Powell had asked that they all meet him in the living room of the Hacienda, and at four in the afternoon they all gathered to hear that Hugh had been able to discover nothing of any particular importance as bearing on what had happened last night. It seemed that the crew of a German oil tanker had scuttled the ship to avoid capture, had made their way in the lifeboats to this island, and had later been taken off by tramp steamers assigned to that job. There was no indication that the men had been smuggled ashore along the coast as Hugh suspected; a very quiet but intensive investigation was going on—but for the moment there was no progress to report.

"There's just one thing I'd like to ask for you all, if I may," said Hugh. "You've been through an unpleasant experience — that's, of course, putting it rather mildly. But—could you possibly manage to stick around for a little while? I'll guarantee that you are guarded and that no harm befalls you—though of course I can imagine that your first reaction is a desire to get away from here—but fast!"

"Who's going away—but fast?" Terry was almost pugnacious about it. "Bill and I were invited for a month, and we haven't been here two weeks yet. Nobody's going to give us the grand bounce until our month is up!"

Hugh grinned at her. "Good! I hope the rest of you feel the same way."

Betsy saw Lucy and Orwin exchange swift, uneasy glances, and Betsy said quietly, "There's really no reason, Mr. Powell, why our guests need to stay if they'd be more comfortable somewhere else. You see, we have a long waiting list of prospective guests who will be glad to come if we send them a wire—so that if those who are now here feel uneasy about staying—"

"You won't get me away from here with a team of mules," said Natalie firmly. "My life has been a bit on the dull side. Of course, I'd like some assurance that my husband won't get bashed on the head again—"

"Then you see to it that you don't get yourself kidnaped, my angel," said Brooks.

"Speaking for myself, and I may speak for you, my dear?"—the major turned deferentially to his wife—"we wouldn't think of missing whatever comes next."

"Same here," said Orwin. Lucy smiled faintly at Betsy and lifted her shoulders in a tiny shrug of submission to the word of her lord and master.

DONALD hesitated as his turn to speak arrived. June looked at him swiftly, and after a moment he said, "I am afraid I can't speak for my wife. I believe she has commitments in Hollywood the last of this month. For my part, however, I expect to stay just as long as you'll let me. This looks like a real story, and I seem to be the only newshound on the scent. Maybe it'll be one of those 'scoops' the movies are always talking about."

"Swell!" said Hugh, and stood up. "You're all a bunch of regular fellows and I appreciate it. You'll be guarded, however. The new boatman you hired, Forman, is one of our men. He's got a system rigged up by which he can summon help from the mainland at a moment's notice."

They all trooped down to the pier with Hugh to see him off. And when the boat carrying him to the mainland had become a small dot in the distance, they turned and looked at each other.

"What do we do now?" asked Betsy.

Terry laughed and slid her hand through Bill's uninjured arm. "Well, I don't know just what you're going to do, but as for Bill and me, we're going to take up our honey moon where it was so unpleasantly interrupted. So long, folks—see you later."

"A shameless wench," Bill apologized for her as she turned away. "But it's the way she was brought up. You'll excuse her, I hope."

The others trailed away. June and Donald walked without speaking until they were out of ear shot of the others. June stopped then and looked up at Donald. There was pain and hurt in her eyes as she said quietly, "So you read Henderson's telegram. That wasn't very sporting of you, Don. You must have known that if I had wanted you to see it, I'd have shown it to you."

Donald nodded. "But it was something I had to see. After all, June, you ARE Jacobi—"

"I'm not. I'm Mrs. Donald Heath."

"It's no good, June," said Donald grimly. "I must have been insane to let you talk me into this."

She went white beneath the words, but Donald pretended not to see or to hear and went doggedly on, "I knew you were as far out of my reach as the stars the first time the paper sent me to interview you."

"My dearest dear," said June shakily,—I'm no further away from you than the curve of your arm. I've never been. Oh, Don, dearest, we've been all over this before—again and again—"

It's no use, June. I'll never be anything but a hack newspaper guy. The best I can ever hope for is a hundred a week—and that's not enough to buy you silk stockings."

"Then I'll wear cotton."

"Don't be childish,' said Don almost savagely. "Be sensible—be reasonable—use your head—'

June straightened beneath the sting of his words and her eyes met his steadily, almost coldly. "You're right. I have been childish. I've used my heart instead of my head. I roped you into this marriage, and since you're convinced that it was all wrong—you're so very wise—no doubt you're right about that, too. I'm sorry I've been so stupid. I won't trouble you again."

She turned because the tears threatened and she wouldn't weep there before him; she had clung to him, had thrown herself into his arms, weeping, protesting her love for him; she had actually begged him to marry her. She had fought down his protests that he had nothing to give her in exchange for what she would give up by marrying him; he wouldn't be just an appendage to the career of a great musical artiste. He wouldn't live her way—and he had tried to prove to her that she couldn't live his. But she had loved him so terribly that she had made a small package of her pride and had offered it to him, all wrapped in the shining gold and blue of her love. She had humbled herself, and he had married her. And now, less than a month after the wedding, he was telling her that it had been a mistake.

Well, she couldn't plead any more; couldn't humble herself any further. She had been in the very dust at his feet, and he had said that it wasn't enough. She crept back to the small gay cottage that had been like a shrine for their love and, like a wounded animal that crawls into its burrow to nurse its pain, she went inside, closing the door against the bright, golden sunshine that seemed a mockery now.

On the beach, behind the friendly shelter of a gaily striped umbrella, Natalie, Mrs. Edmonds and Betsy lazed away the rest of the afternoon, talking idly, going over and over the happenings of the night before and the things Hugh Powell had said.

MISHAP UNEXPLAINED

Los Angeles, July 3 — (AP)—Bound for Vladivostok with 80,000 barrels of gasoline, the 7925-ton Russian motor tanker Donbass rammed 20 feet into a dock here last night. The mishap was unexplained. The vessel was taken to anchorage for damage inspection.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Saddlemates"

The Three Mesquiteers always ring the bell Republic's cowboy starring trio, consisting of Bob Livingston, Bob Steele and Rufe Davis, score again in "Saddlemates," which is now playing at the Capitol.

The newest of the blue ribbon series deals with the adventures of the Mesquiteers as rangers with the Red River Patrol detailed to seek an elusive chieftain who is constantly stirring up uprisings.

When "long swords"—or soldiers are ordered to take over the Ranger post, the boys are none too pleased over the prospect of taking orders from officers rather than rangers, but the commanding officer had a lovely daughter—played most effectively by Gale Storm—so the boys decided to stay on a while and have a taste of army life.

The action follows fast and faster from this point, rising to a smashing climax when the wagon train carrying the Colonel's wife is attacked in a spectacular action sequence.

"Melody for Three"

A celebrated father might have never become acquainted with his talented young son had it not been for the efforts of the famous "Dr. Christian" in the new film, "Melody for Three." In the title role, star Jean Hersholt brings an estranged couple together and introduces the father to his son for the first time. It is a touching story of son and parent separated through a marital misunderstanding.

In addition to the interesting sequences provided by the story, "Melody for Three" boasts an impressive musical background with such famous international artists as Toscha Seidel and Constantin Bakaleinikoff contributing to its excellence.

This new film is the fifth in a curent series of "Dr. Christian" pictures based on Hersholt's famous radio program of the same name, which is heard by more than twenty million.

Fay Wray and Walter Woolf King provide the romantic interest as the estranged parents of the young violin prodigy played by Schuyler Standish. Lovely Astrid Allwyn is the "other woman" and Maude Eburne plays her familiar role of housekeeper to "Dr. Christian." The cast also presents such radio personalities as comediennes Irene Ryan and 'Cobina" and double-talk artist, Cliff Nazarro.

The same double-feature program also includes the thrilling final chapter of Zane Grey's "King of the Royal Mounted" and a late news reel.

AT THE BELLE

"Meet John Doe"

"Meet John Doe" the new Frank Capra picture starring Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck is now playing at the Belle Theatre.

"Meet John Doe" was produced and directed by Frank Capra at the Warner studios in Burbank, Calif., from a script by Robert Riskin, his collaborator on the series of outstanding films that includes "It Happened One Night", "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town", and "You Can't Take it With You". The Riskin script was based on a story by Richard Connell. Cooper, it will be remembered, played the starring role in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Barbara Stanwyck, too, is no novice to Capra productions, having won her first big film success in an earlier Capra picture, "Ladies of Leisure" and having starred in three other Capra productions before she was cast in "Meet John Doe".

Besides Mr. Cooper and Miss Stanwyck, the cast of "Meet John Doe" includes Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, James Gleason, Irving Bacon, Gene Lockhart, Rod La Rocque, Spring Byington, Regis Toomey and many many other well known players. There are more than 137 speaking roles in the film, and over four thousand extras were used in the many crowd scenes. A superb symphonic musical score by Dmitri Tiomkin accompanies the film.

The plot of "Meet John Doe" was kept secret during the period of production, all members of the cast, technical workers and others engage in its preparation being pledged to silence as to what went on on the closed sets. The secret has been well kept and the story of "Meet John Doe" will be revealed to the public at the Belle Theatre where it is now being shown.

"Blood and Sand"

Starting this week-end at the Belle is the latest big production by that master movie maker, Rouben Mamoulian, —"Blood and Sand". The picture is photographed entirely in rich, glowing Technicolor and stars Tyrone Power and Rita Hayworth. Only this new improved technicolor could have brought to the screen faithfully the emotional intensity of Ibanez' immortal novel of life and death at the bull fights of Spain.

What It Means When a Hospital Is Bombed

From the Liverpool Post

The history of hospital service, with its long record of devoted, selfless work, can scarcely show a parallel to the events which occurred at Mill Road Hospital, Liverpool, when that large municipal hospital was hit during a recent raid on Merseyside.

The hospital had the ill-fortune to be one of the early victims of the raid and the whole of the rescue work was carried out to the accompaniment of falling bombs, gun-fire, the blaze of conflagrations and all the other accompaniments of a heavy raid. It is a measure of the heroism of all concerned that during the height of what the Germans claimed to be one of the heaviest raids ever launched against this country, some 400 patients from the hospital were rescued from the shattered buildings or assembled at a point of vantage, and driven through the shell-spattered streets to other institutions, and that the whole of the work was completed four hours after the hit was sustained.

In view of the extent of the damage inflicted upon the hospital — several wards, the X-ray and emergency departments, and an ambulance station were completely wrecked—it is remarkable that casualties were not heavier than was actually the case. But a number both of the hospital staff and of the patients lost their lives.

From another point of view the fact that the hospital was hit early limited the number of casualties, as they had just begun to receive injured people from other parts of the city, and had there been more in the hospital there would have been more people in the worst affected parts of the building and the death toll would inevitably have been higher.

The first explosion was followed by fires which originated in the ambulance and mobile first aid post, but by brilliant work on the part of the A.F.S. squad attached to the hospital these were subdued within a few moments.

An operation was actually taking place when the hospital was hit, and piles of debris fell in the operating theatre, killing some of the personnel in attendance and injuring others, but, although the first incisions had been made on the patient, a young Greek seaman, he was rescued, unconscious, of course, and taken to another hospital, where the operation was completed.

There was no panic, either among the patients or staff. The staff marshalled all the patients who could be rescued—the overwhelming majority of them fortunately — into the out-patients' department.

Almost immediately A. R. P. workers and rescue squads were on the spot, and the neighbors living by the hospital came over in great numbers, disregarding their own safety, to help with rescues, and to boil hot water, and render other services. Ambulances and buses were soon on the spot and in these the patients were quickly taken away to other hospitals and institutions.

Of the hospital staff, the assistant medical superintendent, Dr. W. G. Grey, was killed, as was the assistant matron, Miss Handley, and two medical students, and several nurses and other members of the staff. The matron, Miss Gertrude Riding, was severely injured and the medical superintendent, Dr. Leonard Findlay, was also injured, but he refused even to discuss his own injuries when seen by a Post representative on his return to duty. He paid a glowing tribute to the staff of the hospital.

"We always knew they would do well if anything happened," said Dr. Findlay. "But they excelled themselves. It was almost a privilege to have been in it because of the really wonderful spirit everyone showed."

Asked about deeds of bravery, he said: "There were really so many brave and courageous actions by the staff that night, and so many outstanding incidents of devotion to duty and individual initiative in the very confused conditions, that, until we get them all recorded, it would be invidious to mention any of them. Everyone went about their jobs, and did what had to be done, without the slightest thought of danger, though the raid was going on the whole time. It is really impossible to speak too highly of them."

★ There was no "R.S.V.P." on the invitation issued by the Prime Minister of Canada to the people of the United States in a recent Canadian Government Travel Bureau advertisement but a touching and unusual reply appeared in Mr. King's mail from C. B. Edwards of Wichita, Kansas. No. 1 shows the method Mr. Edwards used in reaching the "P.M." Nos. 2 and 3 reproduce the correspondence card enclosed in the envelope.

"Many of us in Wichita will surely visit your great country this coming season", the writer states. "Our hearts are with your people and our English cousins in this hour of trial and we extend you our hand of fellowship."

The Prime Minister has sent a message of thanks.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, My, such a day as I put in yestidday, I didn't have a moment for myself, and even if I had I wouldn't of known what to do with it, I was so busy. I declare I still ake all over just from shear running in circles, she said.

Well, yestidday is over, fortunately, pop said, and ma said, That's what you say, I mean today threatens to be even harder, in fact it bids fair to dwarf yestidday into the shade. O deer, you men only imagine you know the inner meaning of hard work, with your cut and dry routines, she said.

I bet you're right at that, I've often had no desire to be a woman, pop said. My advice is, take it easy today. If a few things dont get done, well what of it, they'll have lots of company in the billions of things that have failed to get done since mankind started to get busy, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum, that's mighty sweet of you, I'm afraid there's very little I can conscientiously neglect, but just a same it's refreshing to know that you have my comfort at heart.

Every minute and nothing elts but, pop said. For Peet sake let things slide for a change. THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Treating the Lazy, Bowel Type of Constipation

I know a mother who had her three children up in the morning about fifteen minutes earlier than was necessary. The fact that they were never late for school was note-worthy but the real reason was that she did not want them to have to hurry their breakfast and still have plenty of time to go to stool before they went to school. It is allowing the natural desire to go to stool pass by, in their hurry, that is often the beginning of constipation.

What is true for children is also true for adults. The hurried breakfast and not following the natural impulse to go to stool that Nature meant man to follow at this particular time, is the cause of the commonest form of constipation. This is called the atonic type because the bowel has lost its tone due to its impulses being neglected.

I have spoken before of the benefit derived from eating a large breakfast slowly; the weight of this large breakfast sends the impulses down the entire digestive tract from the stomach to lower bowel.

Men and women who have to engage in physical work usually have a large intestine with good "tone" as exercise stimulates bowel action.

When the individual is not engaged in physical work, or does not take physical exercise, the eating of a large unhurried breakfast, and establishing a stool habit immediately after breakfast, is usually sufficient to prevent the atonic or lazy bowel type of constipation.

If this does not prevent constipation, then more rough foods should be eaten as rough foods rub or irritate the lining of the large bowel and stimulate its muscular walls to squeeze and push the wastes in the bowel downwards.

Drinking of water or other liquid before beginning the meal has a stimulating influence on the muscles of the intestines.

Rough foods, some of which should be eaten every day, are: fresh or canned fruits, raw fruits with skins; one cooked and one raw vegetable daily such as celery, tomates, cabbage, lettuce; whole grain cereals and while grain bread; some fat such as butter or bacon at breakfast to help empty the gall bladder.

Remember, rough foods are for the lazy bowel type of constipation. They can do harm in the "spastic" type of constipation which is caused by nervousness and emotional disturbances.

You'll be surprised how easy we can follow you . . . just tell us where you're going!

Paris Declines Germany's Bids For Leadership

Making of Fine Clothes Remains Big Industry in Former French Capital With Nazi Officers Big Customers

Ottawa (CP)—The Nazis fancy themselves in the role of "grand couturier" but their efforts so far to tranfers the French fashion industry to Germany or adapt it to Nazi ideas or needs have been unsuccessful. Clarissa Wolcott, fashion expert, made this clear in an article in The Living Age.

Miss Wolcott told how Paris as the world's former fashion centre is faring one year after German occupation and said: "There is little likelihood the chic Frenchwoman, whatever the difficulties are today, will appear in a Mother Hubbard embroidered with swastikas."

The Nazi orders were that French fashions "must not express the frivolous, but must reflect the ideals of domestic love, maternity, the kitchen and purification" but the French have their own way of doing things.

One couturier, wrote Miss Wolcott, followed orders to the letter and designed a barrel skirt, very wide and curving over the hips and narrow at the knees. She said it had "a murderous effect on women whose figures express the ideals of domestic love or the kitchen."

Paris Before and After

Couture still is France's second most important industry, employing between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 workers, said Miss Wolcott. They were engaged in making everything which goes into women's clothing as well as cosmetics, perfumes, jewellery and accessories of all kinds.

Though many other cities are proclaiming themselves successors to Paris, Miss Wolcott said none have succeeded so far in filling the place which that city has left vacant for the moment. "Every French artisan puts a wealth of creative impulse and a tremendous artistic heritage into the creation of even a new button."

At the time of the fall of France many leading couturiers were scattered. It is estimated that there were 80,000 dress-making houses in Paris alone. Though most of these were small, at least 200 had more than 500 employees and some 25 had over 1,000. Of these 15 or 20 were those who held the enviable name of "haute couture."

Of these Balinciaga went to Spain, Paquin to London and one or two to New York. "Only Chanel accepted the invitation of the Nazis to go to Berlin to dress the German 'first ladies' and that is perhaps because she was already in difficulties in Paris," Miss Wolcott wrote.

French couture, though it refused to leave Paris, was ordered to carry on and in the spring of 1941 collections had to be shown as usual It is reported that Goering appeared in mufti, carrying his jewelled marshal's baton but was "crowded out of the house of Molyneux by the large attendance of German officers." He went to Paquin's Paris shop and ordered 20 gowns for his wife.

Lack of Materials

Real plight of the famous dressmaking trade, however, is the lack of materials. New clothes this spring were made out of old ones, from curtains, drapes, blanketing and felts. Hats by the internationally known "Agnes" were trimmed with gilded wood shavings.

The difficulties other nations have in taking the place of Paris in the dressmaking field is that the industry in France has been built up over centuries and the hundreds of thousands of employees—mostly girls and women—put in a long apprenticeship. They began at 13 or 14 years of age and attended classes in trade schools supported by the government. They were given intensive training and a thorough knowledge of the history of textiles, art and the elements of design.

Unable to lure the industry to Berlin, Miss Wolcott reported that Bermany has taken the more indirect method of gaining control by buying up the industries which now are obviously in difficulties due both to lack of materials and markets.

If you suffer from stomach troubles, sluggish liver, kidney weakness, sleeplessness, constipation, headaches, nervousness or any of the long train of distressing symptoms of faulty assimilation and elimination, benefit from the experiences of other well-known local men and women who have taken Syntona Herbal Tonic. You'll know then what a really fine medicine this is. You, too, may know what it is to be free from muscular aches and pains or fatigued, irritable feelings. Read here the splendid experience of Mr. Gus. Sebastian, 451 MacNab St. North, Hamilton, Ontario, as reported recently:

"In the last three or four years I was greatly troubled with stomach gas, cramps and nausea. I suffered with constipation and dizzy, bilious spells, my head ached and throbbed and spots floated before my eyes. At night I would lie awake with gas pains and then in the mornings I felt tired out and nervous. My tongue was always coated and there was a bad taste in my mouth.

"That is the condition I was in until a few weeks ago when I began taking Syntona, but to-day I feel so different that I think others should know about this medicine. I can eat what I like now and don't have the slightest trouble with my stomach. It is great to be once again free of those cramps and headaches. My nerves are not jumpy any more. I sleep well and I arise mornings feeling rested and energetic."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

NAZIS SUFFER HEAVY DEFEAT AT BOBRUISK

Russians Waging Terrific Battle On Berezina River

Nazi Advance to Gain Stranglehold On Ukraine Temporarily Halted Red Communique Claims

AIR FORCE ACTIVE

Moscow, July 4 (AP)—The Red army declared today that the Germans had been checked in their three main offensives into Soviet territory by counter-attack, in one phase of which 160 German tanks were reported destroyed by a combination of artillery fire and the Russians' own tank assaults.

The High Command illustrated the ferocity of the battle of tanks with a story of victory won by a junior lieutenant who vanquished five German tanks that had closed in on his machine.

He smashed four of the five with his tank cannon, a communique said, and then, in desperate effort, he thrust his machine at the limit of its speed into the remaining tank, smashing it. Whether the junior lieutenant lived to accept the tribute of the High Command was not known.

Teamwork of infantry, artillery and tank forces was represented in the story of an infantry company that located German machine-gun positions and a tank concentration near a village identified only as 'X' Shellfire reduced the machine-gun positions, the communique said, and "our tanks effected a lightning assault on the enemy."

"The battle resulted in destruction of 160 German tanks and many guns," said the communique.

On the northern front the Russians said their forces had taken new positions while in the central sector, in the battle of the Berezina, a "heavy defeat" was administered the Germans.

German Forces at Border Between Latvia and Russia Proper Says High Command

WAR EQUIPMENT TAKEN

Berlin, July 4 (AP)—The German high command claimed today its forces thrusting toward Moscow have crossed the Berezina River at several places.

The daily communique claimed the Red army is in retreat on the whole eastern front despite difficult road conditions.

North of the Berezina River front the high command claimed German forces had reached the border between Latvia and Russia proper.

The communique raised again the German contention that the Nazi blow against Russia was struck just as the Red army was poised for an assault into Central Europe.

General Maps Found

"Among booty scrutinized yesterday," it asserted, "general staff maps were found which served as a last clue of the aggressive intentions of the Soviet Russian armed forces.

"While before the occupation by Soviet Russian armed forces there were only a total of 90 airfields in Bessarabia, Poland, Lithuania and Latvia, this number within a short period was increased to 814 partly permanent air bases."

Nazi spokesmen, in discussing the booty claimed by the high command, said they thought Russian industry would be unable to replace the losses in equipment allegedly suffered by the Soviet forces.

The controlled commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland claimed much of the Russians' best equipment was destroyed in an attempt to hold the Germans at the border and that armored columns plunging deeper into the Soviet are adding daily to the toll.

No Fresh Overnight News

The public was given little fresh overnight news concerning the progress of these columns, which the Nazi propaganda and news agency, D.N.B., contended was being affected by unfavorable weather.

D.N.B. acknowledged the Russians were offering "obstinate resistance," though the Nazi high command boasted yesterday "it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken."

Dienst Aus Deutschland claimed progress was being made on the Finnish front, where German and Finnish troops have been reported pushing toward the Arctic Russian port of Murmansk.

On the southern end of the battlefront, German and Rumanian troops were claimed to be advancing after crossing the Prut River into Bessarabia. Late dispatches failed to indicate depth of this penetration.

Mme. P. Casgrain Tells Story of Churchill

Victoria, July 4 (CP)—Another story was added to the collection which have been told about Winston Churchill when Madame Pierre Casgrain, of Montreal, addressed convention delegates of the Canadian Home Economics Association and the Businses and Professional Women's Clubs here last night.

Describing the struggle women have made to obtain recognition in public life, Madame Casgrain said that before the Great War Winston Churchill was none too popular with women's movements.

One wrote to him, "I like your mustache no better than your politics."

"Don't worry," he replied, "you won't come in contact with either."

"He lost the mustache," said Madame Casgrain, "but he has since won the women's approval and their vote."

BRITISH INDIAN FORCE OCCUPIES DEIR-EZ-ZOR

Drives From Iraq into Eastern Syria Along Euphrates on Line of Advance to Aleppo

CAPTURES 5 GUNS

Cairo, July 4.—(AP)—Occupation of Deir-Ez-Zor by a British Indian force driving into Eastern Syria from Iraq along the Euphrates River was announced today by the Middle East Command.

At Deir-Ez-Zor on the line of advance across Syria toward Aleppo, site of an important air base, and the Mediterranean coast near the Turkish frontier, a potential avenue of retreat for the Vichy forces—the communique said the British forces seized five guns, two planes and many vehicles.

It reported no important developments on other fronts in Syria, East Africa, or North Africa.

Regular Delivery Of Dive Bombers To Army Starts

Washington, July 4 (AP)—The United States Army Air Force has started receiving regular deliveries of dive-bombers it was learned today, and plans have been completed for organizing by November at least six squadrons. These planes are considered superior to similar aircraft in use by Germany.

Authoritative indications were that approximately 100 dive-bombers would be available for use in fall manoeuvres when American troops will receive their first large-scale training in the co-ordinated employment of air and ground forces.

In addition to these new army planes, a flight of navy dive bombers will participate in the manoeuvres.

The army plane is a single-motor craft much like those used by the Navy. Its diving speed is believed to be about that of the German type—slightly under 250 miles an hour, while it is represented as having a higher level flight speed than the 300 miles per hour of the Stukas, and also greater ability to manoeuvre.

Denmark Asks U. S. to Withdraw All its Consuls

Washington, July 4 (AP)— Denmark's request that the United States withdraw all its consuls by July 15 put relations between the two countries today on a diplomatically unprecedented basis.

The three consuls now assigned to the Nazi-dominated government at Copenhagen are the only representatives the United States has had in Denmark since Ray Atherton, Minister to Denmark, and his diplomatic staff were called home after the German army occupied the country more than a year ago.

In the eyes of the State Department, however, Denmark still has diplomatic representation here, even though the Copenhagen government has repudiated the acts of its minister, Henrik de Kauffman, and formally dismissed him from the Danish foreign service.

$500,000 Air Squadron Will be Gift Of Grateful Newfoundland to Britain

St. John's, Nfld., July 4 (CP Cable—Newfoundland—self sufficient financially for the first time in years—will turn over to imperilled Britain the greater part of a $700,000 surplus announced last night for the past fiscal year.

To establish a squadron of defiant fighter aircraft to be known as the Newfoundland Squadron and to be manned by Newfoundlanders, $500,000 will go forth from this colonial capital as a gesture of thanks for Britain's past assistance.

From 1933 until the outbreak of war, Britain covered the island's deficits. When war came the commission government promised London Newfoundland would be responsible for its own deficits.

Last night Finance Commissioner J. H. Penson not only disclosed a $700,000 surplus for last year but announced the government has budgeted for a $2,600,000 surplus in 1941-42. Estimated revenue for the coming year is $17,450,000 against estimated expenditure of $14,865,000.

Japan Considers Steps To Block U.S. Aid for Soviet Thru Vladivostok

Tokyo, July 4 (AP)—The Japanese government is giving serious consideration to the possibility the United States may send aid to Russia via the Pacific port of Vladivostok, an official spokesman indicated today.

In a press conference discussion of the Vladivostok situation, Koh Ishii, the cabinet spokesman, said the government had been discussing the question of an extension of the limits of Japan's territorial waters beyond the internationally recognized three-mile zone.

Press discussions of this question recently have indicated that Japan might take some action to close two narrow straits between Japanese islands by which ships from the Pacific normally reach Vladivostok.

Newspaper discussion has centred on the Soya strait, between Hokkaido and Sakhalin, only 25 miles wide, and the still narrower Tsugaru strait, between Hokkaido and Hondo, the main Japanese island.

May Extend Territorial Waters

(The implication is that Japan might declare her territorial waters extended far enough to cover entirely these narrow passages and bar alien ships from them. During the prohibition era the United States extended her territorial waters to 12 miles to facilitate the fight against rum runners.)

Ishii was asked how Japan would regard the possible stationing of United States planes at Vladivostok. This, the spokesman replied, Japan would consider "an unfriendly act," as she already regards the sending of United States-made planes to Singapore, Batavia, in the Netherlads East Indies, and Chungking, China's capital.

The Japanese press has been referring to recent United States moves in this region as a "blockade of Japan" and "encirclement."

Stars and Stripes, Union Jack Wave Side by Side in Toronto As U.S. Legionnaires 'Invade'

Toronto, July 4.—(CP)— The Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack flew side by side from the city hall today as Toronto surrendered willingly to the goodwill "invasion' of thousands of American Legionnaires beginning a three-day gathering here.

The Legionnaires poured into the city by special trains and in hundreds of automobiles and by nightfall upwards of 15,000 are expected to have registered for the three days of serious talking with their host members of the Canadian Corps, combined with lengthy program of fun-making.

The official flag-raising ceremony was conducted at the Canadian National Exhibition bandshell this morning with Brig. William G. Gilks, National Chaplain of The American Legion, conducting the benediction. This was the opening ceremony on a program designed to keep the vistors busy until midnight.

Reception to Americans in Active Army

The program included an official reception to American members of the Canadian (Active) Army, at which Harold P. Redden, National Vice-Commander of the Legion, and Col. C. E. Reynolds, President of the Canadian Corps Association, were to speak. Defence Minister Ralston will address inaugural luncheon.

Tonight there will be fireworks displays and street dancing.

For some of the "invaders", the three-day gathering was to accord a chance to see a part of Canada's war effort.

"So far we have not had a chance to see much of Canada's preparednes effort", said Senator Fred L. Adams of Ohio, "but we are anxious to learn the part that our neighbor to the north is playing in this gigantic conflict'.

FOURTH OF JULY IS OBSERVED BY DEMOCRACIES

Celebration of Independence Day in United States Marked by Traditional Enthusiasm

BRITONS HONOR U.S.

New York, July 4 (AP)—Against a sobering background of strife abroad and stern preparations for defence at home, the United States today celebrated the Fourth of July with traditional enthusiasm.

Millions of Americans were expected to pause at 5 p.m. E.D.T. to hear an Independence Day address by President Roosevelt, broadcast from his home at Hyde Park, N.Y.

At the conclusion of the President's speech, the listeners were invited to join Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone in repeating in unison the oath of allegiance to the flag. Then in all quarters of the country, at the same moment, millions of voices were to join in a gigantic chorus, singing the National Anthem.

In a speech broadcast over the world by short wave, Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate last year, declared "I am quite sure that before long now the great force of the American navy will be brought into play to insure the delivery" of supplies to Britain.

Unless the nation's motorists drive with extreme care, the National Safety Council cautioned, some 475 lives may be lost in traffic accidents during the holiday week-end.

London, July 4 (CP)—The Stars and Stripes fluttered widely over the United Kingdom today as Britons honored the United States on Independence Day.

2,500 REFUGEES NOW STRANDED IN MOROCCO

May be Able to Leave Soon With Resumption of Vichy Vessels Sailing to States

TO SETTLE PROBLEM

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 4—(AP)—Several thousand war-strained refugees may be able to leave Morocco with the resumption of sailings by Vichy French vessels between North African ports and the United States under the new trade arrangement between the American government and French North African Colonial authorities.

A number of citizens of American republics are among the more than 2,500 refugees now stranded in Morocco — after having been shunted around Europe and Africa for months — and their departure would settle a vexatious problem between the Vichy government and several Latin American nations, particularly Argentina.

Officials here said today that, if the French vessels assigned to the trade route have the necessary passenger accommodations, they saw no reason why the Latin Americans, as well as some of the refugees who have valid United States visas, could not sail on the ships.

The Acting State Secretary, Sumner Welles, announced Tuesday that under the arrangement—approved by the British and Vichy Governments — it is planned to maintain a regular exchange of non - military products between Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, and the United States.

KRUPP MUNITION WORKS AT ESSEN GIVEN POUNDING

Also Feeling Impact of British Bombs Were Bremen and Bremerhaven

QUIET IN ENGLAND

London, July 4 (CP)—Royal Air Force bombers scored direct hits in a daring daylight raid on Bremen today in a continuation of far-flung day and night air smashes against Germany.

The big British bombers, diving 50 feet over the rooftops, concentrated on a large factory in the waterfront area of the German port and shipbuilding city.

The town was given only a short breathing spell after night British raiders had left it.

The attack there in broad daylight preceded a sweep across the Channel this afternoon in a new offensive against Nazi-occupied France as the R.A.F. kept intact its string of day and night air blows.

Unload From Fifty Feet

Besides unloading their explosives from 50 feet over the big factory, the Air Ministry said heavy Blenheim bombers attacked a freight yard and railroad junction northwest of Bremen and machine-gunned planes on an airfield.

Five bombers and four fighters were missing from the foray over France, but nine German fighters were destroyed.

Five other British bombers also were missing from the assault on Bremen in which a bomb and machine-gun attack also was made on barracks and gun positions on the island of Norderney off the German coast.

Follows Night Raid

The daylight assault followed a night raid in which the Air Ministry said Essen, site of the Krupp works, was a main target and fires were started there and elsewhere in the Ruhr valley.

With visibility better than in recent days, the day raiders flew high, apparently headed for the invasion coast area between Boulogne and Dieppe.

Canadian Ministers Confer With Churchill

London, July 4 (CP Cable)—Two members of the Canadian Cabinet now in Britain, Air Minister C. G. Power and Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie, conferred with Prime Minister Churchill at 10 Downing Street today.

The discussion lasted an hour. No official announcement was issued immediately, but presumably they discussed progress and development of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan and other matters connected with Canada's war effort.

Mr. Power, who has been busy on official business since he reached London, was host to the British Government at luncheon after his interview with Mr. Churchill.

POSTMAN DROWNS

Ottawa, July 4 —(CP)— Robert Forest, 22, an employee of the Ottawa Post Office Department, drowned last evening when his canoe upset in Pierre de Wakefield Lake, 25 miles north of here. His body has not yet been recovered.

It was learned Forest lived in Montreal and has no relatives in Ottawa.

Willkie Sure Force of U. S. Navy Soon to Insure 'Delivery' to Britain

New York, July 4 (AP)—Short-wave radio beams carried to the world today an assertion by Wendell L. Willkie that he is "quite sure that before long now the great force of the American Navy will be brought into play to insure the delivery" of supplies to Britain.

The 1940 Republican Presidential candidate recorded the speech in the NBC studios last night for use in a broadcast commemorating Independence Day. The speech was translated into Spanish, German, Italian, Portuguese and French.

In a domestic broadcast last night, Willkie asserted that unless the United States used its navy immediately "to insure that England receives the products of her toil and sweat, England will not and cannot survive."

Veterans Know Germans Are Not Invincible-Ralston

Defence Minister Says Veterans Will Not Let Canadians Or Americans 'Be Fooled'

U. S. PRAISED

Toronto, July 4 (CP)—As long as veterans of the first Great War live they will never let Canadians or Americans "be fooled" with the idea that the Germans are unbeatable, Defence Minister Ralston said in an address to the joint luncheon of the Canadian Corps Association and the American Legion today.

After describing the growth of Canada's war effort, Col. Ralston said the struggle might be longer "than any of us realize but be sure of this—Canada is going to see it through."

If anyone wanted proof that the Germans could be beaten "let him ask the men who fought at Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, in the Argonne and at Vimy and Passchendaele and Valenciennes."

Col. Ralston said holding the meeting on July 4, the United States Independence Day, showed "a fine sense of the fitness of things."

"That may seem strange, coming from a Canadian, but we Britishers have no illusions about the past," he said.

Message of Faith

"I can think of nothing more stirring than the message which this gathering sends out to the world, a message of faith and confidence in the priceless values of democracy, attested not only by Americans who achieved it by revolution, but by Canadians as well who glaned it by more orthodox and slower methods, sanctioned by the comradeships of the Great War, and sent out on the day when the lamp of liberty was lighted on this North American continent to be a beacon to free men the world over.

"I know that with that message goes the pledge of my comrades here that, God helping us, the light shall not go out."

Col. Ralston said the timely help of the United States was demonstrated in one instance by the Ogdensburg agreement which ensured

Leslie Parker, a nightwatchman on a construction job on the Queen Elizabeth Way, was killed by an automobile.

Dwight Levere, 23, Hamilton, driver of the car in the Parker death was charged with manslaughter.

Pte. Alfonse Raymond of the Canadian armored brigade, Camp Borden, was killed when his motorcycle collided with an automobile.

N. SOMMERVILLE DIES SUDDENLY

Leading Figure in Canadian Affairs Served Many Public Causes

Toronto, July 4.—(CP)—Norman Sommerville, former Chairman of the Central Council and the National Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, died at his home today after a heart attack. He was 63.

Mr. Sommerville, prominent Toronto lawyer and a leading figure in Canadian affairs, especially Red Cross Work, for a long time, was forced to retire as chairman of the Council and Executive because of ill health in the Spring but his death was sudden.

Mr. Sommerville was active throughout the First Great war in campaigns to raise men, money and munitions for Canada's war effort and when the present conflict broke out, his experience was extremely valuable in organizing Red Cross War Services.

Chief Organizer of 1917 Victory Loan

During the First Great War, he was chief organizer of the 1917 Victory Loan campaign and he made more than 100 speeches in the United States explaining Canada's position and needs.

Mr. Sommerville was senior partner of Sommerville and Company, Toronto lawyers. He served as chairman of the Niagara Parks Board in 1933 and was counsel to the special committee and the Royal Commission on Price Spreads and mass buying in 1935.

Mr. Sommerville spent all day yesterday at his office and showed no signs of illness.

Tripoli Bombed By RAF Planes

Cairo, Egypt, July 4.—(AP)— A heavy British air raid on Tripoli, the capital and chief base of Axis-held Libya, for the second successive night was announced by the Royal Air Force today.

This raid last night was one of a series of sweeping air bombardments over North Africa and Syria, a communique said.

Big bombers set fire to two ships, each of about 5,000 tons, outside the Tripoli harbor and found another vessel still burning as a result of the raid the night before.

The Tripoli Airdrome also was bombed and machine-gunned and at least one Italian plane was destroyed besides several others heavily damaged. Grounded planes on Libyan bases at Bengasi, Gazala and Martuba, also were targets of R.A.F. bombers.

Beirut again was an objective of British raiders over Syria and waterfront fires broke out in the port.

PASTURES SHOW DROUGHT EFFECTS

Results Are Indicated in Milk Flow in Some Areas

Continued dry weather throughout the greater portion of the Bay of Quinte district is seriously affecting pastures which are rapidly drying up, this in turn being reflected by a considerable dropping off in the number of cheese being manufactured in the Belleville area. Not all factories have shown a drop in production as some districts have been more fortunate than others in receiving rainfall, but a great percentage of the factories represented on the Belleville Cheese Board on Thuraday evening offered less cheese than on the week previous. Some of the larger factories had 15 to 20 cheese less than the week before.

Wells in several districts are beginning to feel the effects of the drought with farmers stating that they now have to drive cattle to creeks some distance away or draw water to satisfy the needs of their stock.

In an effort to help maintain the milk flow many farmers throughout Hastings, Prince Edward and Frontenac Counties are now feeding grain to supplement dry pastures, this being found necessary several weeks earlier than usual. In the more seriously affected areas, farmers are considering turning their milking cows into meadows or into poorly developed grain fields.

Stop Street Bylaw Is Enforced

"This law is going to be enforced to the limit," warned Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., during today's session of City Police Court after a local motorist had been convicted of failing to stop at a designated stop street. A fine of $2.00 and costs was imposed.

"Failure to stop at 'stop streets' is one of the paramount reasons for so many accidents, I'm told," added Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

"Apparently there is little use warning the motoring public or even dealing with offenders in a mild manner. It appears as though we will have to resort to more drastic measures and simply deprive drivers of their driving rights to strike home the importance of motor traffic observance of the law," cautioned His Worship.

POLICE BLOTTER

While patrolling their beat early today, Belleville police found a transient, who gave the name of Martland Hutton, 37, asleep beneath the C. P. R. freight shed ramp. Today Hutton was arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in police court charged with vagrancy and remanded for one week in custody. "This man has no registration card, but he claims he's an American citizen. We wish to thoroughly check upon this case," commented Chief Kidd to the court.

Earlier in the night the police found a quantity of display goods which had been inadvertently left outside Pauley's drug store. The goods were removed to the police station for safe keeping and returned to the owner today.

TRUCK STRIKES REAR OF CAR

Considerable property damage resulted to a new automobile driven by Mrs. Doris Folkins, of Trenton, when it was struck in the rear by a truck driven by Manley Denard, 182 Charles St., Belleville, in front of the R. C. A. F. base near Trenton Wednesday evening. Mrs. Folkins had stopped her car as the red traffic light was displayed, halting highway traffic. The rear portion of the body of the motor car was badly damaged during the collision. Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson reported following the crash.

LATE HENRY EASTON
(Roslin)

The funeral of Henry Easton took place from his residence at Roslin on Thursday afternoon, July 3rd. The service in the home and at the graveside in Roslin Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. F. C. Beazer, rector of the Roslin Anglican Church.

RAWSON M. MEIKLEJOHN
(Formerly of Tweed)

Death came suddenly to Rawson M. Meiklejohn at Dryden, Ont., on Monday night, June 30, when he was suddenly stricken with a heart attack. He had been manager of a large drug store at Dryden, which is situated in Northern Ontario, near Kenora, since last Autumn.

Forty-seven years of age, the late Rawson Meiklejohn was born in Tweed, a son of George A. Meiklejohn and Ida M. Sarles. After graduating from the Tweed High School, he was employed by the C.P.R. for a short time, after which he entered the College of Pharmacy. Following his graduation, he was employed as a druggist in Toronto for twenty years. His wife, who was formerly Josephine Callendar, died in Toronto last August. Early in the Fall of 1940, he accepted the managership of the drug store at Dryden.

He was a member of the United Church and a Mason. The late Rawson M. Meiklejohn had many friends in this district who will be sorry to learn of his sudden and untimely death. Besides his father, he is survvied by two sisters and four brothers, Mrs. G. D. C. Morton and Miss Cosey Meiklejohn, Tweed; Clayton Meiklejohn, of Warkworth; Roy, of New York; Laird of Detroit and Kenneth of Calgary.

The remains arrived Thursday afternoon and the funeral was held at the home of his father this (Friday) afternoon at 2.30 p.m. Owing to the absence of Rev. H. L. Morrison, pastor of Tweed United Church, Rev. Dr. James Semple of Belleville conducted the funeral services. Interment was in Victoria Cemetery.

GEORGE EDWARD SIMPKINS
(Tyendinaga)
(Contributed)

Tyendinaga lost a highly honored and much respected citizen in the passing after an illness of only a few weeks' duration of George Edward Simpkins on Friday, June 27, 1941.

Mr. Simpkins was born December 3rd, 1858, in Tyendinaga, and farmed until 16 years ago when he retired and took up residence in Melrose. He was ever public spirited and sought continually the welfare of the community. He served acceptably on the township council and was for some years a most capable reeve. He was an active member of the United Church, deeply interested in the choir and loved to sing the praises of God. In church, as in the council, his devotion to duty marked him out as a man of fidelity and honor.

The funeral service was held in Melrose Church on Monday, June 30, and the large congregation present testified to the high regard and esteem in which he was held. When we think of the large circle of those who counted it a privilege to call him friend, we are reminded of the words of Charles Dickens as he closes the "Tale of Two Cities," "I see that I hold a sanctuary in their hearts."

Rev. Wm. Sterling, minister of the Melrose Church, conducted the service and paid a high tribute to the deceased. "He was a staunch friend, a loyal comrade and a great Christian gentleman." In the course of his remarks, the minister said, further very effectively, that

Goodness was greater than genius,
Faith was bigger than fame,
Character is more precious than rubies.

Continuing he said, "I will tell you what is finer than the foaming leap of the torrent from the crag. It is the rush of man's courage along the fearful path of some high and holy duty. I will tell you what overtops the grandeur of an Alpine peak at Sunset. It is integrity, resisting temptation. I will tell you what is more glorious than an English twilight, which turns mountain, plain and river into softest tints of violets. It is love, giving and blessing without stint.

We may write our names on tablets more lasting than marble and more abiding than granite. We write them on the grateful memory of human hearts which shall bless us through eternity.

The music by the choir was very appropriate and was rendered most effectively.

The late Mr. Simpkins married Louise Haight, also life-long resident of Tyendinaga. Three children, two boys and a girl, were born of the union and all remain to mourn the loss of a loving husband and a kind father.

"We live in deeds, not years;
In thought, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on the dial,
We should count time by heart-throbs,
He most lives who thinks most,
Feels noblest, acts the best."

Pilot Officer Presumed Prisoner of War

London, July 4 (CP)—Pilot Officer William Isaac Hall of the Royal Air Force Eagle Squadron of American volunteers was presumed today by fellow fliers to be a prisoner in German-occupied France.

Rotary Club Karnival Opens Tonight in Victoria Park

Stage All Set for Gala Entertainment, Rides, Games, Fun for All

HELP THE KIDDIES

Tonight's the night. The stage is all set. A few minutes after seven o'clock the curtain will rise on one of the most colorful outdoor entertainments ever offered the residents of the city and district.

Victoria Park will be the scene of a riot of color, mirth, music and hilarity. For there the Grand Karnival sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club will formally get under way for its five-day run.

Nothing has been left undone to make this one of the outstanding events of the season. Members of the Rotary Club committee in conjunction with officials of the Queen City Shows have toiled long and hard to make the event a red-letter one in the history of the city.

There will be fun and entertainment for young and old. Uncle Tom and Aunt Min, not to mention Grandma can enjoy themselves with as much gusto as can the children. While the older folks may not want to be whirled about on the merry-go-round, the "snake" and other rides, there will be plenty of diversion for them. And if they tire a bit, they can sit in one of the many seats provided and enjoy the cooling breezes of the bay. Or they can bring their bathing suits and take a dip.

There is no admission charge to the Park. Every one is free to come and go at his or her leisure. But once you come you will be loth to leave, for the spirit of Carnival is broad and once the bug bites you, it doesn't let you go.

There will be Bingo, that ever-popular game with prizes that will astound you with their worth and beauty. There will be games of chance, mystery, novelties, and above all plenty of rides and whatnots for the kiddies. The show is clean, wholesome and entertaining. There will not be a dull moment for anyone.

Help the crippled children of the city and district obtain that treatment that is so valuable to their future health. Help them and help yourself to a lot of fun by attending the Rotary Carnival. It opens tonight.

Many Veterans To Visit Toronto

Eyes of war veterans and ex-service men of the city and district will be turned toward Toronto tomorrow and Sunday where their comrades of the First Great War, the American Legion, will stage a friendly "invasion."

Thousands of Legionnaires will take part in the march on Toronto and that city has prepared a gala reception for the visiting ex-soldiers.

A large number of local veterans will leave the city tomorrow to take part in the proceedings.

Not so Funny

Taxi drivers in Belleville are having their patience taxed to what they consider the point of limitation.

It seems some prankster is in the habit of calling taxi cabs by telephone in the wee small hours of the morning and directing them to make a call to the outskirts of the city for fares. When the driver arrives at the address given not only do the residents claim ignorance, but become provoked by being awakened.

Police were informed of this fact following two such calls early today. "It's no joke and these funsters are costing us money," lamented one taxi driver when he complained to police today.

Regulations Restrict Weight of Parcels With Food for British Civilians

Parcels containing gift shipments of food to the United Kingdom may not exceed five pounds gross weight or contain more than two pounds of any one food stuff, according to a recent bulletin from the office of the district director of postal services.

This order does not apply to parcels for Canadian soldiers in the United Kingdom, it is pointed out, but only to shipments of food to civilians. In approved cases, it is stated British authorities will grant licences to individuals to import food goods in excess of the new weight limits.

Insofar as Canadian post office officials are concerned, it is not proposed to refuse to accept parcels which do not comply with the new weight regulations as the supervision regarding this matter is the duty of authorities in the United Kingdom. The Canadian postal officials, however, are co-operating with the British administration in giving publicity to the regulations and to facilitate arrangements for senders in Canada.

The responsibility for mailing parcels of food must be assumed by the senders and when this is being done, postmasters should ask if it is known whether the addressee has made any arrangement with the British authorities for the importation of food in excess of the authorized quantity. If no such arrangements have been made and the parcel is sent, the food will in all likelihood be returned to Canada, causing inconvenience, loss of food and additional expense.

Pastor Tells Of Blasphemies Of the Nazis

"'No mixing of politics and religion,' was the catch phrase that the Nazis used to deceive good, sincere, honest church people in Germany and under that slogan to silence all opposition of the Christian ministers against the anti-Christian features of Nazism," so declared Pastor Bertil Forsgren in the city hall auditorium last night. Rev. W. H. Reid, Presbyterian minister of Oshawa, formerly a resident of Belleville, offered the opening prayer. Rev. D. R. Chatreau, rector of Emmanuel Church pronounced the benediction. Mr. Forsgren sang a beautiful solo, "I Want You to Know My Jesus, Too." Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck led the congregation in the singing of several old favorites.

Mr. Forsgren made mention of one of Hitler's favorite tricks of holding so-called "elections" when the people are supposed to express their choice on matters. Most of the sustained resistance the Nazis received from any one group in the program of nazification of Christianity was from the "confessional" section of the State Church, Pastor Martin Niemoeller being the most prominent and representative minister of that group. Mr. Forsgren explained that the term "confessional" or "confessing" as used by this church group was used as a label because of the emphasis they laid upon the Augsburgh Confession, which was the basis of the Lutheran Church in the days of the Reformation. By way of contrast, the Lutheran State Church preachers who gave way to the Nazis, did not hold to that historical Lutheran position, but were willing to moderate their views to suit the Nazis. Because of the sustained opposition of this confessional group and the prestige it held in the country, suddenly in 1936, the Nazis ordered an "election," asking the people to make their choice between the Nazified new German national church and the Confessional Church. As a part of their prearranged plan, the Nazi government covered the country with propaganda leaflets extolling of course the new German national church and expounded its teachings.

Nazi Pamphlets Confiscated

"But a strange thing happened," said the speaker. "Though the election was ordered, it was never held. And all the pamphlets that could be recovered were confiscated and destroyed by the Nazis themselves. But I here hold one (a copy of the suppressed pamphlet) before you. As I said, this was in 1936 and I was banished in 1935. A lady, who was a member in my church before it was closed down, believed it would interest me, and as soon as she got it, mailed it to me in Sweden before they were suppressed. Thus it got through."

Mr. Forsgren read translations of the pamphlet which were as follows: "Jesus Christ is not the Son of God. God has revealed Himself in a higher way in Adolf Hitler." On the subject of the Bible as the Word of God, the pamphlet stated: "Tales of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs draw us closer to God than the Jewish Bible." On the subject of baptism, "We shall be baptized into the fellowship of the German people" and "We shall be baptized into the spirit of our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler."

The speaker described the way in which the Holy Communion is blasphemously substituted.

As a part of the winter relief for the poor, on Sunday the entire nation must eat what in German is called a "one pot meal." "We would call it 'hash,' scraps' or 'goulash.' The storm troopers or other Nazi officials called at every home and made sure they got the entire money value in the difference between a regular meal and the "one pot meal." But the money never reached the poor of Germany, the speaker declared. If it did, the poor would be the richest off in the country. Instead of millions collected went into Hitler's war machine. Now to get back to the Holy Communion which symbolizes the broken body of Christ and His shed blood. This pamphlet states that in the new national German church, the "one pot meal" replaces the Holy Communion of the Lord's Supper. This creed also sets forth Hitler as Christ returning in clouds with every eye fixed upon him (Hitler) as such. Mr. Forsgren told of personally having talked with a Christian man from Frankfort-on-Main, where in a beautiful new public library there is a huge painting with Hitler in the clouds and every eye gazing upwards at him. Even the animals on the fresco, a cat, a dog and the Holstein cows were depicted as looking up at the Fuehrer.

Some might say that people in Germany might regard Hitler as Christ, but no one on this side of the Atlantic. But there are actually people over on this side who do and I am now reading a threatening letted that I received from a worshipper of Hitler while I was in the States. I quote, "Rev. Forsgren: Stop preaching lies about our returned Lord Jesus Christ, Adolf Hitler, who will fight God. Fool, Hail Victory." So you can see the spirit of the anti-Christ is not confined to Europe and we must have the real Christ as our Saviour.

CALL TO ARMS PROCLAMATION READ IN CITY

Military Courier With Escort Presents Parchment to Acting Mayor H. J. Clarke

'TO HEED AND TO HELP'

Heralded by the silvery notes of a trumpet, and escorted by a khaki-clad motorcycle detachment, the "Call to Arms" to Canadians was read to the residents of this city shortly after one o'clock today.

With a mere handful of spectators looking on, and the escort standing stiffly at attention, the proclamation was read aloud by Acting Mayor, Alderman H. J. Clarke. Surrounding him were Aldermen Pringle, Butler, Wotten, Kennedy, Armstrong and Jeffrey. The reading of the proclamation took place in front of the City Hall.

A few minutes after one o'clock the motorcycle detachment raced to a stop in front of the City Hall. A military courier, Major Free, of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, dismounted from his motorcycle and formally presented Acting Mayor Clarke with the heavy parchment.

"In the name of His Majesty the King, I present you with this proclamation, to be read to your citizens and then hung in a prominent place," he said.

A trumpet call rang out. Then Acting Mayor Clarke read the proclamation:

A Call to Arms

Whereas Liberty is threatened throughout the world by the forces of tyranny

And whereas Canada of her own free will is pledged to fight for freedom by the side of Britain

And whereas the security and the welfare of every man, woman and child in Canada and of free peoples everywhere depend upon victory

And whereas victory cannot be assured without the help of every loyal citizen of this Dominion

Now be it known that there is urgent need for stout-hearted able-bodied men to volunteer for active service in the Canadian Army.

Wherefore Canada sends out a

Call to Arms

And charges all true Canadians to heed and to help.

Given at National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, this First day of July in the Year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and forty-one, and in the seventy-fifth year of Confederation.

Toronto Girl Drowns Trying To Save Nephew

Miss Grace Finnegan, Victim of Tragedy, a Former Resident of Belleville

NO INQUEST

Musselman's Lake, July 4—Grace Finnegan, 19, of 74 Orchard View Boulevard, Toronto, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Finnegan, formerly of Belleville, lost her life Thursday afternoon, while attempting to rescue her 9-year-old nephew, Donald Mowat, of Livingstone Avenue, York Township, who got into difficulty while swimming. The lad was finally brought safely to shore by his father, George Alexander Mowat, who waded out to him, and brought him out of the water in an unconscious condition.

While Eddie Davies, a local swimmer, was searching for Miss Finnegan, who sank under the water, Dr. S. S. Ball of Stouffville, was summoned, and in a short time revived the boy. Half an hour later the body of Miss Finnegan was recovere in eight feet of water by Davies. For well over an hour Dr. Ball and others worked on her in an effort to effect resuscitation, but without success.

"It seems strange that the young woman who was reputed to be an excellent swimmer should lose her life under the circumstances. There was no evidence of her having struck anything at the bottom of the water", said Dr. Ball, who, as local coroner, investigated. He said that an inquest was unlikely.

Miss Finnegan, who was going to spend a holiday at the lake, had only arrived a short time before the tragedy, and was in the best of heath. She had been in the lake but a few minutes before she saw her nephew was in difficulty and went to his aid. No explanation for her sudden collapse could be offered by Davies, who has in past years figured in several rescues.

Tinplate King Offers $2,000,000 Yacht To the U. S. Navy

Los Angeles, July 4 (AP)—Uncle Sam is about to take over William B. Leeds $2,000,000 yacht Moana.

Francis Hennessey, purser of the 279 foot craft, confirmed by radio telephone yesterday that the Federal Government is requisitioning the Moana in response to an offer made by Leeds to the navy.

Leeds has been cruising in southern California waters since February and was nearing San Diego when Hennessey reported the tinplate, fortune heir had been asked to dismiss his crew of 64 men as soon as possible.

Hennessey said he did not know how much Leeds would be paid or to what use the Moana would be put.

The yacht is diesel motored, with a speed of 17 knots. It was built at Bath, Me., for Eldridge R. Johnson of Philadelphia at a cost of $1,900,000. Leeds bought it two years ago and had it remodelled. It has radio equipment comparable to that used by ocean liners.

Washington, July 4—(AP)—The Federal Power Commission announced yesterday it had authorized the Niagara Falls Power Company to supply immediately an additional 360,000 kilowatt hours of power monthly to the Aluminum Company of America to increase defence production of aluminum in New York State by approximately 500,000 pounds a year.

The power was requested by the Aluminum Company, the commission said.

This additional current will be provided from power generated by the temporary emergency diversion by the United States of an additional 5,000 cubic feet per second of water from the Niagara River under a special agreement with Canada.

Distance Is Russia's Great Ally

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 4 (AP)— Russia's greatest ally is distance and Joseph Stalin seems to be trying to invoke its aid along much of the 2,000-mile battle front.

A bulletin from Hitler's Field Headquarters claimed Red Army resistance was breaking under attack of "united armies from the Black Sea to the Arctic."

"Backward movements of the enemy have become apparent on the entire front," it added.

To supplement that, the bulletin told of the crossing of the Prut River front by Nazi-Rumanian allies pressing eastward toward the Dniester River boundary between Bessarabia and the Ukraine. That is the first intimation of a Russian withdrawal on the Black Sea flank.

It implies that all the way from the Baltic to the Black Sea, Stalin's call for a Russian retirement that would leave to the oncoming foe nothing but "scorched earth" is being heeded. It is the classical strategy of Russia against Western aggressors — a strategy that has never failed. But if it is being brought into play now on a scale that staggers the imagination, it is against a Nazi war machine to which distance has proved no barrier.

A Pyrrhic Victory

If a Russian retreat on so vast a front could be made good step by step against German air power and motorized "speed troops," unquestionably the Nazi victories that Hitler has called "historical" in significance could be largely nullified. The conquest of Western Russia could become a pyrrhic victory, more crushing for Hitler than was that which prompted King Pyrrhus to exclaim after his defeat of Roman legions:

"One more such victory and we are lost."

It would take the devastation of an Empire to achieve Stalin's declared purpose. He called upon his people to lay waste or remove, as Red armies fell back, everything that could help the foe. Napoleon's grand army was lured to its destruction in Russia by that means. It arrived at Moscow only to see that city destroyed by flames, Russian-set. A fierce Russian winter and the implacable guerrilla attacks that harrassed its bloody and hopeless retreat did the rest.

Yet the aid of winter as a Russia ally now is still far away. Hitler and his allies do not depend on horse and ox-drawn transport as did Napoleon. His armored division leap forward 100 miles in a single day. His planes sweep areas in an hour with deadly bombs and guns that Napoleon's crack cavalry could not have scouted in a week.

Tactics Must Be Tested

If Stalin has in fact, as his recent broadcast indicated, ordered the greatest strategic retreat in military history, its success against modern war weapons and efficient Nazi staff work remains to be tested. The Hitler version speaks of spreading chaos in the Red Army. Although the Germans also tell of bad weather hampering their attacks and of stubborn Russian resistance at spots, these obstacles are pictured as no more than temporary.

Nevertheless, a retreat strategy and widespread devastation of roads, railways, bridges, fields, forests, mines and fuel stocks could deal Hitler a stunning blow. The farther the retreat is carried, the greater the policing task to which his advancing armies must promptly turn. Japan's unhappy case in China after four years of "victories" is a symbol of what Hitler and his allies might expect if the Russians take Stalin at his word.

Your Country needs your savings!
Your family needs protection!

THIS NEW
"VICTORY POLICY"
GIVES THE ANSWER!

Whatever your job, whatever your income, you should be investing regularly in War Savings Certificates and other war loans. This is essential. Yet your family needs adequate protection, too!

Since most people have only a limited amount of money for investment, how can these two essential needs be met from your war-time budget? A new "VICTORY POLICY" has been specially designed by The Mutual Life of Canada to meet this problem. This policy is another example of The Mutual Life's initiative in developing a special service to meet the needs of Canadian families.

Answering your questions about the "VICTORY POLICY"

① Q. How does this policy help me fit adequate insurance protection into my present war savings plan?

A: Exceedingly low premiums for a fixed period of years while you are investing in War Savings Certificates. This will allow you to aid your country and at the same time give your family the financial protection they need.

② Q. Is there an increase in the premiums at the end of the fixed period of years?

A. Yes. But even this premium is lower than the normal rate. And the policy is so arranged that as your War Savings Certificates mature you can use them to pay your insurance premium.

③ Q. Is this a term policy or a permanent plan of insurance?

A: This is a permanent plan. It has been specially prepared to meet existing needs but is also designed for future protection.

④ Q. Has the policy any other special features?

A. Yes. The policy has a number of attractive features which will be explained by the company's representatives.

⑤ Q. Who can obtain this new policy?

A: The new "Victory Policy" is available to every adult who is insurable . . . and is especially attractive to men and women with modest incomes.

FEWER ACCIDENTS

It was the best of news to find that the fatalities were greatly reduced this year at the time of the national holiday.

No one likes to think of loss of life and injury to body and limb especially when people are on an outing, or visit or on a journey.

Accidents jar and sadden people at any time but especially when they happen in the midst of happy surroundings.

Fortunately this week saw a marked reduction of traffic accidents. Much of this depends of course on the time and the mood of the people. There have been warnings to motorists and these have had good fruit.

VISITORS TO THE CAMPS

Some days ago 94,000 Canadians visited the various camps of the Dominion on "Army Day." These wholesale visits are a demonstration of the interest which the people of the Dominion are taking in the different branches of the service in which many Canadian boys are serving, prepared or preparing to take their place in the line of men defending honor, justice and democracy.

The camps have a potent appeal. There is the appeal of the men themselves who civilians until a short while ago are enlisted for the task which the soldier, the sailor or the airmen have to play. These are young men mostly who have come from the happy homes of Canada where never a Hitler has been known. They are ready to defend freedom from the assaults of the enemy and to deliver him a thrashing which will forever save the world from such a curse as the menace of Hitlerism. Here in the camps Canadian parents, sons and daughters, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, sweethearts and friends saw how the young civilian is quickly and efficiently being trained into the warrior in liberty's defence.

Then there is the appeal of the camps with their ways of life which are different of course from the ways of civilian life as far as difference is necessary for the particular calling to which the warrior pledges himmself. The ways of military life are always intriguing to the people who have not been trained and they are of appeal to those who have been trained and to those who have been associated with military life. The character of the soldier and the nature of his calling give the camp its especial appeal. And over all there is felt in these camps the spirit of a democratic nation which fights because it has to war against the forces of violence that would destroy everything that is worthwhile in the lives of a free people.

It is a good sign that these camps so appeal to the people. They know that nothing is too good for the young men who have enlisted and are in training. To them their nation, their fellowcountrymen owe much. These men have for the time submitted to new discipline and entered a course of life which demands sacrifices. So it is no wonder that the people go to the camps to admire their young heroic defenders.

Canadians are becoming more and more conscious of the demands which liberty places upon every citizen. There was a time when people did not know of the lurking dangers of tyranny and aggression as a whole but they know now whatever good we enjoy is because somebody espoused valour's cause and stood defender of the right to hand this precious British heritage of liberty on to the next generation.

After all the army, the air camp and the naval establishments are very much a part of the people. They are very human and the men are encouraged by the response to the Army Day invitations.

The Canadian forces are the apple of the eye of the people of the Dominion for they are the product of a democratic country and their aim is to maintain democracy.

On the success of Army Day comes the news that there will be more of these days when the citizenry of Canada is entertained by the men who are trained to maintain and defend the things these citizens and the soldiers, sailors and airmen hold in high esteem and the principles for which they would be willing to pay the highest price.

OLD-FASHIONED LIGHT OPERA

Charles Hanson Towne, in the New York Sun

How sorry was the "story"—sad and static,
Like an old bustle found in Grandma's attic!

The jokes? They were appalling.
Had I laughed
Long, long ago when that stout peasant quaffed

His stein of beer, and bellowed,
"I'm suspicious"?—
Yes, once such fun was subtle and delicious!

Where were the old-time mystery magic?
Alas! today I found them only tragic;

When, suddenly above the crude and false,
I heard that old, intoxicating waltz—

A tune of Strauss that made the swift tears start,
And brought Vienna to my home-sick heart;
And then, like waves tossed from the sounding sea,
My vanished youth came flooding back to me.

"Why ... . I ... . . er . . . ."

"Now here's our new Miracle Eight! It has a vacumotive drive, glider ride, and unisteel turret-top construction!"

"I have it! The latest thing! Our Astounding Sixteen! Hydramatic drive, centerpoise ride, dynaflash design! And that isn't all! Radio-balanced cranckshaft, simplimatic transmission, mass-stream body, and compound carburetion! It that what you're thinking of?"

"Well, not exactly. What I'm looking for is one of those streamlined, long-limbed, super-sylphic, Diana-like female-figure radiator caps for my old car!"

So why all this delay and fuss?

LINES FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

Fling Old Glory to the breezes on this holy day of ours!
Let it wave in brave defiance of all mad, tyrannic powers.
Let us give our hearts to freedom till this holiday be gone,
Great and humble, man and toiler. Stars and Stripes—and all as one!

Red and white and blue the colors! Red the blood for freedom shed!
White the purity of purpose of the living and our dead.
Blue for skies that bend above us, and our children where they play.
Flag of liberty and justice, here at home and far away!

Give Old Glory to the breezes over land and over sea,
Let it ripple in defiance of all forms of tyranny.
For as long as men behold it bright and loving in the skies,
They will know man's hope of freedom is a hope that never dies!

Cause and Treatment of Corns

When we see an individual walking carefully and with a slight limp, we may think that arthritis or even a sprained ankle is the cause. In many instances the careful walking and the limp are due to a corn on the sole of the foot or on the top of a toe. And the corn is usually due to tight shoes or ill-fitting stockings. The tight shoe or stocking presses on a bone of the foot or a toe that is immediately under the skin.

Dr. Robert T. McElvenny, Oak Park, Ill., in the American Journal of Surgery states that while some corns may be due to pressure on a small "outgrowth" of the bone, most cases are due to the shoes or stockings pushing the foot and toes into such abnormal positions that the "bony" part receives severe pressure. Toes presenting corns are either cocked-up or bent at the joints. The pressure on these bony joints causes a hardening of the tissue over the joint and a corn develops.

What about treatment for corns? Dr. McElvenny states that the simplest and most effective treatment for many corns is correctly fitted shoes and stockings. If the toe is not "fixed" or deformed, the bony prominence is apparently not present, but when the toe is encased in a stocking which is too short or in a shoe that does not fit the foot well, the corn develops.

That the various "corn cures" have merit must be admitted, as also have the wedges and pads that can now be purchased in drug and department stores. These wedges and pads are made to fit the various conditions and sizes.

Paring and shaving by a skilled chiropodist gives great relief.

There are, however, some cases where relief cannot be obtained without operation. Operation consists in removing by surgery the prominent part of the bone which with the pressure from the tight shoe or stocking is causing the corn. If the toes can lie down flat when not encased in shoe or stocking, no surgical treatment should be necessary.

Of course, the lesson for all of us is to prevent corns by wearing stockings that are not too short and shoes that fit the feet.

What Kind of Defence Housing?

New York, July 4.—A bill asking for an additional large appropriation for defense housing raises the question of how these funds shall be expended —for what type of housing, with what sort of financing.

As the war effort goes forward, steps are being taken, and actions started, which influence the whole social economy, and will have consequences outlasting the present emergency. If, as a result of a housing emergency due to the sudden expansion of defense industries, the principle is established that the Goverment must subsidize rents for workers, that principle will not be abolished with the end of the war emergency.

That there is a housing shortage calling for Government action is undeniable. The Department of Labor has estimated that there are five million workers engaged in the defense industries, and other agencies report a shortage of some half million dwelling units.

Congress has made all its appropriations for defense housing on the condition that they shall be used only where private capital fails to supply the shortage.

But it can also be argued that, as long as the predominant Government policies with regard to defense housing are followed, private capital never will supply the shortage. For the policy of the Government that involves a heavy subsidy to a small percentage of defense workers creates a situation with which private industry cannot possibly compete, and will eventually create a demand for subsidy on the part of all workers.

Slum Clearance

The Government ought, therefore, to set up a defense housing program of such a nature that it could be followed by private capital, and create a model for further housing activities after the war emergency has passed. In other words, the defense housing program should be of such a nature that it can pave the way for grandiose slum clearance and rehousing projects in the future, in which both private and public credit and capital might be engaged.

This would mean that the houses must be economic—that the workers who occupy them must pay for what they get, with all speculative values squeezed out.

If the Government goes on with a system whereby rents are gauged by wholly uneconomic factors, such as the workers ability to pay, so that one worker pays one rental and another, for the same facilities, another —subsidy to some and no subsidy for others—we shall be heading for serious political troubles. Under such conditions whole blocks of charity recipients are created, who can be politically manipulated, and friction invariably follows with the stepchildren, those whose superior earning power turns out to be a liability to them rather than an asset.

There is plenty of experience in other countries to show the lack of wisdom of such procedures. The Austrian Social Democratic Party rehoused the workers of Vienna in a grandiose manner, but the superior facilities offered to one part of the population at the expense of another turned out to have fateful political consequences.

Moreover, in this country, which was the first in the world to understand mass production, there is no reason why housing should not be produced at a price that workers are able to pay.

Mass production of housing has not occurred because there was insufficient demand and an inadequately certain market. Now, suddenly, the demand and the market are both here. And there is no more reason why the State should subsidize rents or ownership of houses than of automobiles or clothes. The question is one of technical efficiency, adequate wages and the elimination of speculative values in building and in land.

Exceptions Admitted

These remarks, of course, do not apply to housing that is plainly temporary. If a powder plant is set up in a desert, obviously to be dismantled when the demand for vast quantities of powder shrinks, the housing problem is like the problem of building barracks for soldiers. Such houses should be built with the clear intention to dismantle and salvage.

But much of the housing now needed is in industrial areas where there was a housing shortage before the defense program began, and where the houses now erected will be used in the future, permanently displacing slums.

It is in this connection that the Federal Works Agency's so-called "Camden Plan," or "Mutual Homes" merits attention and approval. The author is Colonel Lawrence Westbrook, who has applied it to the problem of providing houses for several thousand workers of the New York Shipbuilding Company, in the Camden area. The plan is uniquely American; it is copied from the mutual insurance idea; it is excellent investment capitalism and thoroughly social; and it does away entirely with subsidy, at the same time keeping for the workers something of the elasticity of rent, with the stability of ownership. That it has the approval of both the National Association of Manufacturers and the C.I.O. commends it uniquely.

Briefly, mutual homes sets up a large housing complex of units of various sizes and sells stock in the whole to the occupants, who agree to pay monthly a sum sufficient to cover interest, amortization, insurance, taxes, maintenance repair, vacancy reserve and administration expenses.

Initial monthly payments range from $25 to $30, depending on the size of the house. If the resident keeps up his place adequately the percentage of maintenance is released back into the reserve; after the expiration of a year the occupant receives certain credits, and cannot be deprived of his equity. In other words, the home-owner has what amounts to a policy, with a cash surrender value or a paid-up insurance value.

Furthermore, as his housing needs expand or contract, he can move inside the Mutual Homes Corporation, without distributing his equity. Theoretically, mutual homes could move from Hartford to Detroit to Los Angeles without loss.

Prefabricated Houses

Colonel Westbrook and his associates erected Audubon Village by prefabrication in a factory set up for that purpose, to demonstrate the superior speed and efficiency of such a process. Were the procedure universally adopted the saving in building costs would be immense.

The whole program is liquidable, costs the taxpayers nothing, and risks decrease in proportion to the number of units and participants, on an actuarial basis. It is as applicable for private capital as for public credit, provided investment and not speculation is the object, and could offer an outlet for insurance companies' and savings banks' funds.

But it offers no political advantages to any administration, and that may be one reason why some circles in Washington regard it coldly.

It is an added reason, however, why capital, labor and the public should support it, and why, indeed, Congress should demand it as the form of outlet for Government funds. For it does not compete with private capital, but, on the contrary, suggests a means whereby vast amounts of idle money could be put immediately to productive social use.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM

One of the most popular and effective books ever published in America was "Ten Nights in a Barroom and What I Saw There."

It was written by Timothy Shay Arthur and was first published in 1854.

The book was a tremendous success and for many years its sales were second only to "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

A dramatized version of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," still sold and played, had an equal success.

There was a time when virtually every man, woman and child in the United States was familiar with the leading characters—the drunkard Joe Morgan, his noble wife Fanny and their angelic daughter Mary, Gambler Green, Judge Hammond, and Frank Slade, son of Simon Slade, proprietor of the "Sickle and Sheaf" tavern.

Timothy Shay Arthur, who was born on a farm near Newburgh, N.Y., but who spent most of his life in Baltimore, Md., wrote some 80 books and thousands of articles and stories on temperance and other moral subjects, but he is remembered only for his "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

Eighteen years after he published his great success he wrote a sort of supplement to it entitled "Three Years in a Mantrap."

Arthur joined the first temperance society formed in Maryland when Edgar Allan Poe was a resident of Baltimore and became not only a militant enemy of the saloon but also one of the most powerful forces in the temperance movement of his time.

Not a teetotaler himself, he advocated temperance through education rather than prohibition laws.

Clergymen all over the country endorsed his "Ten Nights in a Barroom" because it satisfied the popular appetite for sensational amusement and at the same time brought home to its readers the horrors of excessive drinking.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom" is now regarded as a sort of "sub-classic."

Its title is known to millions of Americans of this generation who have never read the book or seen the play.

Some years ago "Ten Nights in a Barroom" was revived on the stage in Hollywood more or less as a joke, but it ran with a packed house for two years.

21-TON FISH BOAT LIMPS INTO PORT

Small Craft Dismasted When it Collides With Much Larger Vessel

Liverpool, N.S., July 4—CP)—The Little Roy, a 21-ton fishing boat, tossed at anchor here today and her eight man crew told of their escape from death off the Nova Scotia coast Wednesday night.

Dismasted when she was struck by an unidentified vessel of much greater tonnage, the Little Roy limped into port here yesterday. Her skipper, Harris Wolfe, told this story: "Suddenly an object appeared in front of us and we saw that it was a big ship. We swung our boat with it. There was quite a swell and as we rolled down our spars struck the other craft just aft of midships.

"They snapped like pipestems. I didn't think we would ever come back. The Little Roy was entirely under water, even her dories. But she righted and we gathered in the wreckage and took a survey of the damage.

"Seeing that the boat wasn't leaking and that the engine was undamaged we stayed where we were until sunrise. Then we started to hobble toward Liverpool."

Canadian Plants To be Surveyed

Ottawa, July 4—(CP)—Munitions Minister Howe announced today a detailed survey of principal Canadian plants "which are or can be employed" in contributing component parts for cargo vessel construction is in progress.

Mr. Howe said the move had been decided upon because production on ships of schedule depended on the "regular flow of components" from manufacturers to shipyards.

The Minister also said a system has been arranged for controlling purchase and distribution of various components.

"It is the purpose of this control," said the Minister's statement, "to see that the components are manufactured in sufficient number and shipped in time to meet the requirements of the ship-yards."

Mr. Howe said that in order to meet shipbuilders' schedules, timetables have been arranged for production of all principal components. Output of each item will be supervised by "competent engineers."

The supervision will be conducted on a "zone" system with subordinate offices in principal manufacturing districts. The first zone office already has been opened in Vancouver.

The announcement said "several keels" under the cargo vessel construction program already have been laid. It is anticipated the first of the ships will be completed and ready for service by December.

The cargo vessel program is being conducted by Wartime Merchant Shipbuilding Ltd., a government-owned company.

Lacrosse Player Hailed into Court

Orillia, Ont., July 4. —(CP) — Aftermath of an alleged attack on Jimmy Davidson, referee of the Orillia-Owen Sound lacrosse game recently, Jack Westenfelt of the Orillia Terriers has been summonsed to appear in court here July 11. He is charged with aggravated assault.

Chief Constable William Carson of the Orillia police laid the charge.

The Orillia-Owen Sound game was called by Referee Davidson after Westenfelt failed to leave the field for a penalty. Chief Carson said there was an argument in the penalty box after the game was called, and Davidson fell to the ground semi-conscious. Three stitches were needed to close a wound under his eye.

All Records Broken At Kingston School

Kingston, Ont., July 4 —(CP)— All records in the number of hours flown during a six-month period were shattered by the Kingston Flying Club from Jan. 10 to June 30 of this year, when a total of 743 hours and 30 minutes flying time was piled up. This is 312 more hours flying time than was done the first six months of 1940.

In June of this year club planes flew a total of 124 hours and 35 minutes, compared with 98 hours and 20 minutes for the corresponding period of 1940.

The club gives instructions only in civil flying, although most of the pilots take the course to improve their chance for enlistment in the R.C.A.F.

Income Tax Returns Show Big Increase

Ottawa, July 4 (CP)—Income tax collections in June totalled $28,477,189 a net increase of $22,777,205 over the total collections of $5,699,984 received in June last year, Revenue Minister Gibson announced today.

The expanded figures reflect higher income tax rates now in effect, a greater national income and the installment plan of tax payments which started early this year.

Revenue from income tax during the first three months of this fiscal year, April-June, reached a total of $238,578,197 as against $117,891,134 received during the corresponding period of 1940-41, a net increase of $120,687,063.

Seventeen income tax collection districts, out of a total of nineteen, showed increases. Toronto held first place with a revenue of $69,317,347, an increase of $28,988,428, while Montreal was a close second with revenue totalling $65,372,533, an increase of $32,665,805.

Collections in other districts for the three-month period with increases in brackets include:

Hamilton $20,403,593 ($12,384,076);
London $16,242,435 ($7,076,711);
Belleville $166,499 ($942,143);
Kingston $752,867 ($479,063).

Rumored Japan Prepares Move Against Saigon

Shanghai, July 4 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports circulated in Shanghai tonight that the Japanese army and navy is preparing to move within a fortnight against southern French Indo-China and occupy Saigon, its chief port and metropolis.

This was one of several reports concerning Japan's next move — none of which could be confirmed.

It was reported that the Japanese plan was also to demand air bases in Thailand for the ostensible purpose of bombing China's Burma Road. Actually, some observers believed, the purpose of these moves would be to create a new crisis in the Far East, threaten Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies and thereby discourage any relaxation of United States watchfulness in the Pacific which might permit additional aid to Britain and China.

Some informed persons expressed belief that Germany demanded that Japan make such a move in return for the axis' recognition this week of the Japanese-sponsored regime of Wang Ching-Wei.

17 Survivors of Ship Reach Port of Spain

Port of Spain, Trinidad, July 4 (CP Cable)—Seventeen survivors of a British merchantman sunk by a Nazi sea raider in the middle of the South Atlantic have arrived on this island aboard another British ship which picked them up after they had drifted seven days in an open boat.

They were rescued by other ships. One of the survivors, an officer, said the raider shelled their craft until it sank and that their lifeboats overturned when the men jumped in the darkness.

Floundering seadogs were everywhere as their ship went down. The officer's group eventually succeeded in righting one of the boats and waited at the scene until morning in the hope of rescuing others and finding provisions.

When morning came they found two other lifeboats, both empty, so they hoisted a sail and pushed off. For five and a half days they lived on three biscuits and a quart and a half of water daily. The last two days, the survivors all Londoners, went without food.

Magistrate Dismisses Charge Against Woman

Hamilton, Ont., July 4 — It was never intended that the Defence of Canada Regulations apply to the private conversations of individuals Magistrate H. A. Burbridge said today in police court as he dismissed a charge of a breach of the regulations preferred against elderly Mrs. Mary Sabia.

It was alleged that she had "made statements prejudicial to the safety of the state and the efficient prosecution of the war."

After leaving the court room Mrs. Sabia collapsed but was quickly revived and taken home.

Nazi Air Force Takes 1st Severe Beating by U. S.- Made Planes Attempting to Attack Warships

By GODFREY ANDERSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the Royal Air Force in the Western Desert, Egypt, July 2—(Delayed)—(AP) — The German Air Force took its first severe beating at the hands of new United States-made Tomahawk fighters when attempting to attack British warships north of Bardia at dawn Monday.

The Tomahawks sailed into a large formation of Junkers 87 dive bombers, escorted by fighters and claimed half a dozen scalps after a sharp engagement.

Two of the dive bombers fell in flames to the guns of a young Australian who before the war was a champion quarter-mile hurdler.

A Scottish pilot, winner of the Distinguished Flying Cross, sent another into the sea. This flier, who fought in France with the squadron of the New Zealand ace, the late "Cobber" Kane, has the expression of a schoolboy and his hobby is collecting butterflies. Yet he downed three Germans and damaged others in France and later escaped from a Luxembourg internment camp to rejoin his squadron.

Throughout the day the Germans continued to attack British naval units in waves.

South Africans in Scrap

A South African Hurricane squadron drove off one attack, forcing two Junkers down to sea. The last wave came over at sunset: dive bombers and fighters in stepped-up formation.

A young pilot from Johannesburg who nearly collided with his victim, a Messerschmitt 110, gave this account:—

"I underestimated the speed of my dive," he said, "and the Hun seemed to be rushing up at me at dizzy speed. I thought, 'It's all up' and pulled back the stick with both hands. Then I blacked out.

"When I came around, I was climbing again and the Messerschmitt was going down with his engine afire. I must have missed him by just a few feet."

There was one propaganda film that won't be shown in Rome. The Italians sent out a camera-equipped plane to get pictures of Savoia 79s torpedoing British ships. One of the Savoias was damaged. The plane crashed, killing four of its crew. The war correspondents stepped ashore from a rubber dinghy at Sidi Barrani—without their film.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The aviation magazine Aeroplane's hint that before the month is out Britain will undertake land operations on the continent is no more than a reflection of the general opinion that now is the time to strike in this direction.

The army and the navy together have raided the Channel coast at various times since the defeat of France a year ago and under the leadership of Free Norwegian forces two successful landings were made in Norway. Now, with the bulk of the German army engaged in the Russian campaign, not only would more raids of this type be timely but something on a much larger scale would seem to be in order.

In previous raids the forces assigned to certain tasks such as blowing up buildings have done their work and withdrawn. This time it is probable a foothold will be seized and the enemy challenged to throw out the invading forces if he can. A number of these landings, made at unexpected and widely separated points on the long occupied coastline, almost certainly would necessitate some diversion of enemy troops and aircraft from other sectors.

The Royal Air Force's daily hammering at German airfields along the Channel coast, bringing large forces of bombers and fighters into operation, suggests the plan is to win absolute control of the air in this region as a prelude to coordinated land, sea and air operations. Well-informed quarters in London last week said the seizing of one or more air bases to ensure adequate air protection for the troops would be a probable feature of any miniature invasion of the continent.

Bank President Aiding Canada To Get Tourists

Ottawa, July 4 (CP)—The "Credits for Canada Committee," the idea of a New York trust company president, is already giving assistance to the Dominion by gathering the promises of Americans to spend part of their holidays here the Canadian Travel Bureau said today.

The committee's objective, as designed by Arthur S. Kleeman, New York, is to have Americans pledge to Prime Minister Mackenzie King that they are willing to spend part of their vacation in Canada so that their dollars may do double duty in providing Canada with further buying power "to arm herself for the struggle against the axis."

D. Leo Dolan, Chief of the Travel Bureau, said the first signed pledge received in Ottawa bore the signature of Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It is understood Mr. Kleeman, at his own expense, is sending the pledge sheets to all parts of the United States, working simply as "a friend of Canada."

Mr. Dolan said that inquiries respecting tourist travel received by the Bureau this year totalled 66,779 compared with 49,702 for the same period last year.

Fantastic rumors about conditions in Canada aimed at reducing tourist traffic are still being circulated by enemies of democracy, Mr. Dolan said. One mid-west inquirer said he had heard gasoline cost 60 cents a gallon in Canada, that Canadian money was forfeited when tourists reached the border on the way back to the United States and that the cost of living had increased 75 per cent in the Dominion.

Every effort is being made to show the untruth of such reports and the condition is better than it was in 1940, Mr. Dolan said.

Seize Island Maps From Luggage of German Women

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, July 4—(AP) — Netherlands Colonial officials seized a variety of maps of these islands today from the luggage of about 700 German women and children who sailed for Kobe on the chartered Japanese liner Asmara Maru.

The vessel headed for Shanghai en route to Japan, omitting the usual call in the Philippines. She sailed on schedule despite the fears of the Swiss consul general, who is handling German interests here, that the Germans might be stranded in Japan by the closing of the trans-Siberian railway route across Russia to Germany.

R.C.A.F. CASUALTY LIST

Ottawa, July 4.—(CP)—Toll of dead and missing reported by the Royal Canadian Air Force since the start of the war mounted to 362 today as the service's 53rd casualty list reported 11 deaths in Canada and overseas and designated six others as missing.

Three flying accidents, all occurring in Manitoba, took the lives of five airmen in Canada, while five were listed as killed in flying accidents overseas and one killed in flying battle.

Allies Will Win And Must Enforce Peace Says Archduke

Charlottesville, Va., July 4 — (AP)— Archduke Felix of Austria declared today it would be better for the allied nations to cease fighting immediately than to avoid the responsibility of enforcing a workable peace as he said they did in 1919.

"If the allied nations win the war again, as they certainly will," he told the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, "they must not again shun the responsibility which has always been the victor's share.

"If they intend to repeat the blunder of 1919, they would better lay down their arms at once. It is not worth while shedding blood for another order if you are not firmly resolved to maintain it."

A peaceful order can be maintained, Felix said, only if there is overwhelming strength behind just law, adding:—

"This time the victors must be realists. If we get another League of Nations it must be one to which it would be vital to belong and from which it would be fatal to be excluded. The forces of the good must be stronger than the forces of the evil.

3 ATTACKS ON BEIRUT

Beirut, Lebanon, July 4.—(AP)— The British air force made three daylight raids on Beirut today, causing many fires, especially in the port section. The raids followed a night attack which was one of the heaviest of the war.

The increased severity of the raids has caused a large-scale exodus of the native population to the nearby hills.

DISCLOSED INFORMATION CONCERNING TROOPSHIPS

Sydney, July 4 (AP)—Four persons were bound over when they appeared in North Sydney Police Court today and were found guilty of disclosing information concerning movements of two large troopships. Two were employed at an important shipping company, one being a ship's captain.

The captain's wife and another woman each were fined £10 (about $35).

INQUEST SAYS WOMAN'S MIND UNBALANCED

Flin Flon, Man., July 4—(CP)— Constable Gordon Lowe of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said last night that Mrs. Rosie Sulisz of Flin Flon, charged with the murder of her three weeks' old son, admitted killing the child by pushing a bottle into its throat. The coroner's jury found the woman at the time was "of unbalanced mind.

AT THE McCARTHY

"She Knew All The Answers"

Joan Bennett hilariously goes to work, both literally and figuratively, on Wall Street in Columbia's delightful new comedy, "She Knew All The Answers" which opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre. With Franchot Tone co-starred as a Wall Street broker who doesn't like show girls, "She Knew All The Answers" is one of the gayest giddiest and grandest love-and-laugh comedies of the year.

Miss Bennett appears as a night club star, who wants to marry a millionaire playboy. Tone, the boy's guardian, is a stiff-necked, ultra conservative financier who absolutely forbids the marriage, even though he doesn't know the girl at all. Determined to win his approval, she talks him into giving her a job in his office. Completely strange to office routine, she manages, during the course of her press her boss, to lose and win a minor fortune for him, to upset not only his equanimity but the equanimity of the stock exchange itself, to reduce his dignity to a more human level and generally to make him definitely aware of her existence. In the process of so doing, Miss Bennett's antics, and those of her co-star, make for hectic, hilarious comedy of high order.

Richard Wallace directed the comedy which rates raves not alone for its ingenious complications and scintillating dialogue but also for the thoroughly delightful antics of the cast, with special applause going to the co-stars. John Hubbard is delightful as the playboy, and Eva Arden, as Joan's wise-cracking room mate, and young William Tracy, as the love-smitten office boy, are equally fine. Charles R. Rogers produced the new film, which was adapted to the screen by Harry Segall, Kenneth Earl and Curtis Kenyon from a popular magazine story by Jane Allen.

Charles Starrett

Popular Charles Starrett in "Thundering Frontier" a real "wild west" western, is feature presentation number two, also a Walt Disney technicolor cartoon presenting Mickey Mouse in one of the funniest of cartoon comics, yet presented on the screen and a new episode of the "Green Archer" round out a swell show. As usual the program will be run continuous on Saturday.

AT THE BELLE

"Blood and Sand"

With the blazing pageantry of Spain providing the colorful background for Tyrone Power's most powerful role, 20th Century-Fox's latest technicolor hit, "Blood and Sand," has been called a "magnificent, tensely exciting and colorful film." This latest picture produced by Darryl F. Zanuck features Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth who head the famous name cast and is now showing at the Belle Theatre.

To faithfully capture the rich colors of the Spanish costumes, architecture and atmosphere, Director Rouben Mamoulian took his technicolor camera crew and a troupe of 300 to Mexico City, where old Spain still survives in the new world. Amidst gem-encrusted costumes and the Latin atmosphere, the dramatic narrative of "Blood and Sand" took form.

"Blood and Sand" is the gripping story of a fearless, death-defying matador, teemingly romantic, who is torn between the love of his beautiful wife and the fatal charm of an alluring temptress. With Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth in the key roles, the enthralling story unfolds in a colorful panorama that stuns, excites and grips.

Rising suddenly to fame, the matador forgets his own lovely wife to fall for the wiles of a heartless siren who, after a whirlwind friendship, in turn discards him.

The same programme includes the latest Belle News reel, and a coloured fun cartoon, "Home Guard." The seventh chapter of "Winners of the West" will be shown at the Saturday matinee only.

RIGHT INTO TOWN activities goes a handsome dress and jacket of black sheer. The jacket has modified dolman sleeves and a rippling peplum plus revers of pale rose faille. Two big roses at the base of the deep V neck of the simple, short-sleeved frock.

Fifteen Assemblies Are Represented at East Ont. Pentecostal Rally, Tweed

Tweed (Special) — On Dominion Day, July 1st, an Eastern Ontario Pentecostal Rally was held in Tweed, Ontario, Community Hall. Meetings were held at 10.30 a.m., 2.30 and 7.30 p.m. Large crowds were present at the three meetings there being about 15 assemblies represented. Mr. E. A. Wicks, pastor of the Napanee Assembly was the morning speaker, taking his text from Paul's Epistle to the Romans "For I am persuaded" etc. There were about 300 present and all enjoyed his message. Two young ladies from Napanee sang a duet. Extra chairs had to be brought in for the afternoon meeting there being about 450 people present, many from Tweed. Mr. Tindale introduced the visitor who is touring Canada, speaker for the afternoon, Pastor Bertil Forsgren of Stockholm, Sweden, who rendered a very effective solo "Closer to Thee." Pastor A. Jacobson of Bannockburn rendered a beautiful violin solo, "Raise Me Jesus to Thy Bosom."

Mr. Forsgren spoke of how Germany ruled all preaching under Nazism. Mr. Forsgren was pastor of a church of over two thousand members in Hamburg, Germany, for some years. He told how the Gestapo or secret Nazi police would come in to listen to his sermons, then talk to him and try to force him to compromise and deny his belief and when he refused this, he was arrested and banished from Germany. Mr. Forsgren also dwelt on the fact that the Holy Bible was the true word of God, and should be believed from cover to cover. It represented the "Full Gospel," he spoke of the four roots of the "Full Gospel" being namely: 1st, The Saviour of All Sin; 2nd, The Healer; 3rd, The Baptiser; 4th, The Coming King, and that is what Christ stands for. Mr. Forsgren also congratulated all those under the rule of the British flag, the Union Jack and our good Christian king and his lovely and beautiful lady our queen and for the blessed privilege of freedom of worship. He requested all to stand and sing "Go Save the King" before he spoke on his subject.

Mr. E. N. O. Kulbeck, pastor of the Belleville Assembly, extended an invitation to any to go to hear Pastor Forsgren in Belleville.

Rev. C. B. Smith

The evening speaker was Rev. C. B. Smith, formerly of Ottawa, Ontario, and now principal of the Ontario Bible College in Toronto, also teacher of The Gospels, The Epistles, Bible Doctrine, Humanity of Christ and authority in that institution. Mr. Smith introduced Miss Blanche Pardo, a graduate nurse and former school teacher, who teaches first aid and home nursing in the Bible School, also two second year students of the school, the Misses Pauline Breen and Betty Haynes, who are at present ministering along with Miss Pardo in Bancroft during the absence of the regular pastor there. He also introduced Mr. Douglas Rudd, a first year student of the school and who is at present ministering on the Indian Reserve at Deseronto. After a brief acknowledgment he called on a quintette from the Indian Reserve who rendered a hymn in the Mohawk language.

The Misses Pardo and Breen sang a beautiful duet and Miss Betty Haynes sang a touching solo "When I Come to the End of the Road." Mr. Ralph Burke of Trenton also rendered a beautiful solo on the euphonium. Miss Pauline Breen spoke of how God spoke to her heart to go into training in the Ontario Bible School in Toronto to prepare herself to be able to bring the message and to minister to hungry souls. Rev. Smith said he would never urge anyone to go to Bible School only those who felt the distinct calling to preach the Full Gospel would be successful. He said he was already receiving many applications for entries into the fall classes as the school reopens.

During the evening Mr. Tindale, pastor of the Tweed Assembly, expressed thanks on behalf of himself and the Tweed Assembly to Mr. S. H. Connor, principal of the Tweed Consolidated School and his wife, Mrs. S. H. Connor, for their kindness in so beautifully arranging a basket of such lovely flowers and donating them to decorate the platform, to Mr. Arthur McCarey, manager of the Tweed Creamery for so kindly supplying the cream cans and hot water for the tea and coffee, also to Mr. Sam Curry, editor of the Tweed News, for the kindly reference to the Rally.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION CAN SUCCEED EVEN AFTER FOUR HOURS OF WORK

Statisticians have announced the sad forecast that probably 8,000 persons will be drowned this summer. The prediction is based on records for former years and the growing number of vacationers at water resorts. As was suggested here yesterday, these fatalities could be greatly reduced by the simple extension of knowledge of safety first in the water and of first aid principles.

Every person should know, for example, how to apply artificial respiration. The mechanics are very simple. The principles are applicable in many cases other than water accidents. They cannot be publicized too often.

When the person overcome by water has been brought ashore, (and don't hesitate to knock him out when you rescue him for he may drag you down in his frantic struggles), first hold him or her upside down for a few moments to drain water from the respiratory passages. Then lay the body face downward and straddle it with the knees astride of the hips. Then, when you have placed your open hands at the base of the chest where the small ribs are, the principle to be applied is for the operator to lean his weight forward on his hands, compressing the victim's thorax, holding it compressed for a moment and then releasing it. This technique is then repeated slowly and deliberately with about six or seven seconds elapsing between the beginning of one compression to the beginning of the next.

This establishes artificial breathing — the patient's chest muscles have ceased to work the lungs as they should and the operator is doing the work for them. It sounds like a simple process, and actually it is easy. The important thing to remember is KEEP IT UP.

Every summer people die of drowning just because the rescuers got discouraged. Because the patient didn't respond after a short while, they gave up.

The primary rule in artificial respiration is not to lose hope and quit even after an hour of hard work. I have seen victims who didn't respond until we had worked on them for as much as three hours. I have heard of others who required four hours of artificial respiration before they recovered. They showed no signs of recovering until that time had elapsed.

The work should not halt a minute. Operators should work in relays. Of course a doctor should be summoned at once, and if one is available one of the mechanical respirators sent for. Fire departments have saved the lives of many persons with these.

While the artificial respiration is being applied, the body should be given dry covering and kept warm. When it is possible for warm drinks to be given, this should be done.

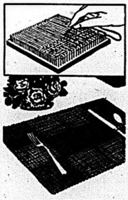
Hand-Woven Place Mats Lovely and Quickly Made



"Loom" a Cardboard Square

A summery table setting with cool blue place mats—the smartest kind—woven by you!

Using crochet cotton you weave, one at a time, six light and six darker blue squares. Then you join squares as sketch shows.

To start, glue together two five-inch squares of heavy cardboard for your "loom" and draw on it a four-inch square. In each inch of the square's outline drive six No. 19 wire brads. Next begin warping—setting up the threads through which you'll weave.

Glue one end of thread to back of loom, wind it once around lower left brad and carry it across loom to wind around opposite brad. Continue going back and forth until you reach lower right brad.

Then thread a needle and weave over and under warp threads, going across loom and around opposite brad. Come back over threads you went under, under threads you went over; continue this way until finished.

When all the squares are woven, join with dark blue thread. Our 32-page booklet tells how, diagrams each step. Also tells how to weave lovely scarves, doilies, other novelties.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of HOW TO WEAVE USEFUL NOVELTIES to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Serice, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Life Not Over at 32

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Although I've been divorced from the man I married, I'm still devotedly in love with him. For that reason I don't care to go where I will meet other men, and I'm very lonesome. My little daughter is four years old and I am 32 years old. What suggestions can you offer.

Lonely

My dear, the idea that you think that at 32 years your life has come to an end, so far as happiness is concerned, is unthinkable. You say you are lonesome. I would advise you to go places where you are likely to meet both men and women of your own age. Go to the young peoples doings at your church. Join the community gatherings and the clubs in your city that might interest you. Your little girl will be old enough to go to kindergarten in a year or so, and then you can join the Home-School Club and meet some of the other mothers. One thing will lead to another.

It's important that you really interest yourself in these matters and not merely appear to do so.

Proper To Return Ring

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'll be 19 in a few months. My parents give me anything I desire, except the right to choose my boy friends. This past summer I met a boy from another town and we went together about four months. Then my parents said I must stop seeing him because he didn't have a good enough job, in case we wanted to be married. They even went so far as to follow him to his home, and told him not to see me again.

We haven't seen each other since then. I still care for him, but I hear he's going with another girl. He gave me a diamond, not as an engagement ring. Shall I return the ring or keep it, hoping that we will get back together again?

"Jeanie"

It's the usual thing, among "nice" people, to return gifts of value when an engagement has been broken. And though you write this was not an engagement ring, that would seem all the more reason for returning it.

If you follow this column you will remember I suggest to parents to let their daughters have plenty of friends, both girls and boys. It's the old adage about there being safety in numbers. Perhaps your parents might have known of some other reason they didn't want you to continue friendship with this boy.

Wants to Meet the Right Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 32 years of age, single, and live only for the higher things of life. I enjoy sports and good music, and always respect the opposite sex. I've met many girls, but my observation has been that they always measure a man by the amount of money he spends. That doesn't appeal to me, although I don't mind taking a girl out occasionally, but I'd like to meet the kind of a girl who wouldn't be afraid of getting her shoes dusty out on a hike in the open country or along the sandy beach.

There must be girls who like tennis and other out-of-door sports and who would like to know a fellow of my type. Do you know where I could meet that kind of girl?

Sport Fan

This column can give no more than hints in such a matter. We can suggest though that you might look up a hiking club or an athletic association in your city. There must be such organizations, whose members go out on weekend hikes, and swimming or beach parties. Have you tried the Y. M. C. A.? They might be able to put you in touch with clubs or associations along these lines. If you join such a group, you will doubtless find girls of the type you wish to meet.

I know there are lots of girls who think the same as you do, and I hope you will be lucky enough to get acquainted with one.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

SECOND BABY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please tell me whether or not it is proper to send our announcements when a second baby is born? We have one child, and we are happily looking forward to having another. We haven't lived in this city very long, and most of our relatives and friends live in far distant parts of the state. So birth announcements would, of course, be a great convenience to us.

Therese

Yes, it is just as correct to send birth announcements for the second (or third or fourth!) baby as it is for the first baby.

In your case I agree that sending out birth announcements would be an especially convenient way for you to send the news to your many relatives and friends at a distance.

Twelve-Thirty Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I are invited to a wedding to take place at twelve-thirty. What type of dress should I wear, and what is the proper attire for my husband?

A. L. I.

Women guests at a day-time wedding, formal or informal, wear their most becoming street clothes, of material suitable to the season of the year. You may wear a dressy street-length dress (with coat, if necessary,) or a dressmaker suit, or plain suit, if the wedding is informal. And accessories ..... hat, shoes, gloves ... are important!

If a man owns a cutaway coat (or an Oxford jacket) and striped trousers, a formal day wedding is an occasion to wear them. If he doesn't, he wears a business suit.

TIP ON TABLE MANNERS.

When you have finished eating, always place your knife and fork side by side on the plate, with the handles turned slightly toward the right. Do not leave the knife on the rim of the plate.

Needs Taking Down

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old and for two years have been in love with a boy who always acted as if he loved me too, but he goes with another girl. I first met him when he went with a girl his mother didn't approve of, and he used to meet her at my house. And now he's going secretly with another girl, his parents don't like.

His folks like me. This boy knows that, but he seems to prefer the other type of girl, and said he'd marry me in a minute if I were that kind. He has a good position, makes good money, and will be 21 years of age in a short time. I can't help loving him although I've tried going out with other boys, but they're all just a headache to me. Please tell me what to do, Miss Fairfax.

What Now?

This young man sounds pretty bumptious to me, and I should think you might find it rather good fun to take him down a peg or two. For a youngster of 21 to tell a girl he'd marry her in a minute, if she were "that kind," means that he's got a lot to learn. Better start his education by a show of more independence.

The Stars Say

For Friday, July 4.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE HOLIDAY spirit is greatly enhanced if not inspired and stimulated by a most propitious chain of planetary configurations. It is a most beneficient moment for the young and gay-hearted to seek pleasure in the happy and warming cooperation of its fellows, old and young, whose spirits will be inclined to rise to heights of enthusiasm, patriotism and other forms of generosity and magnanimity. While business flourishes and opportunity knocks, the spirit of festivity and good fellowship dominate. Beware slight accidents and dangers.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is should be on the eve of a year of insistent opportunity, with the assurance of the highest of fulfilments in attaining cherished goals and the most glowing culminations in securing the delights of hearts' desires. This applies to both old and young, although the latter find unusual advantage and encouragement. Friendship, love, achievement, popularity, perhaps renown, knock at the door of all worthy and generous objectives. Push decisively for place, promotion and happiness, wherever desired.

A child born on this day should be excellently endowed for a successful/happy and influential life. It will have a generous, warm and expansive nature, with prestige and popularity.

Lefty Grove Ready to Join Baseball Immortals as He Scores 299th Victory of Career

His 300th Win Will Make Him One of Twelve Hurlers Who Have Reached That Mark

DODGERS IN TIE

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

When the great pitchers of all time in baseball are recalled, Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove always will have a place on the honor roll.

He is 41 years old, leathery cheeked and getting grey haired. But he still is a winning pitcher and yesterday he achieved the 299th triumph of his long and memorable career.

He subdued Philadelphia Athletics 5-2 for the beleaguered Boston Red Sox, who needed the victory desperately. It wasn't an imposing performance such as Grove gave in the days when he had a fire ball and was striking out 200 batters a season. The A's tagged him for 10 hits and only two struck out.

But the old hero of another era was just as effective as if he had been throwing a blazing fast ball right by the batters. He had wonderful control and never walked a mna. He kept the foe scoreless except in the fifth inning when Dick Siebert's triple was followed by two singles and a fly.

Jim Tabor hit a three-run double in the first inning to give the veteran a nice start and Ted Williams homered with one on in the eighth.

Takes Plenty of Rest

Grove, taking plenty of rest between starts, now has won six games and lost only two this season. When he reaches the 300-victory goal he will be one of 12 pitchers to accomplish the feat and the first since Grover Cleveland Alexander.

This was the only game in the American League yesterday.

The action in the National League was confined to two contests with Chicago Cubs nosing out St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 and Boston Braves beating the Phillies 4-1.

Both the Chicago runs were unearned as the Cards nullified the five-hit pitching of Max Lanier and Howard Krist by making three errors. Claude Passeau also pitched five-hit ball, and drove in the deciding run with a single in the seventh.

The defeat dropped St. Louis back into a tie with the idle Brooklyn Dodgers for the National League lead.

Boston's triumph was scored behind the five-hit hurling of young Al Javery ,who held the Phillies scoreless until the eighth.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by

GEO. E. WATKIN.

Have you paired up for Wednesday's game yet? Get busy, please.

All the honours of Tuesday's game went to Charlie Iley. He not only won the tournament but provided real fun for the crowd. "Thanks Charlie", it was a real treat for us all. The next game of that description the men will provide the eats and Mrs. Legoult and her staff the entertainment. We sure have some talent in our club.

Charlie Sulman was right in the limelight bowling with Harry Ackerman who has not bowled here for ten years.. He won his three games. It was a real day for the "Charlies."

The ladies took advantage of the situation and celebrated the birthday of one of their members, Mrs. Irene Ward. A lovely cake with twenty-seven candles was placed on the table. Little Edith Robson lighted them and the banquet was under way.

Charlie Hyde put Abe's hide on the fence another victory for the "Charlies".

If any of the members want a partner for Wednesday's doubles phone me at 1390. It is a chance for our younger players to show their skill.

Bowl more and you will bowl better.

I do not live on the greens so if any games of importance takes place or any item of interest, give me a ring.

Sports Roundup

New York, July 4—(AP)—Hank Leiber, in hospital in Chicago after stopping one with his bean, is in—of all places—the maternity ward. . . . Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb will captain two Cleveland amateur teams in a war relief golf match later this month. . . All G. Lyttleton Rogers, the Irish tennis star, needs is a good press. Wednesday the New York afternoon papers wrote feature stories about him. That afternoon the guy went out and gave Frankie Kovacs his lumps. . . . Latest from the Washington rumor foundry has Muddy Ruel succeeding Stan Harris. We don't believe it.

Firecrackers.

That $3,000 that kept Joe Dimaggio and the Yanks apart so long last spring probably will be given Joe as a bonus for his hitting streak. (After all, he drew 50,000 customers to the stadium on a Tuesday and Ed Barrow can't laugh that off) . . . Umpire Bill Summers is second only to Red Ormsby as the "Great White Father" of the American League. He has eight children, three down to Ormsby. . . Iowa State just can't wait. Football schedules, posters and information books go out this week . . .

Help, help

Can't anything be done to get Baron Boots Poffenberger out of the dog-house? . . . That 90-day suspension he drew for socking an ump runs until after the end of the Southern Association season. . . . Which reminds Col. Ed Danforth of the Atlanta Journal of the Kentucky Judge who sentenced a hill-billy to 99 years for murder . . . The mountaineer leaped to his feet and yelled: "But judge, that ain't legal . . . I won't live that long".

SIXTEEN GOLFERS IN MATCH PLAY

Two in Qualifying Round Produced a 70 Two Under Par

Toronto, July 4.—(CP)—Sixteen of Ontario's select amateur golfers switched to match play today for the first round of the championship flight after subjecting the Mississauga course to some 'hot' treatment in yesterday's qualifying round.

Four of the 54 players who participated in the medal play broke par and a fifth equalled it. The field was one of the lowest-scoring ever to participate in a qualifying round in the Ontario amateur.

Jack Nash, London veteran who won the title in 1930 and Bud Masterton, Toronto Royal York newcomer, produced cards of 70—two under par—to tie for medal honors. Slim Jack [illegible] and the favorite, Phil Farley, Scarborough, [illegible] 71 Jim Boeckh of York, Downs topped off this superb shooting with a par 72 to place fifth.

In the first round of the championship flight Nash is drawn against J. Twiss of Mississauga who had a 75 yesterday and Masterton meets Mel Currer of Summit, the latter showing a 73 card in the medal play.

Farley takes on Boeckh in what is expected to be one of the better matches of the day while Chinery is drawn against John Robertson of Mississauga.

The remainder of the championship flight follows: Bill McMullen, Lakeview vs Tom Winter, Summitt; Bruce Bradley, Oshawa vs George Noll Mississauga; Bill Leake, Mississauga vs Mike Haight, Royal York and Bill Tredway, Cedar Brae vs Gil Walker, London.

BUFFALO BISONS GAIN GROUND AT LEAFS' EXPENSE

Defeat Toronto Entry in Int. League by a 6 to 5 Count

WINGS THIRD

By The Associated Press

Herschel Lyons, young righthander who played a large part in the International Baseball League pennant drive of Rochester Red Wings last year, is doing his bit again this season to keep alive the Wings' flag hopes.

Lyons has been the champions' most effective hurler to date, winning nine and losing four. He returned the Birds to third place in the standings last night, beating Montreal Royals 2-1 in 10 innings and allowing only four hits

George Fallon's single with two out scored George Wyrostek from second with the run that ended a tight mound duel between Lyons and Montreal's Chet Kehn.

Kehn was touched for seven hits, going down to his fifth defeat. The loss dropped Montreal into fourth place by a half-game.

Buffalo's second-place Bisons gained ground on the league-leading Newark Bears, defeating Toronto 6-5 in the only other game played. Rain washed out a contest between Syracuse and Baltimore.

The Bisons put across two runs in the eighth to clinch the argument, after Toronto had taken a 5-4 lead in the sixth. Mickey Rocco, enjoying a perfect night at the plate with a double and three singles, drove in three runs, including the winning tally, to give Pretzels Pezzullo a relief victory over his former mates.

Pezzullo replaced Mike Roscoe in the sixth during the Leaf uprising which netted three runs, and allowed but one hit the rest of the way.

Country Club Sold at Auction To Banana Peddler

Los Angeles, July 4.—(AP)—Exclusive Midwick Country Club, for years the playground of wealthy members of society, was sold at public auction yesterday to an ex-banana pedder.

Long known as the Polo Centre of the West, the Club with its 210 acres, golf course, tennis courts, etc., went under the hammer for $178,000.

It was sold after spirited bidding between a combination of members anxious to save it, and Dominic Jebbia, an Italian immigrant who made a fortune out of bananas—but never became rich enough to become a member of Midwick.

Co-buyer was the 55-year-old fruit merchant's son, Norf, who observed, "No, I don't belong to the club—I never could afford to."

Jebbia, who owns a mansion overlooking the golf course, said he had plans for the property except to "go up to the club and have a swim". He came to the United States when he was six. From a humble street peddler he prospered through the years, most of them in Wheeling, W. Va. He came to Los Angeles in 1925.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

We received a letter from Ernie Foote, former Cobourg sports scribe now with the Canadian Artillery at Petawawa Military Camp. Ernie informs us that Jack Williams, former Belleville southpaw, is still fooling the batters. Jack Mitchell and Max Smith of Cobourg, Walt Gerow, Jr., Joe Jocko and Earl Oliver of Napanee and Harold Reid, former Belleville softballer, are all playing for the artillery team that is leading the Petawawa Camp baseball league, while Williams fires 'em for the Auxiliary Corps, he being in the Motor Mechanical unit. Sergt. Don Thomas has taken his august blue uniform to camp and dons it to umpire all league games. Games at the camp are played Wednesdays and Sundays with large turnouts of soldiers and civilians alike. In a recent field day Troop Sergt.-Major Cec Holway put his whole weight into a tug-of-war that gave his unit the championship of the camp, writes Ernie. Such letters are appreciated by this corner as they inform those at home of the activities of their loved ones serving their country.

The Belleville Golf team, fourteen strong, journeyed to Port Hope for a golf tourney on Wednesday and lost 28 to 14. The local golfers returned home singing high praises of two Port Hope junior players, one of whom was only nosed out by two strokes when Harry Ridley carded a 74 score for eighteen holes. However the other Port Hope junior, George Austin, beat Tommy Carruthers and carded a score of 69 over a par 70 course. Young Austin shot the first nine in 32, three below par, and had a 37 in the second nine for a remarkable fine exhibition of golf. The Port Hope team plays at the Belleville Golf Club next Wednesday. Incidentally, Bill Little, the pro. at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, tells your reporter that he and Charlie Spalding are going ahead with plans to hold a golf tournament in Belleville during which four outstanding professionals from various parts of Ontario will play. All proceeds are to go to war charities.

Do you remember when Jack Dempsey was crowned world heavyweight boxing champion 22 years ago today when Jess Willard sat in his corner in a sun-scorched Toledo ring? Dempsey tore in the champion from the opening bell and sent Willard to the canvas seven times in the first round. Willard was unable to come out for the fourth round.

Donnie Bush attended a recent exhibition game between the Boston Red Sox and the Indianapolis club at Perry Stadium, Indianapolis. Catching for the Red Sox was Prof. Moe Berg, who backstopped for Donnie when he managed the White Sox some years ago. Berg had a large evening, getting four for five and driving in five runs during the 23 to 14 debacle in favor of the big leaguers. But when Moe, never noted for his speed of foot when he played for Donie, stole a base in the fifth ininig, Bush jumped to his feet, exclaiming: "I've seen everything that could possibly happen in baseball . . . Berg stealing a base. I'm going home NOW."

Here's how Peterboro' Fred Craig viewed the winning of the Dominion Day softball tournament at Hastings and from afar: "The Corby's A.C. team of Belleville proved a little too good for all and sundry at the Hastings softball tourney yesterday, carrying off the first prize by defeating the local Military Training Centre in the finals 20 to 10. Only four clubs participated and the failure of Billy Taylor's Oshawa club to put in an appearance was a disappointment. The Soldiers eliminated Chesterfields and Corby's defeated Hastings in the first round. Hastings had Bob Strickland, Spook Scriver and Webb Starr on their line-up and Strickland finished the pitching chore after Dave Wilson had started for Hastings against the Belleville outfit. Bawden pitched the final game for Corby's against the Soldiers and while he was not as good as usual, didn't need to be for his team was definitely in a batting mood."

Doesn't Mister Craig figure striking out 22 batters in a single game, as Bawden did, a fairly good chore at mowing 'em down?

President Ted Schwab, of the Girls' City Softball loop, is only waiting for confirmation to announce that the Sunday Morning Class, Toronto's chief Girls' Softball Club, will play a dual bill of softball in Belleville on Civic holiday. Prexy Schwab already has a verbal acknowledgment of the date and is merely waiting for written confirmation he told us.

Dizzy Dean, coach of the Cubs, entertained 2,000 soldiers at Camp Grant, Ill., by giving a demonstration of his pitching, making speeches and leading the band. Dizzy pitched an inning each for the Camp Grant and Fort Sheridan teams, striking out three and not allowing a batter to reach first. He also hit a homer for the Camp Grant team, which won, 14 to 7.

The National Hockey League will co-operate with the Government and employ older men, to allow those of military age to continue in the service. Unofficially it is estimated that upwards of 40 N.H.L. players will be affected by the military training next winter.

SPORT SPICE—It's one more river to cross for Lefty Grove, who registered his 299th major league victory by beating the A's 5 to 2...... One more win will make Grove the 12th pitcher in major league history to hit the 300-win mark...... Now the wise guys along the Great White Way are calling the American League race a battle between Joe DiMaggio and Bob Feller, as they say—"as goes DiMagg, so go the Yanks" ......However, statistics show that when Bill Dickey is in a slump, the Yankees just can't win........ The Cardinals kicked in with three errors and lost 2-1 to the Cubs yesterday and dropped into a tie for the league leadership along with the Brooklyn Dodgers ....It is estimated that 65,000 baseball fans will be present when the Gehrig monument is dedicated at the Yankee Stadium today.... ....Stay put!

May Double Size Of U.S. Army

Washington, July 4 (AP)—Plans for substantial increase in the size of the United States army—perhaps to double its present strength—were believed indicated today by the General Staff's request for power to hold national guardsmen and selective service recruits in service, and to use them beyond the confines of the western hemisphere if necessary.

The question of the army's future size was momentarily obscured by the rush of critical congressional reaction to the High Command's request. Well-informed officials said the two subjects are linked closely.

The army's present strength, they noted, was approximately 1,400,000 men. If the bulk are to be kept on duty, new regulars recruited and the scheduled 900,000 trainees inducted in the next year, they said, the land forces would be close to 2,800,000—the goal the High Command has in mind for the first expansion, if one is deemed necessary because of world conditions.

Regardless of its ultimate objectives, yesterday's request touched off debate on Capitol Hill, where most Congress members to volunteer comment were hostile to granting the power asked.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Mrs. Edmonds chuckled suddenly, though there were spots of color high on her cheeks beneath her carefully applied makeup.

"Mr. Powell looked so startled when he discovered that the major and I were honeymooners, too—not just chaperones, or visitors," she drawled. Betsy and Natalie realized that she was leading up to something that she very much wanted to say without being entirely sure how to say it. "I suppose it does seem rather absurd for two people as old as Willie and I to be honeymooning like a couple of youngsters—but Willie and I have waited a long time for a honeymoon."

"Have you known each other such a long time?" Natalie asked politely, not because she was particularly interested, but because Mrs. Edmonds seemed to expect it.

"Practically since childhood—since grammar school days," said Mrs. Edmonds almost eagerly. "We were sweethearts in high school. Or course, Willie is a great deal older than I. He was finished high school when I started. We were engaged when I was 17, and he went away to West Point."

She was silent for a moment, looking out over the lovely, restless turquoise of the sea that came rolling in on the beach in great white-topped breakers.

Betsy and Natalie waited politely. Natalie lay full-length on a gaily patterned beach mattress, her beautiful legs brown and smooth, the white of her brief linen shorts and sleeveless shirt making her look even more alluring than her formal clothes. Betsy, in a gingham play-suit, her bare feet in silly little wooden-soled clogs, leaned back against a striped canvas beach-rest, her brown legs tucked beneath her. But Mrs. Edmonds, corseted and carefully made up, in a filmy white frock, sat rather erect in a canvas chair.

"It was at West Point two weeks before graduation that he met Estelle," said Mrs. Edmonds, and something in her tone made Betsy and Natalie exchange swift, significant glances. "She was there visiting her brother during commencement week. Willie wanted me to come up, but Father was sick and I couldn't leave him. Father passed away the following week so, in spite of what happened, I have always been glad that I didn't go. Though perhaps if I had, things might have been so different for Willie and me."

NATALIE SAW that there was a mist of tears in Mrs. Edmond's eyes as she told her story, and that her soft, almost childish chin quivered a little.

"So the lovely Estelle heaved a monkey-wrench, eh?" said Natalie, purposely callous, in the hope of pulling Mrs. Edmonds back from unhappy memories.

Mrs. Edmonds looked a trifle disconcerted, so that Natalie knew her remark had served its purpose. Mrs. Edmonds stiffened a little, as though she resented Natalie's levity, and said a trifle coldly, "She and Willie were married the week after his graduation."

"What rotten luck for you!" Natalie said gently.

Betsy made a sympathetic murmur and Mrs. Edmonds relaxed a little, once more conscious of their sympathy.

"It wasn't at all a happy marriage," she confided. "Estelle was dazzlingly beautiful, and she'd been brought up in luxury. But she had a wicked temper. She used to fly into terrible rages at the slightest excuse. I'm afraid she made things pretty uncomfortable for poor Willie. She used to act up quite a bit around the army posts where Willie was stationed. Then when their baby was born—it was stillborn, you see, and the doctor said it was because of an accident she'd had when she insisted on going riding after she'd been warned not to—well, she very nearly died. And when she came out of the hospital—"

She was still, shuddering a little. Natalie put out a swift, comforting hand and laid it on hers, saying gently, "Don't tell us if you'd rather not."

"But I'd like you to know. I mean—well, it must seem pretty silly to you, two people our age honeymooning like—like two children—

"A week or two after Estelle came home from the hospital," she went on after a moment, "he woke up one night to see a shadowy figure standing over him. He switched on the light, and it was Estelle in her nightgown, standing over him with a butcher knife in her hand—"

"Good heavens!" gasped Natalie in horror.

Mrs. Edmonds nodded. "She was quite mad, you see," she went on in that patient, gentle voice. "And of course everybody understood then a lot of things that had puzzled them—queer things she had done and said. She was violent and quite dangerous, and she had to be sent away to an institution. That was 16 years ago. She passed away a year ago."

Natalie sat up and stared at Mrs. Edmonds.

"And you've been waiting patiently—I mean, you were still in love with your precious Willie, and waiting—" she began.

"I never loved anyone but Willie," answered Mrs. Edmonds quietly. "So I just went on living in the old house my father had left me and working in Judge Hargrove's office as his secretary, and making what I could out of my life. When Willie came to me and told me that he was free and that he'd never stopped loving me, even though he HAD lost his head that June week and for a little while believed it was Estelle — well, it didn't seem sensible for us not to have what happiness we could after all the years of waiting."

"You poor lamb!" said Natalie huskily.

"I'm afraid I'm not a very good wife," said Mrs. Edmonds in a little burst of honesty. "Living alone for so long, with no one to think about but myself, and—well, not having to consider anybody else's wishes, it's made me selfish and opinionated, and not very adaptable, I'm afraid."

"Nonsense!" said Betsy because now she could steady her voice enough to speak strongly. "He adores you and you're mad about him, and when two people are crazy about each other, that's all that matters. "You're the kind of wife he wants and that's all you should care about."

Natalie stared at Betsy and Betsy felt her color mounting. A little later, when Mrs. Edmonds had gone away, Natalie, staring out at the ocean, said half under her breath, "So THAT'S this thing called love! Waiting all these years—and they say romance is dead."

"Oh, no, it isn't," said Betsy sturdily. "Romance isn't dead. Of course I admit it may not be doing so well just at present—but anyway, it's not dead."

She sat up on an elbow and stared at Natalie with sudden severity.

"Such talk!" she scoffed. "And from a bride on her honeymoon! What do you mean 'romance is dead'?"

Natalie turned over so that her face was half hidden in the crook of a browned arm, and she said huskily, "Oh—Brooks and I don't believe in love!"

Betsy's eyes widened. "Believe in it? Good grief, woman, you don't HAVE to believe in it—any more than you believe that air and sunshine exist. It's just—just—well, something that's THERE. You go along all peaceful and dull and it's just an ordinary day and an ordinary sun and people who are dull—and then all of a sudden, bing! You run smack into a certain person and the sky gets bluer and the sun gets brighter and it's the most glorious world—" She broke off, feeling Natalie's startled eyes on her face.

"Is that the way it is with you and Tom?" Natalie asked steadily.

Betsy felt as though she had taken a step in the dark and fallen headlong. She drew a long breath and looked away from Natalie's intent, almost beseeching eyes, and was still for a long moment. Somehow, she couldn't lie to Natalie—and that was pretty crazy, too. But she couldn't help it.

"No," she said grimly, still avoiding Natalie's eyes, "it's not that way with Tom and me."

"Are you trying to tell me that you're in love with somebody else?"

Betsy sat erect, lifted herself to her feet with swift, effortless grace and, dusting the palms of her hands free of clinging grains of sand, she said stiffly, "I'm not trying to tell you anything at all. You simply made a silly remark about there not being anything in this business of being in love—and in the face of what Mrs. Edmonds has just told you. I simply tried to point out that love DOES exist—"

Natalie was on her feet now. She put a hand over Betsy's and said quickly, "Then you ARE in love, and it's not Tom—poor darling. How did you ever make such a ghastly mistake?"

"It happens that—the man I love is married to someone else," Betsy said between her teeth. "And I thinks I'd rather not talk about it any more, if you don't mind. I've tons of things to do at the Hacienda—if you'll excuse me?"

She was very cold and very polite. It was as though suddenly she had erected a barrier between herself and Natalie that could not be scaled. Natalie watched her as she went swiftly up the beach. "The poor little fool!" Natalie said under her breath. "Married to a perfectly swell person like Tom Forman—and eating her heart out for another man! If that's love—I'll take spinach!"

She was still on the beach a little later when she saw Tom and Brooks and Donald coming toward her. At the sight of Brooks, tall and darkly brown and very handsome in his bathing trunks, a towel slung carelessly about his shoulders, her heart leaped. It was an emotion that shook her so badly that she was conscious of a faint feeling of shock and dismay underlying the exquisite excitement that sent little thrills chasing through her.

"So you'll take spinach, will you?" she told herself shakily. "You poor fool. It's too late for you to take anything except Brooks, bless him — if you can get him, which I doubt."

She had a feeling of being breathless and incoherent, although she hadn't spoken a word aloud. When the men joined her, she was trembling a little and she could not meet Brooks' eyes. She turned to the other two men, gay and charming and vivacious, ignoring Brooks so pointedly that he looked at her curiously, frowning a little in complete bewilderment.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Willyum, I've been doing my best to discourage my sister Fanny from sending us little Herbit to keep while she and Albit go off on their trip, but Fanny has an exceptional strain of determination in her will power.

Do you mean she wont take anything but Yes for an answer? pop said, and ma said, Well, perhaps not in so many words, but at least words to that effect. I'll read you her letter that just came, she said.

Wich she did, being, Deer Pawleen, Albit and I expect to be leaving in about two weeks, so I thought I'd send you a few more notes on Herbit's little manners and customs. He is an essentially musical child, although he has never taken a lesson on any instrument because we preferred to give his talent free rain instead of shackling it with instructions at the very start. The piano is his favorite instrument and you will find that he sits there by the hour with a wrapped expression striking random notes and cords. An unsympathetic listener might call it pounding, but some of the effects he achieves are really remarkable. He seems to have an almost perfect ear, as you will learn for yourself when you hear his tireless imitations of various animals. Sometimes he even wakes up in the dead of the night and gives his conception of a lion in the jungle, or perhaps a whole litter of puppies. Time means nothing to a born artist Albit says. Herbit is absilutely fassinated by orkestras on the radio. His greatest joy is to dial rapidly from the orekstra to another to blend their effects. Albit regards this as a sure indication that Herbit will be a well-known musical director some day. I am sure he will just adore his visit with you. Ever your affectionate sister Fanny.

NEW YORK

Closed—National holiday.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 4 —(CP)—. Prices were firm and volume about normal in the stock market operations. The holiday in the United States may have helped to dull action in the interlisted Industrials which were quiet. Turnover totalled 75,000 shares for the first three hours.

Hargreaves touched 3.70, off 15 and Aunor advanced about the same amount to 1.90 in active demand. Pickle Crow, Upper Canada, Preston and MacLeod Cockshutt were higher and Central Patricia and Kirkland Lake lower.

Changes were narrow in the Base Metals and in the Western Oils, Foothills was up 5 cents at 45.

Canadian Pacific, Brazilian, Walkers, Dominion Stores and Gypsum were strong spots in the Industrials.

Produce Prices Remain Firm

Toronto, July 4—A firm tone was evident in all lines in trading on a quiet Toronto open produce market yesterday. Top-quality eggs held the advanced prices just recently attained, while the butter market was steady. White cheese was quoted nominally at 18 1-2c a pound.

The butter market was quiet and though trading was slow, it was active enough to keep the extremely light receipts moving well.

Light receipts and a good demand combined to hold the egg market firm and possibly strengthen the newly attained positions of top grades. Grade A pullets, the only class to register an increase, advanced 1-2 cents a dozen.

PRINCE BIBESCO REPORTED DEAD

President Since 1930 of International Aeronautical Federation

Rome, July 4 (AP)—The death of Prince George Bibesco, President since 1930 of the International Aeronautical Federation, was reported last night by Stefani, Italian News Agency. He died near Bucharest after an illness, the Agency said, giving his age as 58.

A native of Bucharest and Commander-in-Chief of the Rumanian Air Force in the Balkan War of 1913, Prince George Bibesco had been interested in aviation since 1908, when he met Wilbur Wright. In 1909 he obtained his airplane licence, the 20th international licence issued.

In 1931 he was injured seriously when a plane in which he was en route to French Indo-China struck a vulture and was forced down in India.

He was a first cousin of Prince Antoine Bibesco and was a grandson of Prince George Demetrius Bibesco, who gave Rumania its first written constitution and who reigned until the revolution of 1848.

Bombings May be Prelude to Troop Landings on Continent

London, July 3 (CP)—The magazine "Aeroplane" hinted today that the Royal Air Force's daylight sweeps and nightly poundings of the French coast may be a prelude to troop landings on the continent before Aug. 1.

The magazine said the Germans had been persuaded that "no combined offensive by British arms can be undertaken for several months."

"The R.A.F.," it added, "has been busy for nearly three weeks casting doubts on that assumption.

"Before this month is out there may be developments which would cause more doubts and hearten all the people over whose lands the struggle must be renewed.

"British strategy is still that of renewing the sinews of war and some of them are now to be found in France. But another form of strategical help to Russia is also in the making and France is probably concerned in that, too."

Meanwhile, Aeroplane asserted, Germans must guess "as to where and when and how the next pieces of British intervention will take place."

$20,000 Damage By Explosion, Fire In Fireworks Shop

Oak Bluffs, Mass., July 4 —(AP) —An explosion followed by fire in a fireworks store threatened this island community's business district this Independence Day, nearly trapped an elderly, crippled woman and caused considerable excitement among scores of holiday visitors.

Fire Chief Harry Webb estimated damage a "perhaps $20,000."

Police Chief Augustus Amaral said he was investigating two theories, one that a fireworks piece, returned as defective, later exploded, and another that a small boy hurled a lighted firecracker into the shop.

Hirohito Felicitates United States on 165th Anniversary

Tokyo, July 4 (AP)— Emperor Hirohito sent President Roosevelt a message today felicitating the United States on the 165th anniversary of its independence.

RUSSIANS WAGING

Apparently the Berezina offensive, a direct threat to Moscow, was alternating between heavy blows at Borisov, some 40 miles northeast of Minsk on the Moscow road, and Bobruisk, 90 miles southeast of Minsk.

Both towns are on the river which was no great obstacle to Napoleon on his way to Moscow but ran red with the blood of his men when they fought their way across improvised bridges on the way back.

Today the Russians reported that Bobruisk was the centre of the fighting, just as it was three days ago. Yesterday the German onslaught centred on Borisov. The Russian communiques last night and today did not repeat an earlier claim that the Germans had failed in repeated attempts to span the Berezina.

Inflict Heavy Defeat

"In the Bobruisk direction, fighting continued," said today's communique. "Our troops, effectively supported by our artillery and the air force, inflicted a heavy defeat on the enemy."

(It appeared that the Russians might now be throwing themselves at bridgeheads the Germans claimed to have established on the eastern shore of the Berezina, at either or both Borisov and Bobruisk. The German high command claimed today that the Berezina had been crossed at several points.)

From the Dvinsk sector of Latvia the Russians reported a successful battle with advanced and reconnoitring German detachments which permitted them to take up "new fighting positions." Last night the Russians acknowledged Nazi crossings of the Dvina River at two places.

In southern Poland, meanwhile, Russian forces were said to be putting up a terrific battle against Nazi columns attempting to gain a stranglehold on the rich Ukraine. The communique indicated the Nazi advance had been halted, at least temporarily, in this area.

"In the Rowne and Tarnopol direction," the communique said, "our troops continued fierce fighting against strong enemy forces, counteracting their advance toward the east and southeast."

Rowne and Tarnopol are both in the Luck area, which has been the scene of some of the bitterest fighting of the 13-day-old war.

Lose Only One Plane

The Russians declared their air force had been unusually active yesterday, striking heavy blows at German motorized forces and losing only one plane in these operations. At least 24 Nazi planes were downed during the day, the communique declared.

An earlier communique credited Red army forces barring the road to Moscow with inflicting heavy losses on German troops in the second day of a battle on the banks of the historic Berezina River east of Minsk.

"Valiant fighting took place throughout the day on the Berezina River, where by co-ordinated blows of infantry, tanks, artillery and aircraft, our troops are causing heavy casualties among the enemy," a communique said.

Forced Crossings Made

The communique did not say as did yesterday's, that the Nazis had been thrown back in their attempts to force a crossing of the stream, less than 400 miles west of Moscow, where the main body of Napoleon's army was cut up in its 1812 retreat.

Northward in Lavia the Russians admitted German troops had forced crossings of the Dvina River yesterday at Dvinsk and Jekabpils, which is half way between Dvinsk and Riga, the former Latvian capital.

(The Nazis claimed last Sunday that they had captured Dvinsk, on the north bank of the Dvina near the Latvian-Russian border.)

Beside the hard fighting in the Dvinsk and Minsk regions, the Russians said, battles also were going on in the Tarnopol sector east of Lwow, in southeastern Poland.

"The enemy is everywhere meeting with stubborn resistance from our troops, devastating artillery fire and crushing blows by the Soviet air force,' the communique said.

Thousands of Dead

"Thousands of German dead, blazing tanks and enemy aircraft were left lying on the battle fields."

Around Minsk, the Russians continued, considerable losses also were inflicted on the invaders.

"The enemy cannot withstand the bayonet charges of our soldiers," they said. "The fighting has disclosed that enemy tanks avoid clashes with our heavy and medium tanks, and wherever fighter aircraft appear we rapidly gain domination of the air."

First reports of guerilla activity since Stalin yesterday called for nation-wide warfare of this type together with a "scorched earth" policy of frustrating the Nazis said that in one Nazi-occupied section of the Soviet a guerilla party blew up a train loaded with munitions for German artillery as it moved toward the front.

Crew Exterminated

"The crew aboard the train was exterminated,' the communique added. "The guerillas—these valiant Soviet patriots—succeeded in getting away in time."

Cases of sabotage deep in the German rear also were reported increasing.

"Many artillery pieces recently were rendered useless at the Skoda works (in formed Czecho-Slovakia)," the Russians declared. "A new German chemical plant which was set on fire by Netherlands patriots has been destroyed in Holland. Eleven freighters with German military cargoes have been blown up in Norway. Poles hiding in wayside woods pierce rifle holes in tank cars in which oil is being transported from Rumania to Germany."

(One of the reasons Foreign Minister Ribbentrop gave for the Nazi invasions of Russian thirteen days ago was that the Soviet had carried on sabotage in Germany and occupied lands. He claimed specifically sixteen attempts to damage German ships.)

Sarcastically, the information bureau included this refence to Finland in its communique this morning:

"Fascist bosses of the town of Lahti in Finland announced that they will pay fliers 1,000 Finnish marks for each Soviet plane brought down. Judging by the last reports from the front the Finnish fliers in no way have put a drain on the municipal funds of Lahti."

FOURTH OF JULY

Britons Honor United States

American patriotic music was played through loudspeakers at this city's Waterloo and Victoria stations.

Members of the American Society gathered at a hotel to hear Ambassador John G. Winant speak.

First among the day's events for the Ambassador, however, was a visit to bomb-battered St. Paul's Cathedral for the unveiling of a tablet honoring Flt.-Lt. William Fiske, first American flier to die in service with the Royal Air Force.

One hotel advertised: "Philadelphia pepperpot, chicken gumbo, corned beef hash, corn on the cob and Boston beans."

The American Eagle Club canteen in the heart of London planned a dance tonight, featuring United States music.

Newspapers Refer to July 4

Morning newspapers devoted much space to Independence Day. The Daily Express carried a United States flag in the upper right hand corner of the front page. Its lead editorial stressed the importance of the spirit of independence this year.

In an editorial The Daily Herald said:

"The faith proclaimed in Philadelphia in 1776 is the faith for which we of the British Commonwealth are fighting today.

"And in that fight, we know that we have the devoted support of the American people. It could not be otherwise."

JAPAN CONSIDERS

Mouth is Sealed

Ishii was asked whether the government's decision concerning the Russian-German war was to remain neutral.

"My mouth is sealed," he replied. The government declared Wednesday it had adopted a policy, but did not disclose its nature.

The spokesman said, however, that Foreign Minister Matsuoka had communicated this decision fully to Soviet Ambassador Constantin Smetanin. The two conferred Wednesday.

The next day it was disclosed that 100 Russian women and children from Soviet Embassy families were preparing to leave for home almost immediately. (Tokyo's decision also was communicated fully to German Ambassador Eugen Ott and Berlin spokesmen yesterday professed to be pleased with it.)

The cabinet's information board said that some Japanese ships, especially on long foreign routes, had been recalled for services nearer home. It added, however, that this was due entirely to the shortage of shipping space on routes nearer Japan. Rumors circulated abroad, linking this with possible new Japanese military or political action, were declared groundless.

The post office announced the withdrawal of one ship from the Yokohama-New York run and a postponement of the sailing of another.

KRUPP MUNITION

Also feeling the impact of British bombs were the port of Bremen and industrial quarters at Bremerhaven in the 23rd smash at German targets in the last 25 nights. Seven British planes were lost in the overnight offensive.

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted the assaults damaged the Port of Bremen.)

Over the British Isles, for the second straight night there were no reports of bombs being dropped. No enemy activity of any kind was reported.

May Be Prelude to Offensive

The sustained smashing at potential invasion bases and Nazi fortifications and airdromes in Occupied France, and the blasting at war industries in the Ruhr and Rhineland brought discussion last night that such tactics might be the prelude of an attempt to seize a foothold on the continent.

Britain's foremost publication on military aviation, the magazine Aeroplane, said in an article that before the end of July "there may be developments which would cause Germany more doubts and hearten all people over whose lands the struggle must be renewed".

In the same connection, independent French sources were quoted by Reuters News Agency as saying that half the Nazi forces in France had been withdrawn presumably to bolster the offensive against Russia.

Since the start of the Russo-Nazi war the man-on-the-street in Britain has discussed possibility of a drive into France, with the Air Force and Navy co-operating with troops.

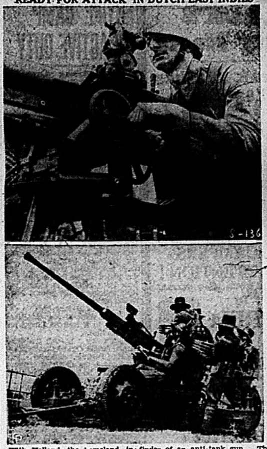
In continuance of sweeps over Northern France, the R.A.F. during daylight hours yesterday twice roared over the coast and back. Eleven Nazi planes were shot down, with a British loss of one bomber and seven fighters.

The raids were concentrated on railway yards in the Nazebrouck and St. Omer districts, which serve the Nazi-held coast. Returning pilots reported that for the most part enemy planes kept out of range until the British planes turned home.

In Wednesday night raids on the Reich, the main targets of bombs were at Cologne, Bremen and Duisberg. Both banks of the Rhine were fired at Cologne and a big industrial plant was blown up. Shipyards and factory districts of Bremen suffered considerable damage.

During daylight yesterday only one Nazi plane was seen over England and it crashed on the Cornish coast.

READY FOR ATTACK IN DUTCH EAST INDIES



With Holland, the homeland, in the hands of the Nazis, the Netherlands Indies soldiers stand prepared to fight for the Pacific islands against any invader. Main invader in this area, however, would most logically be Japan, Axis partner of Germany. The TOP photo shows an Indies soldier handling the range-finder of an anti-tank gun. The LOWER photo shows other Netherlands Indies artillerymen handling an anti-aircraft gun, while wearing gas masks. Notice the hats worn by these men. They are quite different from those of any other army and bear a distinct resemblance to the hats once worn by Quakers. They are made of bamboo.

Roosevelt Will Dedicate Nation Anew to Principles Championed for 165 Years

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hyde Park, N.Y., July 4 (AP) — On the anniversary of the birth of the United States, President Roosevelt will speak today to his fellow Americans and, with them, dedicate the nation anew to the principles of liberty it has championed for 165 years.

Mr. Roosevelt's address will be broadcast late today (5 p.m. E.D.T.) as part of a national celebration of Independence Day arranged by the office of Civilian Defence.

The President intended to touch on international affairs, but reluctance of the temporary White House to call the speech "important" suggested that momentous pronouncements would be lacking.

Mr. Roosevelt gave a possible hint of his subject matter in a statement June 25 when he commended to Americans everywhere the commemoration of the anniversary of independence from a Britain now aligned solidly beside the United States in a policy of defeating the axis. He spoke of a current crisis in American life, of "this hour of anxiety and peril," and added:

"But these days are also days of hope, and as the birthday of American independence draws near it is altogether fitting that we should rededicate ourselves to defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression in the immortal declaration."

The President was to broadcast from his room in the Franklin D. Roosevelt library here.

It was to be a more solemn holiday than usual for the Roosevelts, who usually celebrate with a gay picnic at the Firt Lady's Val-Kil cottage. This year, aides said, Mr. Roosevelt planned "nothing special" for the day.

Symbol of Co-operation

The gathering of the Legionnaires with the members of the Canadian Corps Association and members of other Canadian Veteran bodies was viewed as a symbol of Anglo-American co-operation in the fight against the Axis. The gathering's theme song, written especially for the occasion by Geoffrey O'Hara and John W. Bratton, emphasized the bond between the countries. The chorus runs:—

"Let's get together:
Everybody sing
'I wish I was in Dixie'
And God Save the King".

A message from Lord Halifax was brought to the Legionnaires by Rev. Dr. S. C. Benson of Brooklyn, N.Y., First Great War American Army Chaplain. Penned on the official notepaper of the British Embassy in the United States, the Ambassador's message expressed assurance that the Legionnaires would take back to their homes "pleasantest memories" of their Canadian neighbors.

Front Line on Channel

The western hemisphere's front line was on the English Channel and the Ogdensburg agreement, by helping "to strengthen the line on this side of the Atlantic, fortified Canada's direct participation in the fight over there".

The fifty United States destroyers delivered to Britain at a Canadian port were of "priceless value", and had done their full part in preserving the lifeline of the British Isles.

"Extension of the neutrality patrol gives us warning of enemy ships in the battle of the Atlantic; the taking over of foreign shipping has increased the supply of available tonnage, and extending the zone of operations for American Merchant ships has made delivery of the tools that much greater and faster", Col. Ralston said. "Those were government measures.

Constant Reminders

"Along with them have come constant reminders of the generous interest and support of the American people in goods and gifts and contributions and services to alleviate the plight of those in England who are bearing the burden and heat of the day".

Men on active service in the Canadian fighting services rose from 10,000 when the war began to about 275,000 today, Col. Ralston said. Of these more than 80,000 were overseas.

Col. Ralston said the fortress of freedom was held by the fighting spirit of Britain's services, and of the men and women, the boys and girls of the British Isles.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN KING AT EDMONTON, ALTA.

Tells People War Effort Not Gov't's, Alone but the Effort of All

GOES SIGHT SEEING

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, July 4—(CP)—Back in Alberta after his swing through British Columbia, Prime Minister Mackenzie King started a day's sight-seeing here this morning, heartened by the warmest reception he has received on his western tour.

Mr. King reached Edmonton last evening and will remain until this evening. During his 24-hour stay he will inspect Royal Canadian Air Force and army establishments and deliver an address at a joint luncheon of local organizations.

In an impromptu speech last night to those who gave him the largest and most enthusiastic railway station welcome he has received on his tour, Mr. King said the war effort was not the government's alone but the effort of all the people.

Spent Evening Quietly

The Prime Minister spent his evening quietly in his hotel room, receiving some visitors and continuing work on the speech he will deliver at noon.

He had almost perfect weather for his journey through the Rocky Mountains from Vancouver and was accorded a rare treat —an unclouded view of Mt. Robson, highest peak in the Canadian Rockies.

At Jasper National Park where the train stopped 35 minutes the Prime Minister drove to the resort centre and called upon Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States, at the bungalow in which he is vacationing.

Mr. Hughes, who rarely faces photographers or newspapermen, consented to being photographed with the Prime Minister and they exchanged memories of previous meetings.

TANKER IS SAVED SAILED TO PORT

Crew After 3 Days in Lifeboats Sends Volunteers Aboard Tanker to Close Tanks and Bulkheads

New York, July 4 (AP)—For three days and nights the crew of the torpedoed British tanker Ensis bobbed in a lifeboat in the North Atlantic, radioing frantic messages for help with a portable radio they had rigged up.

Radio operators at sea heard it and sympathised. Knowing that British Admiralty orders called for ships in convoy to flee in all directions when submarines attacked, they assumed that other ships in the area were afraid to make the rescue for fear of running into the submarine that hit the Ensis.

One British seaman said they passed close to the lifeboat, then about 600 miles north of the Azores.

After the third day the radio was silent. Listeners assumed the ships and its crew were gone.

Today a story of heroism and desperation was told by waterfront circles, who said the Ensis crew returned to their ship after sending volunteers aboard to close tanks and watertight bulkheads. The crew then sailed her more than 1,000 miles across the Atlantic into Halifax.

This is often possible with a tanker because a crew can close off some tanks, and fill others to balance the vessel when torpedoes rip holes into a ship, seamen said.

The 6,207-ton Ensis was en route from England to Canada in ballast and so had plenty of buoyancy.

The vessel, built in 1937, is owned by the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company and her crew has been ferrying American oil to England.

New Aerial Ladder Truck 'Needed Here' Says Ottawa Chief

Ottawa, July 4 (CP)—Ottawa's new aerial ladder fire truck "is urgently needed here," Fire Chief J. J. O'Kelly said in a letter read at a Board of Control meeting yesterday.

The letter was written in reply to a Board of Control request that Chief O'Kelly make a report after news stories appeared saying Canadian cities were being asked for modern aerial trucks for use in the United Kingdom.

"The machine cannot be duplicated today due to restrictions on importing and using aluminum," Chief O'Kelly's letter said.

SMALLER PLATES POSSIBILITY

Albany, N.Y., July 4 (AP)—New York automobiles may carry 20 per cent smaller licence plates in 1943 because of a steel shortage attributed to defence needs.

The State Motor Vehicle Commissioner, Carroll E. Mealey, said yesterday revision of the plate has been considered since early last winter, with a view to trimming production costs, but the lack of steel "makes some action necessary." He will confer on the problem with other state officials within the next two weeks.

The 1942 plates, made in State prisons already are being manufactured.

Picton, July 4.—John Cole, well-known farmer residing near Milford, suffered an injury to the shoulder blade, a cut on the head and a severe shaking up when he fell from a load of hay to the barn floor. Mr. Cole was assisting in unloading and was pulling a trip rope when it broke. He fell over the front of the load, narrowly missing the tongue of the wagon. He was rendered unconscious for a time but is now progressing satisfactorily, but will be laid up for about three weeks. The shoulder blade was cracked as he fell on his head and shoulders. Neighbors kindly gathered and helped harvest the crop.

The size of the Italian force holding out at Gondar was not estimated. At Debra Tabor there were approximately 4,200 Italian and native troops.

Street Scene: A ragged musician, standing with head bared beneath Nelson's monument in Trafalgar Square, drawing from a saw shrill chords which to the well-tuned ear are recognised as "There'll Always Be An England."

There's one woman in England who doesn't appreciate the job the Royal Air Force is doing. When a Royal Observer Corps officer inspected the remains of a Junkers 88 on a farm, he found the farmer's wife indignant.

It was a "proper disgrace" she told him that the R.A.F. had been so careless as to shoot down the enemy machine on her property.

The Merchant Navy Comforts Service appealed for 25,000 kits of clothing for men rescued from sunken ships.

ENTIRE CAMP ON ACTIVE DUTY

Army Training Camp at Cornwall Empty Because Every Man is on Active Duty

Cornwall, Ont., July 4 (CP)—The army training camp at Cornwall was empty today because every young man who reported to it this week for compulsory military service had gone on active duty.

This development brought a special order from National Defence Headquarters that the men be given a brief leave in recognition of their good spirit. They were dismissed until Monday morning when they will start training as active soldiers.

Under orders of the National War Services Department, several hundred young men from this district returned to the camp last Sunday for additional training. Most of them had already received a 30-day period earlier in the year and were being recalled to round out their training to the present four-month period.

A Few 21-Year-Olds

A few of them, 21-year-olds, were reporting to a training centre for the first time.

On Tuesday Lt.-Col. Rudolphe Larose, former Officer Commanding the Hull Regiment and who has commanded the Cornwall training centre since its inception, asked for recruits for the active army.

The call met good response and subsequent calls were made Wednesday and Thursday. By noon the entire complement of the camp had indicated willingness to service in uniform anywhere.

When the men return Monday they will begin the two-months basic training that recruits receive in the active army before being passed on to advanced training centres which prepare men for overseas campaigning.

Inventor of Telephone Forecast Supremacy of Air Power 33 Yrs. Ago

"The nation that controls the air will ultimately rule the world."

Sounds like a sentence by a military writer in the summer of 1941, doesn't it?

But it isn't. It was written 33 years ago by Alexander Graham Bell, at the conclusion of a letter commenting on an article in "The Century Magazine" for May, 1908. The entire letter is extraordinarily interesting, and seems to reveal once again the imaginative good judgment which had led Dr. Bell, many years before, to prophesy the march of the telephone around the world.

Here's the story:

In March, 1908, Bell was asked by the editor of "The Century" to read the proofs of an article by Edmund Clarence Stedman entitled "The Prince of the Power of the Air." For some time Bell had been deeply interested in problems of flight. He had experimented with kites of his own design, and had been closely associated with other aeronautical pioneers in some of their experiments. It was natural, therefore, when Stedman wrote an article relating to aeronautical design and the significance of air power, that Bell's comment should have been sought.

"What of England," Stedman wrote, "the country which of all has most to lose and least to gain? How is she contemplating the era when all nations equal her in possession of the atmospheric ocean, the higher seas? When the aerial fleets of the world can pass as readily as her own not into, but over the Cinque Ports; over St. Paul's, and Lombard Street and Buckingham Palace; over Windsor, over Manchester, and Birmingham and Sheffield; over the length of the fairest, strongest, securest, most historic, and richest of argosied realms, from Land's End to John o' Groat's—from her new naval base at Rosyth to the borders of the Mersey?"

After reading the proofs of Stedman's article, Bell wrote in part as follows from Washington, D.C., on March 16, 1908:

'Many thanks for the privilege of reading Mr. Stedman's article, which I return. I see nothing to correct in it.

"Of all the nations in the world the interests of Great Britain will be most vitally affected by progress in aeronautics. For it is obvious that sea-power will become of secondary importance when air-power has been fully developed through the use of dirigible balloons and flying machines in war. The nation that secures control of the air will ultimately rule the world."

Thus did Bell, in his comment on Stedman's brilliant article, sum up his view of the question that now shakes the world.

Other Passengers Might be Taken Aboard Aircraft

Ankara, Turkey, July 3 (delayed) (AP)—A Russian plane carrying eight British military and diplomatic representatives left Ankara for Moscow today but returned some time later on wirelessed instructions from the Soviet government.

The mission arrived from Cairo last night. Its members were not identified, but the British Embassy said they included several officers below the rank of colonel.

BETTER CHANCES NOW TO LIVE TO BE 100

All of us are interested in long life, and many are the recipes for it. A daily pint of beer—no beer—smoking—no smoking—hefty beefsteaks—no meat—every centenarian has a different tale to tell. There is, however, just one point on which all doctors agree—that no man or woman ever reached extreme old age without a healthy colon.

It is impossible to have a healthy colon if you are the victim of constipation. Waste matter stagnating in the intestines sets up toxic poisons, which seep into your bloodstream, and cause lingering ill-health. The main cause of constipation is lack of moisture in your large bowel. Relief comes only when that moisture can be induced to return.

What Kruschen does

Kruschen contains several mineral salts, which are blended in exactly the right proportion, to bring back moisture to the large bowel. They stimulate the organs of evacuation to smooth, gentle action. At the same time, Kruschen has a diuretic action which helps to flush your kidneys and liver, and assists in ridding your bloodstream of the poisons which previous constipation left behind.

Naturally, the amount of Kruschen required to clear up a stubborn case of constipation depends on the individual. But once health and spirits have been regained, the dose should be reduced to just enough to cover a dime, first thing every morning.

You can buy Kruschen from any drug store—for 25c and 75c. Give it a trial. Start today.

BRITISH BOMBS HIT LORIENT AND BREST

Banks of Berezina River Piled High With Nazi Dead

Fiercest Fighting on Whole Front Taking Place Between Borisov and Bobruisk, East of Minsk

SAY LOSSES 750,000

Moscow, July 5 (AP)—Repeated German attacks in a fierce effort to cross the Berezina River toward Borisov and Bobruisk were reported hurled back by the Red army as the river bank battle went into its fourth day and the Russians said today the bank was piled with Nazi dead.

To the south, the Russian communique declared, strong tank units trying to cross Prut River in Bessarabia were stopped by Soviet troops, after a German thrust toward Tarnopol was stopped and diverted in the direction of Novmgrad Volyinski.

In the far north, the Russians reported fighting continuing unabated in the Murmansk and Kandalaksha areas and along the Karelian isthmus, where Soviet territory borders on Finland.

The big battle, however, apparently was centred along the Berezina and Druja rivers from Borisov to Bobruisk, 50 to 75 miles east of Minsk, where the Moscow communique said "repeated enemy attempts to force the rivers were successfully frustrated by the fire of our troops."

German dead were reported sprawled on the river banks and carried downstream, but nowhere, the Red army reported, did the Nazis fight their way across.

Of the southern front the war bulletin said:

Nazis Claim German Army Has Reached Outposts of Russia's Gigantic Stalin Defence System

1,100-MILE LINE

Berlin, July 5 (AP)—Nazi spokesmen claimed today the German army had reached the outposts of Russia's gigantic Stalin line after forcing a crossing of the Berezina river, on the route to Moscow, at several points.

(The Russians said Nazi efforts to bridge the Berezina had been beaten back in the third day of fighting at that river.)

A communique last night claimed that 20,000 encircled Russian soldiers at Minsk had shot their political commisar and surrendered.

This brings to 180,000 the number of prisoners claimed thus far in the two weeks of conflict.

(The Soviet government announced a year ago that the system whereby political commissars were equal in power to army commanders had been abolished and that the commissars had been made subordinate to the military leaders without authority to counter-sign or veto orders.)

Popped Up Like Magic

Meanwhile, the phrase "Stalin line" has popped up like magic throughout the Nazi press in the past 24 hours.

The line runs 1,100 miles from the Black Sea to the Gulf of Finland. From the Black Sea east of the Dniester River it angles northwestward to Mogilev Podolski, then turns north to run past Zhitomir to the Dnieper River, then on past Vitebsk, Pskov and Lake Peipus to the Gulf of Finland.

(Russia has kept details of the fortified line secret. About all that is known of it is that it combines the best features of the French Maginot Line—fully-equipped concrete fortresses underground —with the advantages of the German Siegfried Line, a series of minor forts built in depth. This depth is said to average 25 miles.)

TWO NORSEMEN FLIERS KILLED

Clarkson, Ont., July 5 (CP)—Two members of the Royal Norwegian Air Force were trapped in their plane and burned to death today when the machine crashed near here.

Details of the crash were not immediately available.

The Commanding Officer of Camp Little Norway in Toronto said that the only information he had was that the plane had gone into a spin and crashed, and that the two airmen were dead.

Wires Disrupted By Aurora Borealis

Atmospheric disturbances caused by the presence of the Aurora Borealis, disrupted cable services throughout the district this morning. As a result, Canadian Press wires in the news rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer were unable to carry their full quota of foreign and domestic news. Many of the stories were garbled, and "good copy" came through at intermittent periods.

Toward noon the situation cleared somewhat but the electrical disturbances were still in evidence.

New York, July 5 (AP).—Magnetic earth currents early today disrupted wire and wireless communications in Canada and the United States and for several hours before dawn blacked out all radio and cable contact with Europe.

The disturbances were described by technicians as similar to those caused by Aurora Borealis or Northern Lights.

NBC and CBS reported paralysis of short wave reception. Western Union said its ground wires were affected during the night, but that spasmodic interruption ceased by mid-morning.

American Telephone and Telegraph reported similar ground wire difficulty, and RCA Communications and Press Wireless said their service was impeded frequently.

Destroy Hitler and All 'He Stands for' Is Britain's Determination Says Eden

London, July 5 (CP). — Foreign Secretary Eden reaffirmed today Britain's determination to destroy Hitler and "all he stands for".

"We are not in any circumstances prepared to negotiate with him at any time on any subject," Mr. Eden told an outdoor meeting. "We are all out to beat Hitler.

"We shall not let go until we have done the job and we welcome all those who will give us a hand to finish it."

Mr. Eden added the warning that "we should make the greatest mistakes were we to imagine that extension of the conflict into Russia justified us in relaxing our vigor even for an instant."

"On the contrary," he said, "this latest example of the insatiable German appetite should cause those in all countries who treasure their freedom to redouble their efforts.

"In the next few months, the war will be intensified. The pace will quicken, and so must our own enterprise.

"Russian forces are putting up stiff and stubborn resistance.

"We shall do our utmost to help them, or help anyone else who fights Hitler.

"Both in the military and in the economic sphere we shall co-operate with all our strength and in full loyalty to complete the common task —the defeat of Germany."

Turning briefly to the post-war world, the Foreign Secretary declared:

"Experience has taught us the stern realities of the world in which we live, and that the foundations of peace are constant vigilance and sufficient armed strength to strike and overwhelm any possible aggressor.

"A new order will not grow and will not endure unless it is justly framed, strongly ordered and firmly maintained. It must be no scrap of paper to be torn to shreds while those charged with its observance stand aside indifferent or preoccupied.

"In this war we seek no material gain. We pursue no selfish ambition. We claim neither territory nor prize. We have but one aim—to break the power of the tyrant Hitler so that nations may be free to work together to build a saner and happier world in security and at peace."

LARGEST GROUP EMPIRE FLIERS REACH BRITAIN

In Past Six Weeks Trained Men Have Poured into R. A. F. Reception Depot

TRAINED IN CANADA

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, July 5 (CP Cable)—A group of cat-eyed Canadian fliers, who trained under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and are slated for night fighter operations, reached Britain during the last week with the largest contingent of Empire flying personnel ever sent to this war front.

All trained in Canada, pilots, air gunners and observers poured into the Royal Air Force reception depot here from debarkation points within the last six weeks. Some had gone to Canada for training from Australia and New Zealand.

The recruits are being assigned immediately to squadrons for training flights. 25 For Eagle Squadron

Twenty five pilots for the American Eagle Squadron of the Royal Air Force were with the Empire airmen.

The reception depot was hotbed of speculation as the men awaited the call for active service. Some of the pilots already were wearing ark sun glasses similar to those worn by Britain's minight heroes.

The airmen will go to all types of squadrons but a group of them are sure-fire certainties for night fighters, said an officer. He added that many Canadians were particularly adapted to this sort of operation.

Every Province Represented

Every province of Canada was represented in this latest draft jamming the depot and taking things easy before going into battle.

FO. Erre Scott of Quebec City and Ottawa, the only Canadian officer attached permanently to the depot, looked after the Canadian arrivals. Most of the fliers have the rank of sergeant.

One of the largest batches hailed from Toronto, including Cyril Puldark sun glasses similar to those and Jack Meredith, all air gunners.

War Will be Fought and Won In Western Europe, Says Wavell; And U. S. Manpower Will be Needed

British General, According to New York Times, Grants Informal Interview in Cairo — New York Times Says Germany Will be Beaten Eventually by Invasion of Her Soil After Being Hammered From Air

New York, July 5 (CP)— Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, according to the New York Times today, believes the war will be fought to a decision in western Europe and that the manpower of the United States will be necessary for victory.

The Times' correspondent in Cairo and the representative of a United States magazine were received by the Middle East Commander in Chief, who is leaving soon to assume the command in India, and the General's remarks were made in an informal interview.

Later Sir Archibald received the press generally in a farewell meeting and reviewed the middle eastern situation. But he did not refer again to the question of American participation.

The new Times dispatch outlined Sir Archibald's ideas as follows:

"Whatever happens in eastern Europe, where the Germans and Russians are battling, the final issue of the war will be decided in the west as it was in the last war, and in the end it will be a battle of man power.

"If the war continues long enough—and Gen. Wavell appears to have no illusions that this will be a short war if it is to be effectively and permanently won—American man power will be needed. United States airplanes, tanks and guns, decisive though their aid has been in helping Britain hold out this long, will not be enough. There is a limit to Britain's man power.

"Germany can and will be beaten eventually by an invasion of her soil after she has been hammered sufficiently from the air.

"When and where American troops should eventually be employed are matters to be determined by events."

AMERICANS RENEW THEIR OATH LED BY PRESIDENT

Roosevelt Tells People That Nation Can't Survive as Oasis of Liberty Amid Dictatorships

CELEBRATED 'FOURTH'

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Hyde Park, N.Y., July 5—(AP)—In an unprecedented Independence Day ceremony, President Roosevelt told the United States people Friday they must pledge lives as well as allegiance to country and flag because the fundamental principles for which their forefathers fought in 1776 were "being struck down abroad and threatened here".

Millions of citizens, commemorating the holiday as they pleased—at beaches, ball parks, picnic groves and homes—paused at 5 p.m. and heard the admonition of their President.

Then, led by Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, people and President spoke as one:

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all".

But the liberty of that nation indivisible, Mr. Roosevelt warned, cannot survive in the United States alone if freedom is lost in all other countries.

Speaking by radio from the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, he said:

13 R.C.A.F. Squadrons Now in England Says Prime Minister

Edmonton, July 5—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in an address here there now are 13 Royal Canadian Air Force Squadrons in Britain and that "three of these have been there for almost a year."

Speaking at a luncheon sponsored by the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and Service Clubs, the Prime Minister in reviewing Canada's war effort said:

"Ten (squadrons) have been formed from graduates of the Air Training Plan. More are in process of formation."

He said Canadian ground crews were being sent to Britain to service the Canadian Squadrons on active service "as rapidly" as they can be made available.

In addition considerable numbers of Canadian graduates of the Air Training Plan are serving with the Royal Air Force.

PEPPER AVERS WHEELER SET WAR-MONGERS

Senator Claims Isolationists Using Russia as "Red Herring"

SPEAKS PLAINLY

Buffalo, July 5 (AP)—Senator Claude Pepper, Florida Democrat and friend of the Roosevelt foreign policy, declared before an audience Friday that "by a kind and courageous action" the United States "cannot only save the world, but her own sons."

The Senator, addressing an Independence Day mass meeting from the same platform as Senator Burton Wheeler, Montana Democrat and chief isolationist, accused Wheeler, Senator Gerald Nye (Rep-N.D.) Charles Lindbergh and former President Herbert Hoover of being the "real war-mongers of America."

The alliance of these men "masquerading behind a slogan which says 'America First' and means 'America Last' has found a new red herring to drag across the course of American public opinion—Russia," he declared.

"They would deceive the people about the real issue and play with their skilled hands upon whatever credulity they may find. They would have the people of America help Hitler by refusing to help Hitler's enemies."

Pepper said if Hitler conquers Russia, he will be out of Europe and added:

"When he shall clasp the bloody hand of his ally, Japan, they will tower above the Western Pacific and dominate the whole East, China, India, the Near East, and shortly thereafter, Africa—Dakaer. Then when their submarines, their raiders, their bombers shall lie within 1,600 miles of Brazil and within three miles of Alaska, America will have at last sadly achieved, through German encirclement, the isolation which Senator Wheeler and others so eloquently speak.

Their Peace Price

"I challenge these pretenders to the throne of peace for America to tell America at what price they want peace.'

Pepper declared it is now America's turn to "keep her rendezvous with destiny.

"By a kind and courageous action I believe—I swear I believe— that America can not only save the world, but her own sons. Every passing day in which we delay cuts down our chance to save either America or America's sons."

Wheeler said "only English courage" or a "negotiated peace now" can preserve Britain.

London, July 5 —(AP)— Col. G. Symonds, former chief fire adviser at the Home Office, and Col. A. Croad, expert on shelter construction problems, have arrived in Russia on a mission from the Home Security Ministry to advise the Soviet on civil defence, it was learned today.

ALEPPO IN SYRIA CHIEF OBJECTIVE OF BRITISH ARMS

Three Different Units Advancing on Important Syrian Stronghold

BEIRUT BOMBED

Jerusalem, July 5 —(AP)— British and Indian mechanized forces, striking from central and eastern Syria, made Aleppo, chief city in the north, their objective today after capture of Deir-ez-Zor and Tell Kotchek, a military spokesman said.

In the Lebanon theatre, meanwhile, the Royal Navy was reported to have bombarded a Vichy French coastal stronghold hampering an Australian advance on Beirut.

Deir-ez-Zor, headquarters of the Vichy French Middle Euphrates command and an important supply centre, was taken Friday by Indian troops after an advance of more than 75 miles from Abou Kemal on the Syrian-Iraq border. The town is 175 miles southeast of Aleppo.

A spokesman said that another mechanized force moving into Syria from Iraq occupied Tell Kotchek, which is near the Turkish border in the northeast corner of Syria and is on the Istanbul-Baghdad railway. This force is about 300 miles east of Aleppo as the crow flies and 150 miles northeast of the troops at Dier-ez-Zor.

British and Free French forces advancing north from Damascus and west from Palmyra with Homs as their immediate objective constitute a third threat to Aleppo. Occupation of Homs would put these combined armies approximately 100 miles south of Aleppo.

The troops entering Palmyra yesterday reported most of the original garrison had withdrawn and only 300 Vichy soldiers were left to surrender.

Australians on the coastal road leading to Beirut, Lebanese capital, ran into increased artillery shelling from a Vichy post at Damour, and the Navy was called upon to bombard the position.

(The Vichy Government said the Royal Air Force bombed Beirut several times during the night of July 3-4 and that a bombing during the day caused native civilians to flee the city to the safety of the hills.

(Soueida, capital of Jebel ed Druz in the south-central section of the Levant states, also is being bombed daily, the Vichy Government said, and natives there likewise have taken to the hills.)

Posthumous Award For Brave Sailor

London (CP)—Able Seaman Robert Percival, who remained aboard a singing ship to help save his wounded skipper, has been posthumously awarded the British Empire Medal, it was announced in the London Gazette.

The captain, Harold Hewsom, suffered two broken legs when the vessel was damaged six days after the outbreak of war. A few minutes before the ship sank he ordered the crew into the only available lifeboat, but the young seaman refused to desert his captain.

Mighty Force of RAF Bombers Cross Channel for Daylight Raids

London, July 5 (CP)—A mighty force of Royal Air Force bombers, perhaps the biggest yet in daylight, slashed back across the Channel over Northern France today in another big raid in the almost month-long chain of day-and-night air blows against Germany.

The day shift took up where the night bombers left off after battering Nazi targets from the industrial Rhineland to the Atlantic refuge ports harboring some of Germany's biggest warships and U-boat fleets.

The drone of planes over the Channel was heard continuously for half an hour, and shore observers speculated that the R.A.F. was increasing continuously the numbers of its raiding and guardian fighters.

One big formation of fighter-escorted bombers returned from a direction west of Boulogne after heavy explosions, apparently some distance inland, had been heard twice within an hour from the French side.

In the night raid on Brest the 26,000-ton German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst and the 10,000-ton cruiser Prinz Eugen were bombed. The port of Lorient also was attacked.

At the same time the coastal command bombers raided the coast of southern Norway, the Air Ministry said, setting fire to docks and shipping at Haugesund and to a factory and the waterfront at Kristiansand.

At Brest high explosive bombs straddled the repeatedly-attacked warships and large fires were started in buildings along the stocks.

Nazi Battleships, Cruisers, U-Boats Given Strafing

Industrial Targets In Germany, Dock At Cherbourg and Yards at Abbeville Also Attacked

MIDLANDS RAIDED

London, July 5 (CP)—The Royal Air Force bombed the 26,000 - ton Bremen battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, the 10,000-ton cruiser Prinz Eugen and Nazi submarines in heavy, overnight air assaults on the occupied French ports of Brest and Lorient, the Air Ministry said today.

Sticks of high explosive bombs straddled the repeatedly-attacked warships and large fires were started in buildings along the docks.

During these operations two enemy fighters were destroyed.

Meanwhile, lighter forces attacked industrial targets in Germany, docks at Cherbourg and railway yards at Abbeville, in Nazi-occupied France.

Four British bombers failed to return from the night operations.

The Nazi warships at Brest have been objectives of repeated attacks and it is believed that all have been so seriously crippled they are unable to limp to another haven.

Prinz Eugen at Brest

The Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been at Brest for several months and the Prinz Eugen reached there after escaping scouring British warships following the recent sinking of the Nazi battleship Bismarck.

The Air Ministry said it had confirmed that three additional enemy planes were destroyed during offensive operations over northern France July 4, making a total of 21 on that day.

The overnight raids were the 24th by the R.A.F. in the last 26 nights.

Lack of enemy air activity of the previous two nights over the British Isles ended last night when Nazi planes bombed the industrial midlands in one of the heaviest raids of summer. Some west Midlands sections had their first bombings in nearly two months. Casualties, including some dead, were reported in at least two towns. Sections of southwest and western England South Wales also were attacked.

Three German attackers were shot down.

One southwest coast town was under attack for several hours and a number of fires were started in the residential district.

The British night raiders roared across the channel to the never-ending attack a short time after the late-day shift came home from violent smashes at targets in occupied France and on Germany's second port, Bremen, where bombers veered almost to the ground and set fire to factories, freight yards and a railway junction.

Wreckage was thrown higher than the planes. One plane brought back strands of wire on the tail wheel.

Barracks and guns on the North Sea island of Norderney also were blasted and chemical works and a power station near Bethune in France were bombed.

PRIME MINISTER AT SASKATOON TO INSPECT CAMPS

Tells Luncheon Audience 'World Encircling Danger Closing in Upon This Continent'

MAKES INFORMAL CALL

Saskatoon, July 5—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will inspect the military camp at nearby Dundurn today following his arrival from Edmonton where yesterday he told a luncheon audience that "month by month" a "world encircling danger is closing in upon this continent."

The Prime Minister, now on a western tour, will arrive here at 9 a.m. (noon E.D.T.), is scheduled to visit Dundurn in the morning and leave for Prince Albert, Sask., tonight.

He told a meeting of service clubs in Edmonton of Canada's war effort and of plans for establishing a new social order in Canada which he said could not wait until the war was over. "Unless the new world order is already on its way before the war is over we may look for it in vain," he said.

Canada, he said, was working toward this objective by providing pensions and care for war veterans, unemployment insurance and legislation to ensure discharged soldiers receive their jobs back when they leave the army.

Listens to President

In reviewing the Dominion's war efforts the Prime Minister said there were at the present time 300,000 men in the armed forces in addition to 170,000 enrolled in the reserve army.

Following the Edmonton address Mr. King and his audience listened to President Roosevelt's Independence Day broadcast which the Prime Minister termed a "fine declaration for the preservation of freedom."

Much of Mr. King's busy day at the Alberta capital was taken up with a visit to Premier Aberhart, an informal call on Lieut.-Governor J. C. Bowen, an inspection tour of Royal Canadian Air Force establishments and a dinner conference with Trade Minister J. A. MacKinnon, Alberta's cabinet representative.

At the No. 2 Air Observers' School in Edmonton the Prime Minister presented a gold identification disc to LAC. W. W. M. De Boos, of Victoria, 24-year-old member of the Royal Australian Air Force who was named the most proficient student of the class about to graduate from the school.

Earlier in the week Mr. King completed an inspection tour of naval establishments at the Pacific Coast.

Exploding Pistol Cap Causes Loss of Eye

While playing near the home of his grandmother in Roslin, nine-year-old Douglas Thompson of Dundas, Ont., sustained facial injuries and the loss of an eye when power from an exploded pistol cap struck the lad in the face. The lad was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was later found to be necessary to remove the injured eye that had been punctured by the force of the explosion. Dr. J. Empson of Roslin and Dr. A. C. Locke of this city were in attendance.

Nine-year-old Douglas Thompson, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Thompson, formerly of Tweed, but now residing in Dundas, Ont., was spending the summer vacation with his grandmother at Roslin. The lad came into possession of some pistol caps loaded with power. Folding three of them together the boy placed them on a hard base and struck the caps with a small stone causing them to explode. Apparently his face was dangerously near the exploding caps, as powder marks were found on his arms as well as his face. The full force of the explosion was received in the face, the eye-ball being shattered and no chance of regaining sight. The attending physicians tried in vain to save the eye, but without success.

Pastor Tells Of Banishment By Gestapo

A crowd estimated at upwards of three hundred persons heard Pastor Bertil Forsgren in the City Hall Auditorium last night when he spoke on "My Experiences With the Gestapo, and How and Why I Was Banished from Nazi Germany."

Preceding his address with a reading of the Scripture from the 18th. Chapter of St. John's Gospel, which describes the arrest of the Lord Jesus, Mr. Forsgren said, "Before telling my story, I want to first tell the story of the Lord Jesus, because I am only a follower of Him. Apart from Him, I would never have gone to Germany, and would not have had a story to tell. I would very much preferred in 1930, when I left my own country, to have gone to either the United States or to Great Britain to preach, as I have always been an admirer of the British. But God very definitely led and called me to Germany. And now since all real Christian activity is stopped, I thank God for the five very fruitful years spent there laboring for God."

Gestapo Attended All Services

"We experienced a new spirit of opposition in our work in Hamburg from the very day that Hitler came into power in 1933. At first, the Gestapo came in plain clothes, attending all services, never being less than two of them. Almost every week I was called to Gestapo office to answer questions about my sermons, and to answer trick questions about myself and my personal history, trying to make me contradict myself, so they could get something on me. They always wanted to know if I was born in Gavelin, Sweden, if I attended Upsala University and studied law, etc. When I told them they had all that information before, they became angry."

"The first clash with the Gestapo took place in August, 1933, just about half a year after Hitler came to power. This time, I was forbidden to speak and hold meetings, but not banished. We had a big work—over 2000 members — and many of our prominent members appealed directly to Hitler; others to Goering. A week later, we were given permission to carry on our work. I never really learned if it were true, but reports were that Goering was responsible for the permission being granted. The alleged basis of the action being that his first wife, then living, was a Swedish woman; born in the same city that I was, and that I being a Swedish evangelist, "big Hermann" wanted to show a friendly act to Sweden.

"When the second clash with the Gestapo occurred, I came to the hall where we held our services, and found two Gestapo agents on guard, and a notice on the door saying it was closed. When I asked for the reason, they told me I would learn in court. In court, the Nazi judge told me that I had healed sick people without being a licensed doctor, or chiropractor. 'Surely you don't deny that,'' angrily demanded the Nazi official. 'Yes, I do deny it. I have never healed any one, and never claimed to. I pray for the sick according to the Bible instructions and the Lord Jesus heals them.' Mr. Forsgren stated he was ordered to pay a fine of 100 marks, or spend one day in jail. He refused to pay the fine, offered to go to jail, but they did not put him in. A little while later, on Hitler's birthday, an edict was issued, pardoning all who had been sentenced for offences up to five months' imprisonment. "Thus I was pardoned on that charge.

Illustrating the nature of Nazi treachery and deceit, Mr. Forsgren said that the day before he was arrested the last time and banished, he talked to a member of the Gestapo whom he knew very well. When Mr. Forsgren asked about his position with the Gestapo this agent stated that everything was perfectly satisfactory at the headquarters, all the officials said he (Forsgren) was a wonderful man, etc. The very next morning three Gestapo men called on me. At once I could tell that the end had come. Looking out the window, I saw the police car. A rough Gestapo agent entered my room and started to go through my personal papers. He told me to "shut up." I asked him what this meant. Again, more fiercely, he shouted "shut up." I said "I am a Swedish citizen and not a German; you cannot do this with me. The Gestapo agent shouted back, You can thank God you are not a German, or you would soon find out what would happen to you.' I answered, 'Yes, I surely do thank God that I am not a German. That made him exceedingly angry."

Graphically, the speaker told of the subsequent fast moving events of that day. "They took all my bills and left me with a few coins." All his papers were sent to the Gestapo chief in Hamburg. They came back marked "This man is a public enemy No. 1 and must leave the country immediately under police escort." As I said at the Rotary Club on Monday, I consider it an honour to be called Hitler's enemy No. 1. My last revival meeting in Germany was held in prison when I had the privilege of telling the story of Jesus to four real criminals, three being hardened criminals of advanced years and one a boy of 20 years.

In reply to the Swedish government's protest, the German government said: "He belonged to a sect that prayed for the sick and that was against the law of the Third Reich." But in the big German newspapers, such as the Hamburg Fremblatt there were big stories saying that under the cover of religion, I was carrying on Communistic activity against the Reich and robbing the poor people of the hard-earned marks and that the Gestapo had saved German people from my influence. My church was closed down and the members forbidden to gather in greater numbers than five persons at one time, on pain of the concentration camp. Some went.

During the musical preliminaries Mr. Forsgren sang one of his own compositions entitled "I Long for Home." He dedicated it to Pastor Kulbeck, saying "It is particularly appropriate since Pastor Kulbeck is of Norwegian descent and therefore I will also sing one verse in the Norwegian tongue." Thanking Pastor Forsgren, Pastor Kulbeck remarked that the hymn touched him very deeply because the song was composed in Tronhjem, Norway, which is the vicinity his mother's people came from. Then Tronhjem means literally "Tron's home," Tron being a goldly king of about the 12th century and the theme of the hymn is longing for heaven, the Christian's home.

Some Aspects of Canada's War Time Bacon Production

In an address to the Regional meeting of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists held recently at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, P. E. Light, Recording Secretary of the Bacon Board, gave an outline of Canada's successful efforts in supplying huge quantities of bacon products to Great Britain. In the first agreement with the British Ministry of Food (1939-40) the minimum quantity of bacon, hams and other cuts stipulated was for 291,000,000 lb. Not only did Canada supply this with unfailing regularity but sent 40,000,000 lb. in excess, making a total of 331,000,000 lb. for the year ended October 31, 1940, and undertook by a second agreement with the British Ministry, to furnish 425,600,000 lb. of bacon and hams by October 31, 1941.

Now the British Ministry has asked Canada to speed up the delivery so as to fill the contract, if possible, by September 15, or six weeks ahead of the full period. Consequently, in order to cope with this request, Canadians have in turn been asked to eat less pork of all kinds, including bacon and hams, for three months, so as to enable the Board to have sufficient supplies to meet the British requirements.

Mere figures do not give any inkling of the problems and perplexities inherent in such a vast undertaking, but several facts stand out. The control of the Canadian bacon trade through an official board marks a new departure in Empire bacon relations. For many years the export policy of Canada has been aimed at establishing Canadian products in large volume and uniform quality to the British market, as well as to reduce price fluctuations to a minimum. In a short space of time the Board has been able to reach most of these objectives on behalf of the bacon industry, and the control exercised has placed Canada years ahead in reaching the ultimate aims.

Regularity of supply has been achieved; specific volumes have been contracted for and successful measures have been taken to fulfil those contracts; a high degree of standardization of processing practice has been reached; a closer price relation between hog prices and bacon values has been secured and a level in the line of market prices never before experienced has been maintained. In short there has been developed in war time an expert technique which perhaps with some minor adjustments should be equally effective and desirable in times of normal export trade and competition. If the essentials of Canada's present export sales policy should not be retained when peace comes it is fair to state that Canada would be taking a long step backward instead of forward.

Colorful Rotary Karnival Attracts Fun-Loving Crowd At Auspicious Opening

Victoria Park Scene of Summer Gayety, Fun and Amusement as Karnival Gets Under Way

CLEAN ENTERTAINMENT

One of the largest opening night crowds to attend similar functions here in a decade, placed its stamp of approval on the Belleville Rotary Club's Grand Karnival, when it made its debut in Victoria Park last night. The Karnival will continue tonight, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Thousands of people wended their way through the brilliantly lighted area that housed the many entertaining attractions. A typical July night, with cooling breezes tempering the aftermath of the day's heat, created a perfect atmospheric setting and added much to the general enjoyment.

The Queen City Shows, which form the major part of the Karnival, lived up to its reputation of being one of the cleanest, most entertaining amusement aggregations of its kind to visit the city.

At an early hour the crowd, drawn by the brilliancy, music and cleverly arranged setting of the various attractions thronged the area of the Park, where the shows are located. From that time until nearly midnight they lingered, irrefutable evidence that the Karnival had "clicked."

A Distinct Credit

The various attractions themselves are a distinct credit to their owners and to the committee of the Rotary Club in choosing them for the occasion. There is nothing in the entire set-up that smacks of anything suggestive. There are no tented shows with mystery attractions. Everything is plainly visible, and the public can see what it is getting.

Together with its general appeal, the Karnival has special attractions for the children. There are plenty of rides with the miniature automobiles that can be driven by the youngsters themselves on an oval track, proving one of especial lure. There is of course the ubiquitous merry-go-round, which like circuses, will never lose its attraction for both young and old. One is equipped with the well-known horses, while another boasts automobiles.

Brilliantly lighted aerial rides add to the general fun, and many oldsters were seen enjoying these attractions as well as their children. One of the features of the Karnival is the handsome prizes being given away at the various concessions. Bingo, as usual, proved a mecca for those who like this popular game and the lucky ones were rewarded with prizes, the value of which was enhanced by their beauty.

Can Knock Hitler

One can "knock the block" off Hitler and Mussolini with baseballs, and if those two worthies were peppered literally as much as they were through the medium of this game last night, their existence on this mortal coil would be brief. Large wheels, scintillating with brilliant colored lights attracted numbers of people. There is a "Hoop the prize" game; pitch-penny; you can have your age guessed within two years (if you are not proud) and the manly strength of flaming youth can be tested with the familiar sledge hammer.

In short there are a hundred and one attractions for young and old with the whole sparkling with an atmosphere of summer gaiety. Refreshment and soft drink booths did a land office business.

The Rotarians themselves joined in the general entertainment picture and manned several booths. Three youthful "Rotary Anns" look after a refreshment booths.

Handsome Cash Prize

Another attraction that drew the interest of the crowd is the dollar-covered dolly, "Rotary Ann" which will be drawn for on Wednesday night. The doll is located in a tent on the grounds, where tickets are being sold. "Ann" is literally covered with one-dollar bills, and the fortunate winner will not only win a beautiful doll, but a handsome cash prize as well.

The Karnival affords ideal entertainment for the warm summer nights. The location is but a stone's throw from the downtown business section, and within easy distance of the main parts of the city. Rotary Club officials expressed themselves toda yas being entirely satisfied with the attendance at opening night, believing it to be an augury for the success of the Karnival as a whole. All proceeds will go to the club's Crippled Children Fund.

QUIZ PROGRAMME

A thoughtful Canadian officer ponders a poser being put to him during a recruiting visit to Prescott, Ontario. To prove that the new Canadian Active Army has many things to interest and attract young men who are of a mechanical turn of mind, an army convoy is now touring Eastern Canada. The unit contains a mobile workshop. It is attracting much attention and is winning many recruits.

MAY SERVE U.S.

Mrs. Herbert Roth, director and treasurer of the Women Fliers of America, Inc., who has been requested to make a survey of the organization membership to determine what part of it would be willing to serve as pilots or co-pilots to aid the plane ferrying command of the U.S. air corps. Duties of the ladybirds, if called, would be to fly new planes from factories to army air bases and flying fields.

Sweet Cherries Offered First Time on Market

Fresh eggs were slightly firmer on the Belleville market this morning with Grade "A" large selling at 30c per dozen, the highest price reached this summer. Other grades sold at prices ranging from 25c to 28c per dozen. Capons sold at prices approximating 27c per pound with four pound birds going for $1. More mature fowl held at the usual 25c per pound with broilers ranging from 75c per pair up to $1.25. Fresh butter also held steady, selling at two pounds for 75c.

Sweet cherries made their initial appearance on the fruit market, selling at 20c per berry box or at prices ranging from $1 to $1.25 per six-quart basket. Other cherries, such as Montmorency and Early Richmond sold at 15c per berry box or at 75c per six-quart basket. What was claimed by vendors to be the last of the strawberries sold at 20c and 25c per box, while raspberries and huckleberries rose sharply in price from what was asked for initial offerings earlier in the week. Raspberries sold at 35c per box with huckleberries selling at 30c per quart, although one vendor sold out at 25c per quart.

Blackcaps Offered

Blackcaps, quite small in size owing to the dry weather, sold at 25c per box, while gooseberries were 50c per six quart basket or 10c per quart. Red currants sold at 15c or at two boxes for 25c with billberries going at 10c per box.

Fresh home grown tomatoes of the hothouse variety were offered at 30c per pound, peas were 35c per quart and string beans 10c per box. Cauliflower ranged from 5c each up to 20c with bunched vegetables going for the usual 5c per bunch. Cucumbers were 10c each as were lettuce heads, with cabbage selling at 5c and 10c. Spanish onions were quite scarce, vendors asking 10c per berry box with prices expected to double before the season is over. New potatoes were quite plentiful and sold at 70c per peck or 15c per berry box.

Whitefish and lake trout were offered in limited quantities, the former variety selling at 20c per pound and lake trout at 25c, or pieces at 30c per pound.

There was a fair offering of young pigs displayed by vendors along the arena side of the market, prices ranging from $4.50 up, according to age.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police radio again proved its effectiveness in the administration of law enforcement in Belleville late Friday night when an alleged hit-and-run driver was apprehended a few moments after an accident was reported.

Sergeant Arthur Booth received information there had been a motor crash at the intersection of Church and Dundas Streets. The message was relayed to the police cruiser over radio station C.J.R., Belleville police and picked up by P. C. Evans while on patrol. The officer hastened to the scene where Lawrence Cook, 23 St. Paul Street, informed the officer an east bound motor car had collided with his car and the driver had failed to stop. Constable Evans continued easterly and at the city limits apprehended Samuel J. Storey, who was taken to the police station and questioned. Charges are pending in the matter, police added today.

George Secker, 98A Cannifton Road, complained to police that a motorist's automobile had sideswiped his car on Front St. early last evening and drove hastily away. Mr. Secker obtained the licence plate number of the alleged hit-and-run vehicle and the matter is being further investigated.

Traffic Officer Doug Ellis impounded a 1936 model Dodge coupe bearing Ontario licence number 6-X-701 after the vehicle had been observed parked on Coleman St. for the past three days. The side of the vehicle was damaged, leaving the officer to suspect the vehicle might have been stolen, damaged and abandoned.

CANADIANS FOUND SOVIET OFFICERS LIKEABLE HUMANS

Officer Who Fought With Republican Army in Spain Gives Impressions of Russian Fighting Men

Written for The Canadian Press

By E. CECIL-SMITH

What kind of men make up the Red Army? What are their arms like? How about their strategy and tactics? Everything about it seems pure speculation these days.

From close association with a number of Russian officers during two years' front line service in the Spanish War, I gained a number of first-hand impressions which might give some hint of what to expect from our new allies.

The Red Army men in Spain were in three categories. Senior officers attached to divisional, army corps and army staffs as advisers or experts in various arms; captains and subalterns in the brigades; and instructors in the officer and non-commissioned officer training centres as well as artillery, tank, small arms and other schools. There were certain air force instructors, and possibly naval men as well, but we did not meet these.

To an infantryman in the line all staff officers are beings who move on a different plane. But as a company commander, and more so when commanding a battalion, I attended many conferences at division and corps headquarters where actual and imaginery problems were discussed and had the opportunity to listen to quite a number of these experts, whose theories were always original and interesting, though sometimes I could not entirely agree with them.

These advisers almost always spoke only in Russian, with a competent interpreter, so that they could express their ideas more clearly, though more than once I have heard them correct the interpreter when he gave a mistaken translation. Thus I never got to know any of these in a personal manner, but I did learn from them how the Red Army mind is trained to handle problems which arise.

Instructors on Contract

It was the men in the brigades that we really got to know best. These men were generally attached to one or another battalion headquarters to act as instructors under the command of the commanding officer. They were on three and six month contracts and worked especially with the machine gunners, trench mortar crews, anti-tank platoons, snipers and so forth.

Under the difficult conditions of Spanish service these Red Army men stood up very well and never ducked any job which you might give them. Under fire I never saw a single one play the coward, while most of them struck me as being extremely brave men, though not so foolhardy as some of our Canadian officers were inclined to be. Perhaps that was because they were not actually leading small commands into the assault.

They knew their weapons intimately and were invariably excellent shots with both rifle and machine gun. They would have had little difficulty in making the regimental team in a British or Canadian unit. We learned plenty from them, and I believe that they learned as much as they could from us, for almost all the weapons of modern war got their real tryout in Spain.

Take Steve for example. He used to prowl around the lines day and night helping the boys with emergency repairs which had to be made under fire. He always carried a black loose-leaf notebook, which he filled with sketches and notations. Nearly every night he would drag it out and talk about what he had seen.

"Why have you got Number Five machine gun on the north side of hill 685?" he might ask.

This called for a reference to a large scale map and the latest reports from the machine gun company and the infantry company in that sector. You would have to show Steve the field of fire from this gun, how it crossed that of other guns from your own and neighboring units, and its tasks both in defence and attack.

He would listen carefully, making notes. Perhaps he would be convinced and put his book away with a nod. Or he might say:

"But the sergeant didn't know all that." Or: "Wouldn't it be better to move it 20 metres further up the hill?"

Then nothing would satisfy him but that you, he a[illegible]chine gun commander [illegible] look over his propose[illegible] Sometimes he was [illegible]metimes wrong. In eithe[illegible] he kept on his toes continually and kept you on yours.

Intelligent Officers

If they were any criterion of Red Army officers, and I believe they were, then the younger officers in the Russian army are an intelligent, disciplined, brave and likeable lot of men. If they can handle their own troops as well as those they instructed in Spain, they will give a good account of themselves against the Hitler invasion.

A few of them went by the book in all they did. Their final answer to a problem they could not grasp or a proposal they could not quite understand would be to refer to the manual. But these people exist in every army unfortunately. Most of them, on the other hand, showed remarkable initiative and originality.

All these young officers spoke either English or Spanish, sometimes both, so there were no language barriers. When you share the same dugout with a man for several months it is not long before you begin borrowing each other's equipment and dividing up parcels which come from home.

I would say definitely that they all seemed to be an excellent type of soldier and officer, not to mention gentleman. When you got to calling them by their first names you soon found that they had their own peculiarities, like everyone else.

There was Nicolai, who always managed to be spick, span and shaved under every circumstance. He was a stickler for what he called "culture." This extended to every department of life. It meant being neat and tidy, polishing your shoes even in the front line. It meant reading a paper or two every day under fire, so that you knew just how Joe Louis won his latest fight, and how the present five-year plan was progressing. It meant doing setting up exercises out in the snow at 20 below.

Most peculiar of all it meant lugging a bedstead three miles from a ruined village because it was not "cultural" to sleep on straw. The fact that the bed had neither springs nor mattress did not detract from its dignity in the dugout.

There was Steve, whom we all thought to be a bit of a puritan until one day he caught me stealing the shoe laces from his dress boots. Then he swore so beautifully in English, Spanish, Greek and Russian that we all listened in awe and admiration. But I kept the shoe laces, for after all a battalion commander is a battalion commander, while an extra pair of boots is a luxury.

Maxim always had a boil on the back of his neck, and his throat was swathed in bandages which stuck up above the collar of his expensive fur-lined jacket. His friends back home must have thought Spain was a hungry land, for they sent him every few weeks a great hamper full of cookies, cakes, vodka, caviar and those strange Russian cigarets, consisting mostly of cardboard tubes. Paperusas, I believe they are called. Anyhow it was a good idea—caviar and vodka in the front line!

One man insisted on being called Ramon, since he was in Spain. Each pay day Ramon used to celebrate, and when feeling gay went to the local tailor and insisted on being measured for a suit. On Nov. 7, anniversary of the Russian revolution, the trade unions of a nearby village arranged a celebration at which Ramon, who had been celebrating on his own, made no less than three long speeches in Russian, which first had to be translated into English by a young Doukhobor lad from western Canada and then into Spanish by a Cuban.

There were perhaps a dozen of these men whom I got to know quite well and another dozen or so of the higher, and apparently more dignified, officers with whom I sat in conference on a good many occasions. Some of these meetings were merely to receive orders, but many of them were held to hear what ideas would be produced by the battalion commanders themselves. In either case the Russian experts would enter into the discussion.

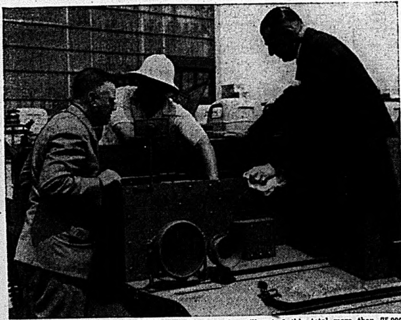
New Zealanders Seek War Supplies



IN Canada to obtain war supplies for the New Zealand forces, the Right Honorable R. G. Coates, member of New Zealand's war cabinet (right) inspects a Universal Carrier at the Canadian Ford plant with Col. A. B. Williams, director of artillery with New Zealand staff headquarters. A Ford test driver explains the operating mechanism of the armored fighting machine. More than 120,000 military vehicles have been supplied to Empire forces from Canada and of this total more than 75,000 have been produced in the Ford plant at Windsor. Many of these units are being used by New Zealand's army. "You are getting right down to it," said Mr. Coates after viewing the busy Ford production lines.

Deseronto

Deseronto — The many friends of Miss Jean Hutchison were sorry to learn that she has resigned her position on the teaching staff of Deseronto High School. During the years in which she has been engaged as teacher, she has made many friends and will be missed by her friends and pupils alike. Everyone wishes her every success in the future.

The members of the United Church choir held a picnic at Thomas' camp in honor of Miss Jean Hutchison, who is leaving the town. She was presented with a purse and umbrella by Miss J. Dryden on behalf of the members. Miss H. Burley read the address.

Britain Needs More Top Quality Bacon

More bacon of top quality is needed for Britain, states the Agricultural Supplies Board and adds that Wiltshire sides of desired quality can be made only from hogs of suitable breeding.

During the first five months of this year 600,000 more hogs were marketed than during the corresponding period of 1940, an increase of 30 per cent. Grading figures for the period show production of 30.7 per cent Grade A carcasses compared with 28.5 per cent in the similar five months of 1940.

Increases in hog production should all be of the best quality if the standard of export is to be maintained, states the Board. Quality in bacon depends largely upon the kind of breeding stock used in producing market hogs.

Hog producers are advised that the right kind of breeding stock is available and to use only the best. The Dominion Experimental Farms, the Provincial Departments of Agriculture, and the Agricultural Colleges are ready to give any information to hog producers that will be of assistance in getting more top quality bacon for Great Britain now so urgently needed.

HI-Y YOUTHS MEET AT ONTARIO LAKE

Young Organization Holds First Canadian Conference this Week

Orillia, Ont., July 5 (CP)—Delegates from Hi-Y clubs in all parts of the Dominion are scheduled to gather at nearby Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching July 2-7 at the first conference of Canadian Hi-Y clubs.

The clubs, made up of high school boys and under the sponsorship of the Young Men's Christian Association, number nearly 100 in Canada. They are part of an international organization of youth embracing more than 7,000 clubs and 200,000 members.

The organizations have grown up in Canada in the past two years.

Theme of the Couchiching conference, as outlined by those in charge, will be "Hi-Y on the March" and the basic idea will be a demonstration of Canadian unity.

The opening address will be given by R. S. Hoskins, general secretary of the national council of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada.

Among the visitors expected at sessions are W. M. Robinson, former boy's work secretary of the world alliance of the Y.M.C.A. in Geneva, Switzerland; George B. Corwin, national Hi-Y secretary of the United States, and John Young, boy's work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Hawaii.

The conference is a project of the National Boy's Work Committee of the Y.M.C.A. of Canada of which Dr. Sidney E. Smith of Winnipeg is president and J. Hiles Templin is chairman of the boy's committee.

Actual conduct of the conference is undertaken by the National Hi-Y committee of which Douglas C. Henderson is chairman, and Jack Sunly, Gordon Blackford and Victor Coxworth are members.

CANADIAN PLOWS IN USE OVERSEAS

Farm Equipment From Dominion Reclaims 3,500 British Acres

Ottawa (CP)—Canadian manufactured agricultural equipment is aiding the British government's program of reclaiming grass land for cultivation during wartime.

Tractor plow equipment from Canada has been responsible for bringing back into cultivation—after a lapse of centuries—3,500 acres of the Sussex downs, according to the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce.

Parts of the 3,500 acres reclaimed were covered with brambles, thorns and thick gorse, sometimes up to five feet in height. Plowing the heavy clay and chalky soil was not made any easier by numerous valleys and steep inclines.

The east Sussex war agricultural committee which undertook reclamation of the land late in 1939 used the Canadian type plows in the face of sharp criticism. A firm of steam-tackle experts, when first consulted about the project, said the cost of breaking the land would be prohibitive.

At first 10 plows were used but by the summer of 1940 the number was increased to 70.

The plows, of a standard type common in Canada, were set to turn an 11-inch furrow with an average depth of five inches. With the skim coulters removed and the disc coulters tilted several notches to the land the tractor operators found better results were obtained in burying the herbage.

KINSHIP ACROSS THE BORDER

This year of 1941 has been a momentous year in the relations between the British Empire and the United States. Events have taken place which thrill the heart because of the showing that the heart of the United States people is with Britain in her struggle to maintain institutions which owe so much to the Old Country. The United States can trace its spiritual and moral ancestry as well as racial stock in a large measure to the British Isles. The United States has a neighbor speaking the same tongue and inspired by democratic ideals, Canada, a nation of the British Commonwealth. The kinship of these peoples has been felt more deeply this year than ever.

This is as it is in families. The kinship of difficulty and experience and suffering and the desire for security have tightened the bonds of the English-speaking peoples.

This has had a very heartening influence for the Britons who know that they are appreciated by the nation whose appreciation they value most highly because of likeness of ideals.

That this close friendship is something vital, like the family tie, is indicated in the very close relations between the people of the United States and Canada. It is true that the United States is and has been for generations looked on by Canadians as a nation with which this Dominio will never have difficulty. Today there is the most intense sympathy between these two countries which shows in the relations of not only the governments and peoples as a whole but also among individual citizens of the two nations.

At the present moment thousands upon thousands of American Legionnaires, veterans of the Great War, are in Toronto and many thousands more of other Americans are visiting Canada. It is a very apt choice of time that was made, the opening of the convention being on Independence Day, just three days after Canada had celebrated her national holiday.

Here is a grtat fellowship which counts in peace and which counts in war. Veterans of these two countries knew the like experiences and trials in the struggle of twenty-four years ago. As they were then, they are today only with their views ripened by greater years.

Defence Minister Ralston showed in his address to the Legionnaires this kinship as revealed in deeds when he pointed to the co-operation of the United States as he specified the 'Ogdensburg agreement, North American defence, the delivery of U.S. destroyers to Britain, the extension of the neutrality patrol and the production of supplies for Britain, as well as gifts to alleviate bomb victims in Britain.

These two nations at this time stand as a noble example to the world and with Britain and the rest of he Emtpire and the Allies are helping to maintain the light of liberty which assuredly will not go out.

R.A.F. ATTACKS ON GERMANY

The words of Prime Minister Churchill are recalled at this time when the Royal Air Force is incessantly pounding the western part of Germany and Nazi-held territory along the Channel coast. Some months ago he said that the time was coming when the Royal Air Force would rain bombs much more plentifully on Germany. Increasing production of planes and muitions have given Britain such power in the air that industrial Germany and the war machine of Hitler must have suffered greatly.

These raids on Germany are not random raids. No bombs are wasted. They are used on industrial and war targets, not on churches and other non-war property. They are founded on the best information and the results of early raids in which Germany was photographed from planes.

These raids are giving help to Russia in a very real way. They are making Eastern Germany uneasy and this will make the leaders of Germany anxious. There is a belief that Germany has reduced her strength in the west to try to crush Russia. The incessant pressure by the British air force at the same time as the Russian pressure against the Hun lines tends to create problems for Hitler, who has made two fronts, though it was his aim to avoid two fronts if possible.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

CHINA WEEK

Next week Canada will pay tribute to her gallant ally, China. Throughout the Dominion celebrations will be held to commemorate the brave little fighters of Chiang Kai Shek who, for the past four years, have held the yellow invader from Nippon in check. True, they have been forced from their coastal positions to strong entrenchments in the hinterland. But here they are harassing the enemy to such an extent that advances have been few and far between during the past twelve months.

China's stand has commanded the admiration of the civilized world. Poorly armed, with but a few war-planes, little equipment and practically no supplies, the brave Chinese, imbued with the gallant spirit of their indomitable leader, have hurled the Japanese back time after time.

China's army lies, and has lain for nearly two and one half years, on a tortured 2,000-mile chain of fronts from the Yellow River to the upper end of the Burma Road. There for 30 weary months has been fought positional warfare.

China Too Big

The reason why Japan has failed to advance, says Time, is because China is too big. No country in the world has such a manpower pool. China has some 300 divisions totalling over 3,000,000. The yellow invader has gone about as far as 800,000 men can, when they try to occupy 2,900,000 square miles. But China's armies have become expert despite an appalling lack of arms and ammunition. Her total copper output is now less than 3,000 tons a year. She puts out less than 100,000 tons of finished steel. In a single ten-day bombardment on the Passchaendale front, 88,000 tons of copper and steel were flung around.

Has Morale

But to make up for what it lacks, China's unknown army has numbers, and morale. Its spirit is unmatched in Chinese history. It has a bitter determination which no army of the 1941 war can exactly match. If and when someone delivers China the war goods, they are sure they will be able to finish the job.

Chinese Consul General Here

Belleville will be singularly honored on Monday, the opening day of China Week, with the presence of Mr. Chao Gar Lim, Chinese Consul General from Ottawa. Mr. Lim, who will be accompanied by distinguished countrymen, will address the Rotary Club here and will officiate at a flag-raising ceremony to be held in the Market Square at 3 p.m.. The red, white and blue of China's national flag will intermingle with the Union Jack atop the City Hall flagstaff. The mayor and city council have been invited to attend the simple ceremony and Mayor Thompson will exentd an official welcome to the distinguished Oriental. Belleville citizens should turn out in numbers to pay tribute to their gallant ally's representatives.

Credit to Community

Belleville's Chinese residents are a distinct credit to the city of their adoption. Hard-working, thrifty, their names never appear on relief rolls or police blotters. The Chinese have a peculiar way of dealing with lawbreakers of their own nationality when that rarity occurs.

His punishment consists of banishment from the city with instructions not to return. Only one case of this instance has occurred in Belleville, when an itinerant Chinese inadvertently took some money from a box. He was brought to task before his coutrymen and expelled from the city.

The Chinese are intensely British and loyal to the country of their adoption. They are generous with donations to humanitarian and patriotic causes. In the recent War Savings and Victory Loan Campaigns Chinese contributed in a large measure with their funds. They live their own lives and do not interfere with the affairs of the white man.

They are energetic, ambitious and never lazy. Seldom do you see a Chinese loafing on the streets. They take their exercise consistently and this consists mainly of long walks. But they are also intensely loyal to Ancien tChina. Weekly, monthly, annually, large contributions, unheralded ad unsug, leave the city for their war-ridden countrymen in far off China.

Germany's Air Strength Overtaxed

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 5—(AP)—As the titanic Nazi-Red conflict develops, it begins to be fairly clear that even Hitler himself can entertain little hope of a smashing victory over Great Britain this year.

The German effort in the East is on too vast a scale. And it has opened opportunities for Britain to strike back effectively to ensure prolongation of the war, even if Russia collapses soon.

Hitler's chance of the 1941 victory over Britain which he promised his people was already vanishing before he launched his army against Russia. It now seems clear that he foresaw the probability of a 1942 attack by Russia, coupled with possible United States entry into the struggle, and loosed his legions eastward to avert that danger.

In striking at Russia he was trying to do more than restock his Continental larder or tap Russian oil sources. In a diplomatic duel with Moscow he had been forced to abandon hope of a short war and to accept all the menace of long-war portents with the cards stacked against him — unless he could bring Russia to heel as he had already brought France, Scandinavia, the Low Countries and the Balkans. That was possible only by utter destruction of the Red armies.

Stubborn Resistance

Within less than two weeks it is quite obvious that the Russians are offering far more stubborn resistance than Berlin anticipated. And it is equally clear that in the west Hitler has sacrificed effective air defense of his "invasion coast" bases and of industrial areas in Germany itself. They now are under attack day after day and night after night by British bombers.

To what extent the British air offensive is crippling the Nazi sea campaign against Britain is beyond conjecture. This much must be true: With Nazi defensive air forces in the west thinned down to furnish the massive forces which Hitler needs in the east, the Royal Air Force should be able to blast hard at German submarine nests from Norway to Southern France, and at Nazi airdromes from which the aerial attack at sea originates.

There is every evidence they are doing it. While the Germans may have an aggregate air strength in the west still as great or greater than the offensive force Britain has available, it is widely dispersed. It has an enormous front to protect and the initiative is with Britain.

There is ample evidence that British air raiding on a sustained and increasing scale is achieving local air mastery by day as well as by night over the selected targets. By the time the Nazis can muster their scattered forces at any point, the raid is over and the damage done.

Italy Bears Brunt in South

The proof of that may come when British tonnage losses in the Atlantic for June are reported. They should fall well below May figures if the British air attack is anywhere as effective as London says. Nor can it be disregarded that the war with Russia has forced diversion of some Nazi submarines from the Atlantic to the Baltic, where the all-important German sea route for Swedish ore imports is jeopardized.

Eastward, it is now clear the Germans recalled all but a small part of their air forces from the Mediterranean-North African theatre for the Russian adventure. Italy is bearing the brunt of the Axis air effort there. It is Italian planes and Vichy French craft in Syria—that the British authorities report downed now in that sector. They rarely mention Nazi ships sighted.

Clearly even Germany's boasted air strength is being taxed to the utmost for the offensive against the Russians. And there are at least hints that Britain is not only taking full advantage of the situation to pound Nazi sea-air attack bases in the west; but possibly planning major offensive operations in the east to supplement the Syrian campaign. There is a prime opportunity for a powerful British attack on Axis forces in Libya while Germany is fully engaged with Russia on a 2,000-mile front.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Healing of a Peptic Ulcer Needs Rest

Some years ago I spoke of a method used in the treatment of stomach ulcer at Toronto General Hospital, in which a duodenal tube was inserted through the patient's nose and pushed downward into stomach and then into first part of small intestine adjoining the stomach. Through the tube the patient was fed liquids which went directly down into the small intestine. This food gave the body the necessary nourishment without any help from the stomach. The stomach thus got complete rest for the three weeks that tube was left in. This complete rest enabled the ulcer to heal. A metal tip on the end of the tube enabled the physician to follow the course of the tube and make sure that the end of the tube passed into the small intestine before liquid food was poured down.

It is the weight or just the presence of food (or other substance) in the stomach that causes the muscular walls of the stomach to try to "squeeze" out any substance and at the same time pour digestive juices on it. It is this "action" on the part of the stomach and the presence of hydrochloric acid in the digestive juice that causes the ulcer and keeps it from healing. The fact that the ulcer type of individual is nervous or "high strung" causes "spasms" at the opening between stomach and intestine. It is at either side of this opening that most cases of ulcer occur because the spasm causes irritation.

A few months ago Drs. Max Einhorn, I. W. Held, and H. W. Soper in Review of Gastroenterology (stomach and intestine) stated that in this treatment of ulcer, as the patient gets very thirsty, he is allowed to drink gelatine water and cool solution of the white of egg to relieve this thirst. These physicians outline the list of foods put down the tube—warm milk, one tablespoon of glucose every 2 hours, egg yolks, whole eggs (later), sweet cream, and orange juice (later).

"Moving pictures taken through a fluoroscope (Xrays) show that the stomach is perfectly at rest while the tube is in place".

The first great step toward the "cure" of tuberculosis was when the affected lung was given rest. Formerly this meant rest in bed for months or even years. Today many cases have air inserted against the lung so that lung cannot move (breathe) and others have lung put at complete rest by removing ribs or injecting the nerves. The treatment for a broken vessel in brain or in the heart is likewise rest, which enables the vessel to heal.

Rest of a tired, overused, or damaged organ is logical.

Medicine in the News

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M.D.

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Physicians at their annual session in Cleveland heard the confident prediction that the annual deaths from pneumonia, now numbering 110,000, would probably drop to 35,000 or 40,000, following the general adaptation of newer methods of treatment to general practice. The lowest death rates in a large series of cases were those in the groups treated with sulfapyridine and with sulphathiazole.

For the tired business man the modern physician has expanded the old proverb of "moderation in all things." Dr. E. V. Allen condemned especially the habits of overeating, oversmoking, excessive drinking and too much ambition, leading to overwork and overworry. As a help, Dr. Allen urged the use of hobbies, spiritual thinking, an eight-hour day and a five-day week for executives.

For painful joints, and particularly for pain on motion, Dr. Hans Kraus of New York has recently recommended the spraying of ethly chloride on the skin to produce the effect of freezing associated with local anesthesia. The treatment does not work when fractures or tears of the tissues are present but is recommended primarily for sprains.

Four hundred and fifteen of the 826 employees of the hospital in Valhalla, N. Y., were vaccinated against influenza with antivirus vaccine developed by Drs. Horsfall and Lennette of the Rockefeller Institute. They found the vaccine not especially valuable as a preventive but they believed it shortened the duration of the disease and the severity of the symptoms. This vaccine is still in an early experimental stage and is not yet established as practical for routine use.

The Germans are urging the use of whole grain bread to avoid the vitamin and mineral deficiencies. W. Heupke in an article published in Medizinische Welt of Berlin calls it the bread of the future. He says it has been proved that whole grain breads are valuable for the development and preservation of teeth and in the prevention of chronic constipation.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFF

U. S. Senators are virtually equal in all privileges, but each Senator from states with a population of three million or more inhabitants is entitled to an additional clerk at a salary of $1,500 a year.

We often hear people refer to their "heart of hearts." The correct phrase is "heart of heart." It means the farthest, innermost, most secure recesses of one's heart. Shakespeare has Hamlet say to his friend Horatio:

"Give me that man that is not passion's slave, and I will wear him in my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, as I do thee."

Sometimes it is said of something that it cheers, delights or warms "the cockles of one's heart," referring to the depths of the heart. Nobody seems to know the origin of "cockles" in this phrase.

Stories from Britain about the strange flight of Rudolf Hess said that the Number 3 Nazi leader had "dabbled in geopolitics."

"Geopolitik" is a German word applied to the science concerned with the dependence of the domestic and foreign politics of a people upon their physical environment.

The original German school of geo-politicians held that the political tendencies and developments of a nation can be explained by the laws of geography. This doctrine teaches that the policies of every people are invariably determined by their geographical position and that the necessities dictated by "living space" are more effective in the long run than ethnical or ideological factors.

It is surprising how many Non-Catholics do not know the meaning of "The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary," which is commemorated by a special feast August 15.

The word "assumption" is derived from Latin "ad," to and "sumere," take.

The Assumption of the Virgin Mary refers to the assumption of her body into heaven upon her death.

Both the Catholic Church and the Eastern Orthodox Church teach that the Virgin Mary was received directly into heaven.

The President of the United States has nothing to say about the amount of funds that Congress appropriates for its own expenses.

Under the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, the estimates of appropriations of the legislative branch are required to be included in the federal budget without revision by the executive.

GARDEN EXCUSES

Whose garden always does the best?
The one that gets devoted care.
Where love and thought are manifest
All things take on a happier air.
"Would I could have such blooms!" I cried,
"As fill my neighbor's space of yard!"
And thought a near by plant replied:
"You could if you would work as hard."

"Somehow I wish delphinium
Would grow as tall and straight for me,
That peonies to bloom would come
And be as beautiful to see
As those my neighbors yearly raise."
And always something seems to say,
"Your garden would be one to praise
Did you watch over it, as they."

At times excuses shrewd I seek.
I lack the time to rake and hoe;
I'm sure the soil I have is weak;
Too weak such perfect blooms to grow,
But every plant and bush and vine
Which in my neighbor's yard I see,
Proclaim the weaknesses are mine
And all the fault belongs to mine.

RUSSIAN UNITS NOTABLY HEAVY IN FIRE POWER

Soviet Battalions Strongly Armed With Modern Machine Guns, Automatic Rifles and Rifle Grenade Throwers

This is one of a Canadian Press series on Soviet Army strategy and tactics by a Canadian who commanded the Mackenzie-Papineau battalion of Canadian volunteers in the Spanish Republican army.
Written for The Canadian Press

By E. CECIL-SMITH

Armament and fire power of a Russian infantry battalion is enough to astound anyone whose ideas of infantry units are still based on 1914-18 models. Even the 1941 Canadian army does not begin to come up to it.

My ideas in this respect are based on two things. Personal knowledge of many of the actual infantry weapons in use in Russia, and a great mass of information which I was able to pry loose from various Red Army officers over a two-year period.

Not all of these men would answer a direct question involving too many details, but when you are curious, have plenty of time, and a common ground of actual battle on which to meet for discussion, a great deal of information can be gained.

Often I used to sit around in the evening, smoking and yarning with Russian instructors who were sent to Spain to teach the Republican soldiers how to use the weapons sold to their government by the Soviet Union. Or in the quiet of the afternoon we would lie on the reverse slope of some hill and discuss recent actions.

How would such a town have been attacked by the Red Army? Or, what were the different functions of the light and heavy mortar in Russia? How many light machine guns were there to a Red Army company? Many such questions could be raised quite naturally by a group of officers anxious to learn their trade, and readily answered by an instructor who knew his stuff.

Russian Equipment

We often used to compare the fire power of our battalion in Spain to the 1914-18 Canadian unit, patting ourselves on the back that we could deliver as heavy a blast as a First Great War brigade, but when we heard of the normal equipment of the Red Army in 1937-39 we were astounded. Today it may be even higher in some instances.

Take the lowest fire unit, comparable to a Canadian infantry section, or a squad as it would be called in most other armies. This has the fire power of one of our platoons, and is commanded by a sergeant with a corporal as second in command, competent to take over the squad.

Its main fire power lies in various automatic weapons, of course. First among these is the light machine gun called a Diktorovna. We used both this gun and the Bren in Spain and can therefore make a comparison.

The two guns are about on a par. True, the Bren gun barrel can be changed more rapidly, but this we found to be a delusion, for in quick-moving action, when the gun may only be fired a few bursts from any one position, the man with the spare barrel is never there when most needed. He is either dead, wounded, or so far to one side that the barrel has cooled off by the time he arrives anyway.

Of the breech blocks the Diktorovna has the simpler one. It also has a magazine holding 47 rounds (50 at a pinch) compared with 30 on the Bren. The Russian magazine is disc-shaped, thin like a phonograph record, not heavy and clumsy like the Lewis gun drum. It can be loaded direct from chargers and requires no loading too, though we found a three-inch length of string helped protect your finger.

In weight, size and fire power the two are about the same. Perhaps the Russian gun has a more comfortable stock and grip, but that is a matter of opinion.

In the heat of action two discs can be fired a minute, though this rate of fire cannot be maintained for long as the weapon will heat up. There are absolutely no stoppages except from defective ammunition. A gunner who looks after his weapon and replaces worn striker pins has no problem.

Automatic Rifle

The Red Army squad also has an automatic rifle, which we did not see in Spain. We did have the Skeda automatic and, from discussions with Russian officers, I gathered the Soviet automatic rifle was somewhat similar. With this weapon a rifleman can fire with ease up to 40 aimed shots in a minute. It is loaded, I believe, from below like an automatic pistol, with a clip of 20 rounds.

Either the two-inch mortar or a rifle grenade thrower is included with each squad. The latter is older equipment and gradually being replaced, I gathered. The Russian rifle grenade thrower is streamlined and has a range of nearly 1,000 yards.

The sergeant, the corporal who acts as observer, and numbers one and two on each of the fire weapons, carry automatic pistols or revolvers. These automatic pistols hold from 20 to 36 rounds according to the type of magazine. I have shot with them and found them to equal if not surpass German Lugars or the beautiful Spanish Parabellum artillery pistol. The holster fits as a rifle stock and when fired from the shoulder these pistols are remarkably accurate up to nearly 200 yards, as they have a nine-inch barrel. For close work they are deadly, spraying a goodly number of nine-mm. slugs around in a hurry.

Only two men in the squad are armed primarily with rifles. Both of these have telescopic sights and their users are trained as snipers. Their job is to pick off opposing officers and key men.

The modern Russian rifle is very light, weighing no more than seven pounds, compared with about nine pounds for the Lee-Enfield. This has been achieved by constructing the stock of very light tough wood, and because of the extra length of barrel and use of a slower burning powder the metal at the chamber is not nearly so thick. The rear sight is placed far back, giving about six inches extra distance between sights, making for greater accuracy of aiming.

Of course, the lighter rifle heats up quickly, and is hardly suited to long periods of rapid fire. A few rounds, however, can be fired very rapidly, as the bolt can be worked back and forth with two fingers without lowering the butt from the shoulders or taking the sights off the target. It is ideally suited for sharpshooting, and that is what it is used for.

Use of Bayonet

Bayonet fighting is still included in the Russian manual, but I only heard of one Russian instructor in Spain wasting the time of his men by teaching it. There might be some psychological reason for teaching a soldier the use of cold steel, but in two years in Spain I never saw a bayonet used in the front line, except for opening bully beef or sardine cans, or for shoving into the side of a dugout as a candle stick. For digging yourself in without a spade, a tin hat or trench knife is superior to the bayonet.

Hand grenades of various types are in use by the Russians. Some are merely detonating and stunning, while others, like the Mills bomb, explode into various little fragments. Stick grenades are also in use.

Small arms ammunition is of 7.-35 mm., almost exactly similar in size and shape to British ammunition. In Spain more than one machine gun was jammed because, in the hurry of loading the belt, a round of wrong ammunition was included.

Each Russian infantry company, I was told, has a platoon of machine guns. The Russian Maxim is similar to the Vickers, but the lock is ever so much simpler. Most of these weapons, instead of being mounted on a tripod, are on a low-wheeled carriage, with a fairly long tubular trail, which includes a seat for the gunner.

In emergencies each gun can be turned into an anti-aircraft weapon by folding the trail under the wheels, which elevates the barrel at nearly 60 degrees. The guns are fitted with armor-plate shields and break down into three loads, the tool and spare part kit being carried by the same man as the shield. For short distances the gun can be picked up as is, or trundled along on its wheels.

The infantry battalion also includes a support company armed with heavy .50 calibre machine guns for use against tanks, and with large three-inch mortars, something like the Stokes. These heavier guns are on pneumatic wheels. Special platoons also operate anti-tank rifles and anti-aircraft machine guns.

Section of Tanks

But that is not all. I was assured by several Red Army officers that attached to each Red Army battalion in action is a section of tanks, each armed with a 45-mm. cannon and a machine gun. One of these vehicles is used as a movable command post by the battalion commanding officer, who is thus in constant radio communication with his superiors.

In Spain we had a battery of 45-mm. anti-tank guns in the brigade. This was obviously insufficient and the Soviet officers agreed with us in this, stating that the Red Army had such a battery attached to each front line battalion.

Seventy-five mm. cannon are also considered infantry weapons, a four-gun battery being assigned among the special arms of the brigade.

It is clear that a battalion of such fire power must be almost the equivalent of a brigade in many other armies. Discussion of the artillery and armored regiment equipment would be lengthy and involved, so I will avoid it. In any event, we had experience only with a few types of tanks and guns, which were certainly superior to those supplied to France by Hitler and Mussolini. Unfortunately they were not equal in numbers.

We did have the use of a limited number of Russian trucks. They were heavily built and stood up well under the strain.

Effective Repellent For Biting Insects

A series of experiments have been carried out by the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture, with a view to developing a satisfactory repellent for personal application against mosquitoes, blackflies and other blood-sucking insects. As a result of this work, a new repellent has been developed which has proved very effective. Varying according to the time of day, the prevalence of biting insects, the temperature, the activity of the individual and other factors, the formula given below was found to give protection for periods varying from three to five hours: oil of thyme, ½ fluid ounce; concentrated extract of pyrethrum in mineral oil, 1 fluid ounce; Castor oil or heavy Russian oil, 3 fluid ounces.

Anyone desiring a less oily mixture may substitute olive oil or castor oil, but the resulting period of protection may not be quite so long.

Following complete coverage of exposed parts, which is essential, insects may approach closely or even alight, but will not bite until the repellent material has become weakened by evaporation or has been removed by mechanical means During the experiments, insects occasionally alighted on treated parts and were paralyzed before they could escape. As the extract of pyrethrum deteriorates in strong light and on exposure to air, the material should be placed in an amber glass bottle or metal container, which should be kept closed when not in use.

In addition to the experimental tests, this repellent has been used by foresters and other field workers, who have reported that they were greatly impressed by its effectiveness.

FRENCH AIRMEN MATCH FOR ENEMY

De Gaullist Squadrons Fight With British on Many Fronts

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 5 — (CP) — The Free French Air Force, operating on scattered fronts in the Middle East and Great Britain, is lending valuable assistance to the Royal Air Force.

A review of operations prepared by Free French Headquarters in London disclosed that the French Sudan Squadron took part daily in operations in Abyssinia. The squadron was particularly active in attacks against Debra Marcos and Bahardar and at Gondar and Chilga in the Lake Tana region.

During a raid on the airport at Gondar one of the last Italian fighter aircrafts still remaining in the country was brought down by a medium-sized Blenheim bomber of the Free French Squadron.

In Libya, the difficulties of establishing a desert air base were overcome as rapidly as possible and three days after the first formation took up its position the first successful raid was carried out on the small fort of El Tag in Kufra.

Two days later the Italian airport in the oasis was bombed and rendered unfit for possible landings of relief parties. The last bombardment of El Tag, a week after the squedron established its base, enabled Free French land forces to occupy the position.

During a bombing attack on Kufra one of the Free French machines was forced to land and only returned to its base two days later after making two landings in the desert.

In the Egyptian operations, a Free French bomber squadron attacked Italo-German motorized columns from a low altitude, dive-bombing them and destroying important material.

At sea, during an attack against a German transport, one of the Free French machines was hit by anti-aircraft fire and had to land in enemy territory. Members of the crew, most of whom were wounded, succeeded in destroying their aircraft and reaching the British lines. They were able to give valuable information.

French fighter planes, in one 10-day period, shot down 10 German aircraft, in addition to three "probables" which were seen to fall far behind enemy lines. They were not counted officially.

Free French fliers have been active over Britain also. During one of the German Air Force's moonlight attacks against London, three Free French pilots each accounted for one raider.

Big Bertha Costly

The amous German gun used to bombard Paris in the First Great War had a range of 80 miles. It cost $8,000 to shoot a single shell.

A Long Jaunt

The railroad journey from Moscow to Vladivostok, Russia, normally requires 10 days.

Tin Hats Not New To Yorkshireman

Home Guards and Fire Watchers on the Job in 17th Century Days

Scarborough, England, July 5 — (CP) — Fire watchers and home guards aren't so new after all. The town of Beverley in East Yorkshire in 1641 ranked as a big town and orders were issued by the burgesses to guard against the effects of impending civil war.

They ordained "that a regular and sufficient watch shall be kept during six days of the week, and watch and ward on the Lord's Day during these dangerous times, and to every governor is assigned the care of his own ward or his personal responsibility with power to enforce obedience to his orders."

Tin hats? As early as 1494 people were fined sixpence for coming to the watch without "defensive harness." This consisted of breastplate, curiass, basnet (that's the tin hat), gorget and paunch of mail and a pole-axe provided for each member of the community.

Fire fighting was duty of the watch and each ward was provided with a crook with chain for pulling down burning roofs. "One great iron croke with a chyne for pluking downe houses at skathe fires," was the way they described it in those days.

He Fooled Them

Britain's famed Lawrence of Arabia was rejected for front line duty in the First Great War because of anemia and short stature.

Fire Fighting Fog

A device has been perfected by which firemen can throw an artificial fog around a fire and suffocate it.

London, (CP)—A London theatre has installed a sandwich salon to allow patrons to have a quick meal before the show. The salon opens an hour before the curtain rises and a member of the cast is host each evening.

Lon Chaney Jr., follows in the footsteps of his illustrious father in his terrifying performance in "Man Made Monster," starting Sunday midnight at the Capitol. "Horror Island" makes the program doubly thrilling.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants to Talk to His Girl's Father

Dear Miss Fairfax:

All our plans for the future have been made, and we hope to be able to marry in two or three years. My girl friend has a good position and wants to help out her family until we are ready to marry. She is 18 years of age; I am 21.

My idea is to talk it over with her father, but she doesn't want me to do it because she's afraid of him, knowing how set he is against early marriages. Do you think I ought to talk over our marriage with him?

Reggie

If you could explain to her father that you were planning to marry in two or three years, perhaps he might not make any objections to his daughter's friendship with you. It would certainly make things more comfortable for you both if he were willing to have you see his daughter a couple of times a week.

Willing to Take Back Husband For Baby's Sake

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been separated for nearly a year. Our baby son is nearly two years old. We were buying a home, but since we separated he rented the house and I'm living with my parents.

My husband also is a heavy drinker and when we lived together he abused me when he drank. He can be kind and sweet when not under the influence of liquor. I love him very much, and if he'd only come back and try to make a home for baby, I'd be so happy.

I've written and talked to him over the phone, but he refuses to make a home for us. He likes to have his good times.

Unhappy

You've got to hope that your husband's better nature will assert itself, and he'll develop some sense of responsibility toward you and your little son. Isn't there someone near at hand — some member of his family, or someone whose judgment he respects — who can arouse in him a sense of obligation?

His Girl Is Taller

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in love with the sweetest girl in the world. I hesitate to ask her to marry me because she is a little taller than I and she might refuse me on that account. What do you think about a young man going with a young lady who is about an inch taller than he is?

Not a Giant.

If the girl is attractive and you find her society agreeable, you're in luck. What difference does a few inches make in the girl's favor matter anyhow?

Ill-Mannered School Boy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last week at a school dance one of the young men in the senior class asked to dance with me. We had two dances, and then he left me abruptly, saying he had to go and speak to a friend. He didn't even excuse himself.

I saw him occasionally during the evening, but he only smiled at me. After the dance, he said: "I hope you enjoyed yourself this evening." All the girls are kidding me and saying that he "ditched me in the middle of the floor." I feel terribly embarrassed now, because I know he had no reason for doing what he did.

He's a popular boy and good-looking. All the girls like to dance with him, and he'll probably ask me again at the next dance. I'd like to get even with him. What would you suggest?

Ruth.

If he asks you to dance again, you should certainly decline. When girls put up with such underbred behavior, it's no wonder some young men never learn good manners.

Limited Budget No Bar to "Real" Wedding

Planning the formal wedding, when expense does not have to be considered, presents few major problems. For the formal wedding there is a fairly definite pattern, and the people who take part are expected to abide by the traditional forms. But when limited budgets have to be reckoned with, many's the girl who is faced with this very appealing and personal problem;

"I am going to be married. We cannot afford to have a formal wedding, but I have always longed to have a 'real wedding', to wear a white wedding dress and a bridal veil. But my fiance and my father and my fiance's friends who are to be his attendants do not own formal clothes and cannot afford to buy them for this one occasion. In the kind of life we lead, they would have no further use for cutaways and striped trousers. Is there a solution to this problem that is within the bounds of good taste?"

There is a simple solution to this frequent problem. Hold onto your dream of having a "real" wedding. You can achieve a charming and dignified wedding if you plan every detail so that it will be in the best possible taste under the circumstances.

Of course when men own, can buy or rent for the occasion cutaway coats and striped trousers, that solves the problem. Some times men who rebel at wearing cutaways compromise by wearing double-breasted oxford jackets with striped trousers. But if their business suits are your challenge to being dressed like a "real bride", meet the challenge by carrying things through as much as possible to correspond to their informal attire.

Wear a white dress of simple type and of an informal material. A satin dress would be definitely inappropriate, but you may choose crepe or soft faille, or for a summer wedding, marquisette or organdie or one of the interesting cotton materials in high fashion this year. If you wear a bolero or short jacket, your dress can be of an evening or semi-evening type, very useful afterward. Have your dress floor-length with no train, and wear a finger-tip veil of fine tulle. Keep your head-dress simple — a calot or close-fitting turban made of the same tulle as the veil or the material of the dress, or a Juliet cap. Wear white slippers, and don't wear gloves. A stylized bridal bouquet is not for you; carry a few simple flowers or perhaps a small old-fashioned bouquet, or, if you prefer, carry a Prayerbook or Bible with a small-flower marker. Your one attendant should wear a dress similar to yours in type, or a becoming pastel shade, a simple hat, and should carry a casual bouquet.

At this kind of wedding the men may wear dark blue business suits, white shirts, stiff fold collars, conservative four-in-hand ties, black shoes, dark hose. They should be dressed as uniformly as possible. Their boutonnieres may be white carnations. They do not wear gloves.

If the wedding is in summer, in the country or suburbs, the men may wear dark blue coats and white flannel trousers, white shirts, blue-and-white four-in-hand ties, black shoes. Boutonnieres white or perhaps a few cornflowers. At a midsummer wedding in the country, say a garden wedding, the groom may wear a white linen suit, with white shoes.

If the wedding is after six o'clock the men may wear dinner jackets, black bow ties, black or white waistcoats, stiff shirt, fold-over or wing collar, patent leather oxfords, white boutonnieres. In summer a white tuxedo jacket may be worn.

For this type of wedding, the invitations may be notes written by the bride's mother or by the bride in her mother's name. And if there is a reception, the simplest of menus may be planned — perhaps only the bridal cake and a fruit punch or a domestic champagne with which to drink the toast to the bride and groom.

COURTESY TIP

When you give a party, don't force your friends to play games unless they wish to. You may suggest one or two games and then let the guests follow their own inclinations. Let the non-game-players chat together or do whatever they wish to amuse themselves.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, July 5

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of extraordinary excitement and activity, with every department of life quickened to high tempo and possibly daring achievement, judging by the long chain of planetary aspects operating intensively. In every phase of living this intensity prevails, and this despite a very tenacious obstacle, delays or obstruction threatening to undermine frustrate cherished objectives. These will be vanquished by determined attack, prudence, and wisdom, with help from large organizations or public bodies. Friendship, social and humane factors have high potency in promoting major enterprises, public and private.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of extraordinary excitement, commotion and achievement, with things moving to desired ends under high pressure and greatly stimulated initiative and aggressiveness. This accompanied by stubborn efforts to thwart, delay, frustrate and defeat, probably forcing change of plans, methods and possibly environs. But all menace may be successfully coped with by assistance from high places. Friendship, social standing, personal popularity are powerful factors for progress and achievement. Utilize these graciously.

A child born on this day should be splendidly endowed with many talents and forces for outstanding or unique success, rising above tenacious obstacles, handicap or probably personal idiosyncrasy, winning by its gracious social and humane qualities and sympathies.

For Sunday, July 6

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimony of possible opportunities for rising to heights of ambition and aspiration, against certain deceptive or strange appearances, by strict adherence to principle and high purpose. This is likely to attract the substantial support of those in high places, whereas swerving from worthy and time-honored systems and methods to indulge in erratic, eccentric or unorthodox tactics may forfeit this collaboration. Cultivate this friendliness but shun indulgence and extravagances.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of desired success, with progress, advancement, recognition and productiveness, if they will persist in adhering to high principle and worthy purpose, with prudent methods of promoting them rather than eccentric, strange or irregular tactics. The latter is bound to discourage the friendship and approval of those in power and with capital, as would any form of excess, extravagance, over-enthusiasm or inflated ideas or ideals. Keep moderate, balanced and conservative and luck will follow.

A child born on this day should possess many characteristics for success and happiness but may be easy-going and good-natured to excess, being easily duped.

For Monday, July 7

Monday's astrological forecast is for difficult and dangerous conditions with jealousy, antagonism and strife, both open and undercover. It will be a real task to compose this belligerency, as the native tendency is to fight fire with fire. The impulse is to tempest, fury, rush and violent behaviour, with every trend toward indulgence rather than restraint. Tension may heighten the confusion and aggravation, undermining judgment and nervous vitality.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year calling for stern individual restraint, temperance with sound modes of conduct to overcome very destructive forces. Enmity may be open as well as subtle and seductive, working with deadly craft, and undermining the health, integrity and high purpose. Shun haste and impetuosity.

A child born on this day should be wayward, impulsive and passionate, as well as having hidden urges to peculiar behaviour, and should have early supervision and guidance toward right ideas and principles. With this it should have fine creative expression, practical and artistic.

Methods to Combat Nuisance of Ants

As is usual during the summer season, the Division of Entomology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture is receiving many enquiries dealing with ants and their control. Some of these enquiries concern ants which invade kitchens and pantries in search of food; others refer to species which nest in and cause injury to lawns; still others relate to ants which cause damage to woodwork.

Ants will feed on any kinds of foodstuffs, but are particularly fond of sweet and fatty substances, and will quickly find their way into homes where their favourite foods are left exposed. One common and troublesome species, a tiny reddish ant known as Pharaoh's ant, frequently establishes its nests indoors, between the walls or in other secluded places where it is difficult to find.

The common large black carpenter ant although normally an outdoor species nesting principally in decaying wood, frequently occurs in dwellings, particularly frame houses and summer cottages, and may cause injury to woodwork as well as annoyance by its presence. The work of these carpenter ants is often mistaken for termite damage. Termites cause serious losses farther south; but in Canada they have been found only in a few localities, notably in British Columbia, and, so far, they are of no importance in this country.

In addition to the ants mentioned there are several common species which make their nests in lawns and gardens. These, too, often enter houses in search of food.

To discourage ants from invading dwellings it is important not to leave attractive food materials exposed. Shelves, tables and floors, especially in dining rooms, kitchens and pantries should be kept clean and as free as possible of crumbs and other food fragments.

One of the most effective insecticides to control ants is sodium fluoride which may be purchased from druggists or seed merchants, in the form of a fine white powder. This powder should be scattered or dusted in places frequented by the ants and left undisturbed until the insects have disappeared. As sodium fluoride is a poison, care should be taken to prevent children or pets from having access to it, and it should not be put near foodstuffs.

A safer material which has been used with success is powdered Derris. This is made from the ground roots of certain tropical plants and contains a very potent insecticide known as rotenone. Derris is comparatively harmless to humans and may be dusted around wherever the ants occur. It is reported to destroy ants in nests outdoors as well as indoors.

A poisoned bait trap which has given good results, especially against the tiny red Pharaoh's ant, may be made by taking a small tin can with a tight lid, punching several holes in the sides and top and introducing a small piece of sponge and a small quantity of a syrup prepared by mixing one gram of sodium arsenite, 8 ounces of sugar and 1-2 ounce of honey in one pint of hot water. The worker ants are greatly attracted to the bait, and take it to their nests to feed the larvae and queens. Thus whole colonies are destroyed.

Whole ant colonies in the garden or lawn may be destroyed by puncturing holes in the ground and pouring in several tablespoonfuls of carbon bisulphide. Heavy gas is given off by this liquid and its effect may be enhanced by covering the nest with an old coat of sacking. Care should be taken not to expose carbon bisulphide near fire as it is very inflammable.

Calcium cyanide dust is frequently used for destroying ant colonies. Holes are punched in the nest several inches apart to a depth of about six inches; a teaspoonful of the dust is poured into each, and the holes are plugged with soil, and the nest covered with bags or similar material to retain the gas. The cyanide should not be allowed to come into contact with the grass as it may burn it. The quantity to use depends on the size of the nest. Calcium cyanide is extremely poisonous and should be handled with great care.

Small nests may be treated by injecting into them a small quantity of fly spray. Derris powder when scattered on the nests is also reported to be effective.

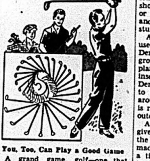
Pointers by Golf Expert Show How to Swing



You, Too, Can Play a Good Game

A grand game, golf—one that makes for sociability, friends. But you're at a disadvantage if you can't keep up with good players.

Fortunately, playing golf well is mostly a matter of right instruction. If you have a poor golf swing it may be because you went about learning the wrong way.

You cannot learn a golf stroke by piecing together different parts of the action, as you observe them in watching another player. A golf swing is a single continuous motion, circular in shape as the diagram shows.

Actually getting the feel of a true swing is the only way to play well. Grasp your club and practise swinging it in a short arc, allowing your hands and forearms to move freely back and forth with the club. Merely flexing your wrists will not produce a real swing. Now gradually increase the scope of your swing, turning your body in response to the movement.

With such practice, you soon find your strokes increasing in power, accuracy!

Learn the right way to play golf from our 32-page booklet. Ernest Jones, teacher of champions, explains balance, timing, how to stand, grip your club and swing with a maximum of force and accuracy. For beginners and more experienced players.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of SWING'S THE THING IN GOLF to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Guests Commit Social Crimes

Rita Hayworth takes a well equipped beauty kit when going on week end visits.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVERY gracious lady who entertains house guests has had a sad experience at one time or another. Powder spilled on satin table covers. Fine damask towels smeared with lipstick. Pillow slips bearing grease spots caused by the favorite massage cream used by the pretty girl who has come a-visiting.

That's no way to behave. Even worse social crimes are committed, like dropping toilet water on highly polished wood, the alcoholic content of which leaves a white stain. It explains why some young ladies never get a second invitation. They should stay at home where they can wallow in disorder and destruction to their heart's content, not disturb the lives of women who take housekeeping seriously enough to desire that their abodes be shining clean and ship-shape.

Thoughtful Guest

There are millions of women who take pride in their homes. When the cyclonic guest blows in, routine and order blow up. She's late for meals, doesn't come on the right train, never hangs up her clothes.

The thoughtful guest will keep her pulchritude props in a compact beauty kit. She won't comb her hair over the washbown to leave it untidy with hirsute ravelings. She will place a towel over the pillow if she intends to let her complexion cream remain on over night.

Forgetful Guest

This bad little girl about whom we have been sermonizing, is the one who forgets to bring everything she needs for making herself a pretty face, so goes dipping into her hostess' rouge pot or borrows her lipstick, of all things! She needs a few extra curlers for her hair or she moans because she didn't bring her nail polish remover with her.

And when she departs she invariably leaves her slippers under the bed to be packed up by her hostess and sent to her by parcel post.

Dr. and Mrs. Empson Are Feted by Friends Of Roslin Community

Last evening a party was held in Roslin Church Hall in honor of Dr. Jack Empson and Mrs. Empson. During the evening dancing was enjoyed with the Burleigh Orchestra furnishing music. About midnight, Rev. F. C. Beazer called the gathering to order. Dr. and Mrs. Empson were seated at the front of the hall and Mr. Harold Hart read an address which was signed on behalf of the community by Orley Parks, Fred Sills, Earl Gray and Harold Hart.

Dr. and Mrs. Empson were presented with a silver tea service and tea wagon for which they graciously expressed their thanks.

On Monday evening, a number of the young people gathered in the village and gave Dr. Empson and his wife a charivari, after considerable noise and din Dr. Empson gave the party a treat.

MELROSE W. I.

An interesting social event was the afternoon tea sponsored by the Melrose Women's Institute held in the Church hall on Wednesday afternoon, July 2nd.

The plans of the committee were successfully carried out and the ideal weather conditions made it possible for a goodly number to be present.

The hall was tastefully decorated in red, white and blue and the tea tables were daintily arranged with white cloths and cut flowers.

Mrs. Thos. Leslie and Mrs. Russell Macfarlane poured tea. Salads, sandwiches, fancy breads, cake, cookies and tarts were served.

Proceeds of the tea amounted to $18.69, all of which will be used for war activities. During the afternoon many of the ladies were engaged in knitting soldier comforts, while a pleasant time was being spent. Mrs. Lorne Weese favored with a musical number which was much enjoyed.

The temperature rises when Tyrone Power and Rita Hayworth get together in the technicolor triumph "Blood and Sand,' now at the Belle Theatre.

Keeping a clear, healthy complexion when the sun does its stuff is a big problem in the good old summertime

THE good old summertime plays havoc with most complexions. Dry skins become dryer, flakes appear, lines form and make-up won't stay on. Even oily skins become unmanageable. The oil glands get over-active and cause an exaggerated oiliness, while the very surface of the skin gets dry and flaky. And although dry skin and oily skin are at opposite polls, these typical summer problems make these two types of complexions sisters on the surface of the skin.

The normal condition of the skin and the temporary seasonal complexion-complaint should be regarded as two distinct problems and each should be given specific treatment. Oils and creams plus soothing lotions should be used on dry skin. These same aids, plus those with astringent properties, should be incorporated into a routine and used on oily skin which has become temporarily dry.

First, consider the skin which is naturally dry. More and more lubrication is the one infallible corrective aid for this type of skin which has been aggravated by exposure. And here let me stress the importance of a truly good lubricating cream. Such an aid has two important tasks to perform: One, it must penetrate the skin in order to reach the basic cause of the trouble and it must contain substances which are truly corrective. Two, the cream must be so well balanced that a sufficient amount of the application will remain on the surface to soothe it and, at the same time, serve as a threat to surface dryness and fine lines. So choose your lubricating cream wisely and use wisdom in using it.

To aid in checking dry skin which has been aggravated by sun and wind, do this: First cleanse the skin by whatever method is best suited to it. Then place one teaspoonful of your lubricating cream in a tablespoon and, holding it over a lighted candle or match, melt it just a little. (Be careful not to scorch the cream as this might destroy the important elements.) Then smooth the melted cream over your face and throat. Make a liberal coating of this melted cream over your lips and eyelids, too.

Now, if fine lines have formed as a result of squinting, frowning or other facial grimaces, give them extra attention. Use a gentle pat-pat or a feather-light rotary movement and massage over the lines in an effort to smooth them out. Always work your fingers upward and outward, except over the forehead where the movement should be either upward or outward. The length of the massage period should be determined by the existing state of dryness and flakiness, and whether the little lines are new or old.

The cream should remain on the skin during the next two steps of this routine. So with a generous coating of cream still on the skin, wring out a washcloth in rather warm water, fold it to a small pad, and lightly pat it over the lined areas for a minute or two. Then again use the cushions of your fingers in a light pat-pat over all of your face and throat, centering more importance over the region of lines. When you have completed this second massage, use the moistened washcloth for removing all cream.

Now, to aid in covering up surface dryness and to check further irritation from exposure, make an application of your favorite sunburn preventive lotion and let it dry thoroughly. Then, right over this preventive base, make an application of foundation cream which will serve as further protection to the skin. Cover your eyelids with both the preventive and the protective. Then put on your regular make-up and your skin will be ready for a lengthy period of exposure without the faintest trace of damage to your complexion.

Care of dry skin after exposure is important, especially if it is the thin, sensitive type. Cleanse it well and smooth on a heavy coating of melted lubricating cream. This application should remain on for from 10 minutes to all night.

Oily skin which appears oilier than ever and shows flakes and surface dryness will respond quickly to good care. As an aid toward checking the excessive flow of oil from the pores, and at the same time help overcome surface dryness, the combination oily and dry skin routines are used.

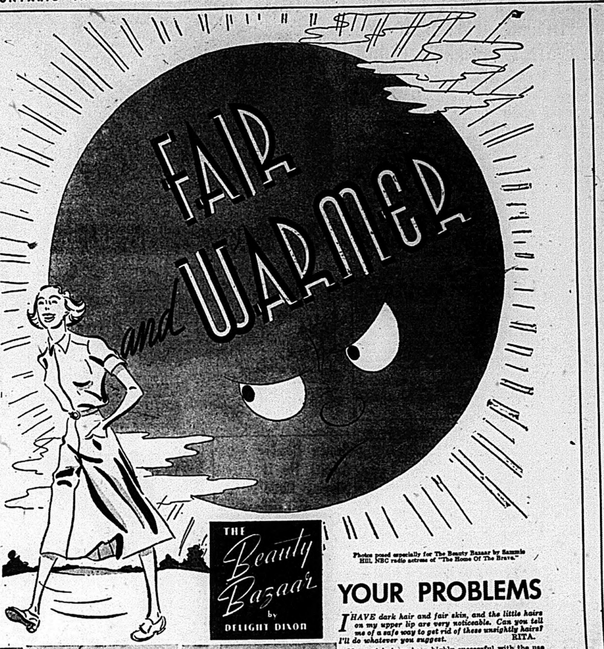
First, cleanse the skin. If it is not too sensitive, by all means use a complexion brush lathered with a good soap. Scrubbing the skin, even though the pressure of the brush is light, will help speed up circulation and so work toward normalizing the oil glands. At the same time this scrubbing helps dry up surface flakes so they can easily be rubbed off. All soap should be rinsed from the skin with cold water.

Next, an application of lubricating cream, right from the jar, should be smoothed over all of the face and throat and especially over areas that seem extremely dry. The same massage movements described for dry skin should be employed on oily skin. The cream should remain on the skin for from 10 minutes to half an hour. Then, instead of using the moistened washcloth for removing cream, use a soft cloth or towel. This will slough off the little flakes and remove every iota of cream. Any liquid with drying or astringent properties should be used next. This will further dry up the little flakes while working toward overcoming over-active oil glands and checking excessive oiliness.

Because oily skin is generally more robust than dry skin, it may not be necessary to use both the protective and the preventive aid. Figure out the needs of your skin and use one, or the other, or both. Use your regular make-up, or go without it, except for lipstick, if you want your complexion to look natural.

After-exposure care is important to oily skin if further aggravation is to be prevented. Cleanse your skin, then use a liquid with astringent properties. This will prove soothing to the skin and help check the basic cause of excessive oiliness, while tending to dry up and flake off surface roughness. If the skin is temporarily sensitive, use a coating of lubricating cream before going to bed.

The good old summertime need not play havoc with your complexion. Protect it from further irritation due to exposure and work toward overcoming extreme oiliness or dryness, whichever is your particular summer complexion complaint.



THE

DELIGHT DIXON

Lubricating cream, melted over a candle, makes a splendid oil for use on dry skin.

Smooth oily application over face and throat, then employ a light pat-pat over dry regions.

A folded, warm washcloth is next patted lightly over flaky regions.

For after-exposure care, use lubricating cream over the dry areas.

DELIGHT DIXON SAYS:

AN indescribably pleasing perfume that caught the fancy of alert women this season has five companions with the same divine fragrance of white hyacinth. These companions are: eau de cologne, liprouge, dusting powder, bath oil and sachets. The liprouge comes in seven shades.

The makers of a wonderful smearless, permanent type of liprouge now have cheek rouge in compact form which is just as permanent. The application of color won't blow off of the cheeks or dim in the least all day. This powder rouge is used just as any cream rouge—right over the foundation. It blends smoothly and evenly.

Safeguard your skin against those early surprise attacks of sunburn with a new lotion which is sprayed on. This excellent preparation is not only non-oily and quickly absorbing, but cool and refreshing to the skin. The bottle is equipped with an atomizer which makes the application of this fragrant preventive aid as simple as a, b, c.

A famous maker of foot aids has recently sponsored little slip-on foot cushions designed to act as shock-absorbers for the sensitive portion of the foot, the metatarsal or ball. These pads are made of strong, feather-weight, flesh-tinted fabric, and are as dainty as the daintiest underthings. They are orthopedically correct, sanitary, washable and invisible, even when wearing pumps, and are as flexible as your own foot. They take up so little room in the shoe that you'll never be aware of them except for the ease and comfort they give.

Experienced housekeepers love them and brides soon learn to appreciate them. I'm referring to the mitts made of a transparent substance as thin as tissue, but which are waterproof, acid and grease-proof and durable. First the hands should be scrubbed and dried, and massaged liberally with a good hand cream or lotion. Then the mitts are slipped on, and one goes merrily on her way dusting, sweeping and attending to her tasks. If you like to read in bed and the fear of getting the book greasy or sticky prevents you from using a cream or lotion, you'll find these dainty mitts just the thing.

Are you remembering to change your make-up aids to blend with your new skin tones? Watch the shade of your powder, particularly, and see that your more colorful cosmetics belong to the same family of color.

Any liquid with astringent properties should be used on oily skin which is temporarily dry. It helps to remove the flakes.

YOUR PROBLEMS

I HAVE dark hair and fair skin, and the little hairs on my upper lip are very noticeable. Can you tell me of a safe way to get rid of these unsightly hairs? I'll do whatever you suggest. RITA.

Many girls have been highly successful with the use of a cream depilatory, while others favor the waxy epilators which remove the full length of hair instead of that above the skin surface. If the darkness of the hair, rather than its length, disturbs you, I suggest that you bleach the hairs in order to make them unnoticeable. If you would like further information on the removal of hairs, or if you would like my formula for making and directions for using a bleaching agent, send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll forward my leaflets at once.

How can I find a different and becoming hair arrangement? I'm 24 years old. I wear a cluster of curls on top of my head and ringlet curls become me very well, but I do get tired of this same arrangement. My face is very round, my hair light brown and shoulder length. Thank you. ABE.

Why not study the hair styles of the movie stars? Perhaps from them you can get an idea which would be suited to your face and features. Let me suggest that you arrange the top hair in a softly waved pompadour, no part, and let the hair at the sides and back of your head hang softly just in front of your ears. This will give your face the illusion of slenderness. Do everything possible with your hair to give height to your face, but draw your hair just in front of your ears to add slenderness.

My nails grow quite well but they break very easily. How can I keep them long and prevent them from splitting and breaking? Mrs. VERNON J.

Avoid filing your nails too close at the sides of your fingers. The width at the base of the nails will support their tips and help prevent them from breaking or splitting. Shape only the nail tips. It might also be well to use a nail cream or oil, massaging it over the nails and letting the surplus nail lubricant and strengthener remain on. This will aid in making them strong, and in giving them sufficient moisture.

My legs are rather well-shaped but they do not meet above the knees. There is a space between my thighs, not very wide, but it is noticeable. Are there exercises that will correct this condition? I will appreciate your advice very much. C. L. M.

Here is a splendid exercise: Standing erect, with toes pointing straight ahead, force your thighs, not your knees, together. Hold for a second, relax, and repeat. Do this 25 times every morning and every night. This will require some practice before you will be able to do it correctly. You might also try this exercise: Lie on your back, knees bent and toes pointing down. Then follow the same movement described above, that of forcing your thighs together. The first exercise can be practised any time of the day, however, whenever you stand.

I use a very dark liprouge. It is almost brown and has red undertones. Would it be all right for me to use a nail polish the same shade? EILLEENE.

The majority of the newest nail polish shades are definitely on the brown side of the color chart. You'll find any number of them on the nail polish shelf in your favorite store.

My knuckles are prominent, the skin over them is loose and my hands look very old. I don't suppose I can reduce the size of my knuckles, but I would like to know how to make my hands look younger. DOTTY

Massage heavy applications of lanoline or lubricating cream over your hands every night. This will not decrease the size of your knuckles but it will soften the skin over them so it won't appear "baggy." Use hand lotion or cream frequently and keep your nails well groomed.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent to her in care of this newspaper.

'DING' LUFFMAN'S SPOT PITCHING WINS CONTEST

Point Anne Moves Closer to the Top With 9-2 Win Over Reliance

WHITEHEAD STARS

Sparked by superb defensive playing and consistent hitting on the part of "Whitey" Whitehead, their alert third-sacker, the Ox-point Point Anners drew closer to the league-leading Corby nine in the Belleville Men's Softball setup, when behind eight-hit spot pitching by "Ding" Luffman, they scored a rather easy 9-2 victory off Reliance.

Only in the first inning, when they filled the bases did Reliance really threaten Point Anne superiority but Luffman bore down to retire the side without a score. St. Denis opened the inning with a rousing double to be followed by a single from Gow's bat, St. Denis holding second. The next two batters hit into force-outs but LaBonne singled to fill the sacks. Luffman bore down, however and struck out Bowden for the third out.

With the exception of a five-run scoring splurge by the winners in the third inning, when two errors materially helped, the game was a hurling duel between Major for Reliance and Luffman with the nod going to the Ox-Pointer. Luffman limited Reliance to eight hits while he struck out four and failed to walk a single batter. Major on the other hand, after allowing six runs in the first three innings, settled away to restrict the winners to two counts for the balance of the route, allowing eleven safeties, striking out one and walking two.

Whitehead Effective

"Whitey" Whitehead was the most effective player on the diamond, hitting effectively in the pinches as he conked out two singles and a brace of doubles in five trips to the plate and assisted in no less than ten put-outs. Murney Green was the only other player on the winning team to connect safely more than once, getting a single and a double, while Sero and Luffman also hit doubles.

For the losers Grey was most effective at bat, clouting a triple and a single, while St. Denis hit out a double. LaBonne, however, shone defensively, his snaring of two line drives at first base being features. Both infields played snappy ball throughout the game with each team clicking for double plays to cut off scoring rallies.

The lineups:

Point Anne: Genereaux cf; Bennett rf; Whitehead 3b; Sero ss; Green c; Hutchings lf; Whalen 2b; D. Bennett 1b and Luffman p.

Reliance: St. Denis ss; Gow cf; Rowbotham c; Smith 2b; LaBonne 1b; Bowden 3b; Goyer lf; Grey rf and Major p.

GOOD-LUCK CHARM

Joe DiMaggio, who has just broken the all-time big league record set by Willie Keeler in 1897, receives a gift of a little Buddha good-luck charm from a group of youthful admirers from New York's Chinatown. Joe rubs the charm each time he goes to bat to get some of that lasting power which has enabled embattled China to resist the Jap invasion for four years this July 7.

TWISS CAN SET PRECEDENT BY WINNING CROWN

Junior Champion Reaches Semi-Final Round in Ontario Amateur Golf Tourney

SCORES UPSET

Toronto, July 5 (CP)—Jim Twiss, likeable 19-year-old Toronto Mississauga golf star, can set precedent today if he wins the Ontario amateur championship. His chances are brightened due to the fact he is playing over his home course.

Twiss, semi-finalist who meets Bruce Bradley of Oshawa today, will be the first junior-age player to win the title if he continued his winning streak. He scored a major upset Friday with a first-round 2 and 1 victory over the 1930 champion, Jack Nash of London Hunt Club.

Twiss, 1940 Ontario junior titleholder, followed this with a 3 and 2 triumph over Bill McMullen of Toronto Lakeview. Bradley won 5 and 4 over George Noll of Mississauga in Friday's first round and then clinched a semi-final berth with a 3 and 2 decision over Jim Boeckh, Toronto York Downs.

Boeckh, 1938 winner of the amateur crown, survived the first round with a 3 and 2 score over Phil Farley, three times Ontario amateur king.

Gil Walker of London Sunningdale and Jack Chinery, Toronto Glen Mawr meet in the other semi-final match.

Brown Bomber Admits He is Slipping Little

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Joe Louis will retire from the ring if, in his September bout with Lou Nova, "I find I've slipped too far".

This statement came from the heavyweight champion of the world between rounds of golf yesterday. The Brown Bomber added that "I ain't near the fighter I used to be".

Louis, who has defended his title 18 times since acquiring it in 1937, said:

"Look what happened in the (Billy) Conn fight. I have him in the third round and again in the fifth, but I can't finish him. I knew then that I'se slipped. Chappie (Jack Blackburn, his trainer) kept telling me that no little fellow should beat me, especially no little fellow who was 25 pounds lighter'n me.

"Then, I think it was Conn who beat hisself. He fight hisself out in the 12th and then I finish him in the 13th."

What has caused me to slip?

"Dunno for sure," said Louis. "Guess it was a couple of things. I been working too hard. I been in training since November 13 and ain't had but one little vacation of two weeks between fights."

SWACO LASSIES DOWN VIKINGS BY 13-12 COUNT

Pinch-Hitter's Single Drove in the Winning Tally

HOMER TIES GAME

After Twila Langman had homered to knot the score in the last half of the ninth, pinch-hitter Ollie Grain's single drove Helen Richardson across the plate with the winning run as the SWACO gals came from behind to beat Mike Power's Viking lassies 13 to 12 in a scheduled city girls' softball league game played at the armouries last night. In winning the "east-enders" fortified their hold on first place in the league standing, while the Vikings dropped into a tie for third place in losing.

The SWACO took a three run advantage in the second, but the Vikings rallied to score six in the fourth. After getting two on Danny Stead's homer in their half of the fourth, the SWACO girls pushed three more runs over the fourth base assisted by Twila Langman's triple. Hits by Chambers, Maker and Cook gave the Vikings four runs in the seventh when they took the lead for the second time, but Norma Corneal homered with one on in the bottom half of the seventh to knot the count again.

Going into the ninth the score was all even at ten runs each. Marg. Zebedee, S. Adams and Rita Rabbie all hit for Vikings as they scored two but with one out in the bottom half of the ninth, M. Kelleher singled, Twila Langman homered again knotting the score and Helen Richardson raced to third when the Viking outfield was slow in picking up her two-base grounder and scored on Ollie Grain's pinch-hitting single after two were out.

Ken Watt's SWACO girls played strong ball behind Danny Stead's pitching and kicked in with two fast double plays to help their cause. Fralick at second and M. Kelleher in the middle field made fine running catches to help the winners' cause, while Norma Maker and Marg. Chambers stood out defensively to help Rita Rabbie on the Vikings mound. Marg. Zebedee hit a round-tripper for Vikings, while Twila Langman, Danny Stead and Norma Corneal all hit homers for the winners, Langman getting a triple and single to have five runs batted in. Timely extra base hits decided the issue following a pitchers' duel between Danny Stead, hurling for Skipper Watt's nine, and Rita Rabbie, firing for Mike Power's losing Vikings. The game was by far the most interesting of the schedule. The Vikings out-hit the winners by one base blow, but the SWACO girls counted more extra base blows.

Vikings—B. Cook lf, M. Chambers cf, E. Adams and D. Zebedee ss, M. Zebedee c, N. Maker 2b, E. Cook 1b, D. Way and S. Adams rf, M. Tummon ss and R. Rabbie p.

The Tip Top Cup round is being utilized as qualifying rounds for the men's club championship this year.

Today the junior handicap championship of the Country Club is being held as a qualifying round, with the four lowest gross scores to play for the junior club championship later.

GOSSIP [illegible] COMMENT

Ralph "Highpockets" McCabe is the leading pitcher in the Penn State League, according to the latest Press reports received from Butler, Pa., where McCabe has pitched and won five games, as of June 28th last. McCabe pitched himself a two-hitter against the Beaver Falls "Beavers" one week ago tonight, winning 13 to 3. Ralph developed a slight wild streak as he passed six via the four ball route, but his fire-ball was sizzling as the elongated righthander whiffed five and allowed only two hits, one being a triple with two on, however. It was McCabe's fifth consecutive win in as many starts. Previously in the week the former Belleville moundsman now in the Yankee chain-gang, hurled an eight-hitter and won 11 to 7 over Washington, Pa. In this game McCabe struck out eleven batters. In a letter to his parents, Inspector and Mrs. Herb McCabe of this city, Ralph speaks highly of his catcher, Tony Recca, who was sent from Newark to handle the youthful Yankee farmhands at Butler.

In the latest bulletin released by Secretary Vern McIlwaithe, of the Ontario Softball Association, a list of players to have obtained their transfers through the O. A. S. A. were announced but no players' transfers were observed in favour of local clubs. When the time for the local O.A.S.A. playdowns to commence, only Corby's A.C., Reliance and the SACO are eligible in the intermediate "A" series, the Esquire kids move down into the junior bracket, while Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen move out into the Intermediate "C" category. Whether Johnnie Hamilton, who was released from the Reliance and is now playing for Corby's, needs a transfer or not your correspondent must plead ignorance thereof. However, both the Reliance and SACO have been playing players all season who played softball elsewhere last season and would therefore need a transfer from the O.A.S.A., but no official announcement of such transfers have been made by Secretary McIlwaithe. Actually it looks like slackness on the part of the clubs and more especially the league executive, of which your reporter is one of six.

Do you remember when more than 18,000 persons jammed Wimbledon to see Great Britain's tennis star, Fred Perry, crush Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 in the English men's singles final six years ago today? Perry, now in pro ranks, recently won the 1941 world's professional singles title.

Cleveland infielders tied a major league record recently when they hit five home runs in the game against the Athletics, Hal Trosky getting two and Lou Boudreau, Ken Keltner and Ray Mack one each.

Other occasions on which the infielders of one team hit five homers in a single game were June 3, 1932, when Lou Gehrig walloped four and Tony Lazzeri one for the Yankees and on May 24, 1936, when Tony Lazzeri hit three and Frankie Crosetti two for the Bronx Bombers.

The softball winners in town last night strongly fortified their hold on their respective positions as the Point Anne "Cementmen" downed the Reliance 9-2 to take a strangle hold on second place in the City League, while at the Armouries Ken Watt's SWACO lassies were forced to the limit to beat Mike Power's Vikings 13 to 12, as the two nines were tied at ten-all going into the ninth. "Ding" Luffman bested Archie Major in a hurling duel at the Flats when Bubby Gaulin's Ox Point "mushballers" scored five runs in the third in a game that otherwise was purely a pitchers' battle. Luffman came through with some fine spot hurling, especially in the initial frame when the Reliance filled the bases but failed to score, as Luffman was bearing down in the clinches and scattered eight hits easily. Whitehead, now that he has been moved into the inner workings of the Cementmen, again proved his effectiveness, both offensively and defensively. At the Armouries it was Twila Langman's big bat that really helped the Alemites when hits meant runs.

Shannonville Hawks Defeated by Latta

Playing on their home diamond last night the Shannonville Hawks dropped a South Hastings baseball game to Latta by a 6-1 score. Latta scored three runs in the initial inning, followed by one each in the third, fourth and fifth to put the game on ice. Shannonville's lone tally came in the third.

Doc Empson started his southpaw, Garfield Hall with Joe Marsh doing the receiving and his choice proved good as Hall made ten Shannonville hitters bite the dust.

Barbestock on the mound for Shannonville after the first inning settled away and pitched good ball.

For the Latta team, Joe Marsh with a triple, followed by Meraw and Gowe with singles were the best hitters, while for Shannonville Houston, Reid and Cook with singles stood out.

EVERY DIVISION FULLY MOTORIZED U.S. ARMY AIM

Under Secretary of War Patterson Says New U.S. Army Would be More Thorough Mechanized Than Germany's

Dallas, July 5 (AP)—Robert P. Patterson, United States Under-Secretary of War, characterized as a "common fallacy" the belief "that the more machines an army has the fewer men it needs."

"The reverse is true," he said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Texas Bar Association.

"The maintenance and supply of machines demands a large increase in manpower, and so do the collateral problems of spare parts, gasoline and oil and provisions for the men. Mechanization has complicated, not simplified, battle and the preparation for battle."

Asserting the United States had studied with profit the lessons conveyed by the war, Patterson said:

"Today we are getting our mechanized army. It will be a far more thoroughly mechanized army than the German. We should not be satisfied until every division is fully motorized, if not for combat at least for transport of every soldier in it."

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE FIREFLY"

Moviegoers of Belleville and district are in for a grand musical screen treat next week at the McCarthy Theatre, where Jeanette McDonald in "The Firefly" will be presented. Allan Jones, Warren William, Billy Gilbert and Douglas Dumbrille, all popular Hollywood players, head the outstanding cast of thousands, in this Miss MacDonald production, which makes it all the more important as one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio's greatest screen achievements, "The Firefly" comes to the screen as even a greater musical than was "Maytime". The program in addition to this great hit will also include one of the screen's most powerful dramatic productions entitled "Under Age", a story exposing a ruthless, merciless tourist camp racket that preys on young girls. Nan Grey, Alan Baxter, Mary Anderson and Tom Neal, head the splendid cast of "Under Age". The latest McCarthy-Fox News Events will also be presented.

Joan Bennett.

The laugh frolic of the year, Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone in "She Knew All the Answers" will be shown this evening at the McCarthy Theatre for the last time. We highly recommend that you do not miss this excellent laugh hit. The program in addition includes a real "wild west western. Charles Starrett in "Thundering Frontier", a color comic Mickey Mouse cartoon and also the most exciting chapter so far of "The Green Archer" serial.

AT THE CAPITOL

Double Horror Show

Merging blood-freezing terror with powerful drama, Universal's new horror sensation, "Man Made Monster" will be the attraction at the Capitol Theatre starting Sunday midnight.

Heralded as something new and startling in the field of screen shockers, the new production tells what happens when a scientific genius, attempting to prove a theory that human life can be motivated and controlled by electricity, transforms a normal human being into a super-charged monster.

Lionel Atwill, veteran of numerous spine-thrillers and specialist in sinister portrayals, essays the role of the scientist. Lon Chaney Jr., in a characterization reminiscent of those of his famous father, portrays the monster. Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson and Samuel S. Hinds have other major roles.

And to make the program even more thrilling there is another chilling hit.

Shadowy spectres, a haunted castle and a life and death struggle for a buried treasure furnish suspense and thrills in Universal's shock-drama, "Horror Island."

Dick Foran, popular action hero; Leo Carrillo, famous character personality, and Peggy Moran, screen beauty, head the brilliant group of players.

In what is described as a spine-tingling story, they embark on a week-end cruise to a deserted island, supposed hideout of Captain Morgan, pirate chief famous in history and legend.

This double horror show starts Sunday midnight. An interesting short, "Going Places" will be shown on the same program.

The world's weary troubles and trials are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore
Till God called her home to suffer no more.

DAUPHINEE—In loving memory of Mrs. W. D. Dauphinee, who passed away July 6, 1940.

No one knows how much we miss you,
No one knows the bitter pain
We have suffered since we lost you,
Life has never been the same.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true.
There is not a day, dear Mother
That we do not think of you.

SOULE — In loving memory of husband and father, Louis Soule who passed away July 6, 1937, and Nellie Cook, daughter and sister, who passed away August 24th., 1932.

They have gone across the river
Where the shores are ever green
And we long to see their dear faces
But the River flows between.

Some day, some time our eyes shall
See the faces we love so well.
Some day we'll clasp their loving hands
And never say farewell.

AT THE BELLE

"Blood and Sand"

Brilliantly conceived, masterfully executed, and beautifully paced, "Blood and Sand" opens today at the Belle Theatre.

Starring Tyrone Power who contributes an inspired performance, the film was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck in blazing technicolor. Based on the famous novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, "Blood and Sand" features Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth at the head of a star-studded cast.

Depicting the story of a matador who is torn between the love of a beautiful wife (Linda Darnell) and the allure of a fiery temptress (Rita Hayworth), "Blood and Sand" is a drama of contrasts. Contrasts between the grinding poverty of young Juan Gallardo, the reckless bullfighter before he became the most famous matador of Spain and the overflowing wealth he achieved afterwards, the contrast between the devotion and the fidelity of Juan's wife and the callous fickleness of the beautiful siren. All of which makes it one of the most moving and exciting films to come out of Hollywood.

Director Rouben Mamoulian is an artist as well as a realist. It wasn't enough for him to know that the background material filmed in Mexico City would lend an authentic Spanish atmosphere to the picture—he went a step further. He used the technicolor camera to "paint" instead of merely to photograph the scenes. The result, a creation combining action and art — an impressive screen achievement.

It is as if the paintings of the great masters have come to life. Against a lavish setting of vibrant colors, you see unfolded the passions, the love and the hatreds of a fearless matador. He conquers a nation, but is in turn conquered by a woman who throws him off when she is attracted by another.

Thousands of extras and hundreds of actors were employed to bring this sensational story to the screen. "Blood and Sand" combines all the sweep of a panorama with the sensitivity of a great love story.

The outstanding supporting cast includes Nazimova, Anthony Quinn, J. Carrol Naish, John Carradine, Lynn Bari, Laird Cregar and Vincente Gomez.

The same program includes a late Belle News reel and a coloured fun cartoon, "Home Guard."

Canada's Officers Learn Their Gases At Training Camp

Some Odorless and Some Not But Sniffs, Sneezes March With Knowledge in this War Feature

SPECIAL TRAINING

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Brockville, July 5 (CP). — Tears and sneezes are part of the experience of prospective army officers in training at the Brockville officers' instruction establishment.

The P.A.G. (Protection Against Gas) building is one of the establishments in which the man qualifying under the stringent active army requirements assembles some of the knowledge he requires.

Part of the equipment is a small wooden case filled with vials. The soldier is required to sniff the contents and thus learn to identify poison gases by their odor. Mustard gas is simple. It smells just like mustard. The odor of others is more elusive, and if he sniffs too hard at one variety he is doomed to a fit of sneezing.

Where Masks Needed.

Tear gas has an important place in training, as it is used to demonstrate the necessity of wearing gas masks at all times when the presence of gas is suspected. Tiny vials containing the ingredients of the gas are opened in a room, and, in removing his mask, the soldier is exposed to its effects. Invariably he leaves the room in tears and with the lesson driven home.

Cases containing ointment for application when it is suspected mustard gas has fallen on some exposed part of the body are available. Little capes, to which are applied certain chemicals, are part of the modern soldier's equipment. Should an odorless gas be dropped from the air, its presence will be revealed by spots on the cape, which warns the man that gas masks and other protective equipment must be used immediately.

The soldier is instructed to mark the spots on the cape so that if he is exposed to a similar gas at some future date there will be no confusion with earlier spots.

Long slickers are included in the anti-gas equipment, and with them drawn over a uniform in a gas zone, the soldier has a measure of protection.

Every arm of the service had knowledge of gas, the types and effects, said camp officials. Members of the armored corps, artillery, engineers, signals, infantry, machine-gun, army service corps, ordnance provost, postal, dental and pay services are in training here.

Special Training.

In the first four weeks at the training centre all those seeking active army officers' qualifications receive similar training in military matters, and when they have received specialized training in various branches of the service they are to follow, come together for a final two weeks of instruction common to all arms.

Buildings at the training centre are of the plainest wooden type, with few comforts. They are designed for use rather than beauty. The officers' mess has carpets and easy chairs in two rooms, but Col. R. G. Whitelaw, camp commandant, said that these furnishings were donated and curtains and other small items were purchased by the officers themselves.

Hen Conscripted When Gas Fails

London, July 5 (CP)—St. Bartholomew's Hospital received the gift of a set of eggs. It was suggested when the chickens were hatched they should be sent the nurses' country home to provide eggs for the winter.

The eggs were put in a gas incubator in the pathological laboratory. Then bombs cut off the gas supply. The eggs were in danger of going cold.

A resourceful hospital official appeared with a hen in the sidecar of his motorcycle and the newcomer proceeded to hatch out the eggs.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

TOM HAD felt quite sure that Morton Blake would make another offer to take over the island, following the hectic night when it had unwillingly offered refuge to the shipwrecked sailors. He knew that Hugh Powell had expected that, too, and when a week passed and Morton Blake had not been heard from, both Hugh and Tom were a little puzzled.

And then something happened that for a little while made them forget both Blake and the shipwreck. The boatman came over with the morning mail on a beautiful blue and gold day, and in the mail there was a telegram for Natalie.

They were all clustered together on the pier where they usually met for a sorting of the morning mail and the newspapers. Natalie ripped the telegram open immediately and they heard her little shocked, protesting gasp.

"Brooks," she exclaimed, "will you listen to this: it's from poor little Coralie Simpson. Something awful has happened. She says, 'Am in a terrible jam. Please get in touch with me the minute you get this. Am still in the hospital, but telephone the chief of police here. Please hurry.'"

She looked up at Brooks, bewildered.

"But—what in the world could have happened?" she stammered.

"I don't know—but you'd better get over to the mainland as quickly as possible and telephone her. How about it, old man? Will you run us over?" Brooks addressed the boatman.

"Sure—hop in," answered the man promptly. "Anybody else want to go along?"

"Let's all go, just for the ride—that is, if Brooks and Natalie don't mind?" suggested Betsy eagerly.

Bill and Terry were going fishing; Major and Mrs. Edmonds begged off; but the others piled into the boat and it went racing for the mainland. On shore, somebody directed them to the small telephone exchange and Natalie put through her call.

There was a brief wait, and then a voice said, "Okay on your call to Richland, Mrs. Marchbanks. Go ahead, Richland."

"Hello—this Mrs. Brooks Marchbanks?" demanded a rather stern voice. "This is the chief of police at Richland. You know anything about a man and a girl calling themselves Johnny and Coralie Simpson?"

"I certainly do," answered Natalie sharply, resenting the tone. "My husband and I found them after an automobile wreck. We took them to the hospital in Richland and made ourselves responsible for their bills."

"Yeah, I know all that," agreed the chief, his tone a little more conciliatory. "But what I want to know is—did you give them a six-thousand-dollar automobile?"

"It cost eight thousand, and I certainly did. The papers were drawn up by one of the leading legal lights of your own town—" began Natalie hotly.

"Okey, lady—don't get sore." The chief was amused now and friendly. "It was just that when they tried to sell the car—and nobody knew anything about 'em—"

"Are you trying to tell me that you've dared to arrest those two children?" blazed Natalie.

"We-e-ell, not exactly arrest," protested the chief. "We-ve got a couple of fellows stationed over at the hospital. After all, when a couple of kids in a broken-down jaloppy, who have to have their hospital bills paid by somebody else, suddenly turn up with an imported roadster that cost a mint of money and want to sell it — well, it doesn't make sense. And we couldn't get any trace of you people. I telephoned your place in New York and they said you were in Honolulu. After all, what else could we do?"

"You might try believing that your own lawyers know what they are doing when they draw up a transfer of ownership on an automobile," Natalie told him sharply. "And you might try using a little common sense now and then. You are going to withdraw the guard from the hospital at once, aren't you?"

"Oh, sure, sure—sorry to have troubled you," said the man, but Natalie hadn't waited for that.

She called Long Distance again, and this time got the hospital. A moment later Coralie's tear-sodden voice was saying shakily, "Oh, gosh, Mrs. Marchbanks, is that really you? I've nearly gone crazy these last two or three days. I'm awfully sorry I had to bother you, but these lugs here tried to accuse Johnny and me of stealing that old car—just because a man wanted to buy it and offered to pay four thousand dollars cash. Johnny said we could buy a filling station and pay a down payment on a bungalow and furnish it with that much money, and we'd be a couple of chumps not to sell it—"

"Coralie, darling, I'm terribly sorry." Natalie apologized swiftly. "Please forgive me for getting you into such a jam. I just got your telegram a little while ago and I called you right away. Everything will be all right now, you'll see."

"Sure, I knew it would be as soon as you could convince John Law that you really gave us the car," said Coralie, her voice steadying now. "I have to admit it sounded pretty crazy to me, when I tried to tell 'em that you gave us the car. Nobody would believe that you could be so swell. I went around pinching myself for a week, trying to make myself believe it was all real. And the clothes are so beautiful. You ought to see me in that blue and silver brocaded housecoat. I'm something to look at!"

"Of course you are, Coralie. I'll bet it looks lots better on you than it did on me," said Natalie warmly. "How's Johnny?"

"Oh, he's fine,' answered Coralie's eager voice. "He's sitting up in bed now and the Doc says he can sit up in a chair next week, and maybe in a month we can get out of this place. Johnny's so excited about going into business for himself—and think of us having a whole house to ourselves! I never had anything but a corner of a room to myself in my life—"

"Coralie, you're breaking my heart," said Natalie, and meant it. "I'll call you again in a day or two. And you let me know if you have any more trouble—though I don't think you will. I'll telephone that lawyer and give him a good-sized section of my mind for not looking after you better."

When she had finished and hung up the telephone, she came out to find the others waiting for her. They listened eagerly as she told them what had happened, so absorbed in what she was saying that they were completely unaware of the man who lounged in a corner, apparently busy filling out a form but who was listening avidly to everything they said.

When they left the telephone office, this man tore up the printed form he had been filling out, and crossed to the desk.

"Get me New York City—the editor of the Morning Clarion," he said and disappeared into the booth where Natalie had just been.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on my front steps with Reddy Merfy talking about different subjects such as whether it would be safer to be the commander of a submarren without enough air or the pilot of a dive bomber with too much air, and I said, Well I'd feel safer in a submareen, I can tell you that much.

Who cares where you'd feel safer, your feelings dont prove anything, do they? Reddy said, just saying it to conterdict on account of him always conterdicting everything just for the principal of conterdicting, and I said, Well anyways I'd rather be in a tank than either one, because a tank's got armor a foot thick.

How do you know it's a foot thick, did you ever measure it? Reddy said, and I said, No, I never actually measured it but I know what I read, dont I?

No, you dont, Reddy said, and I said, Why dont I? and he said, Because for the simple reason you dont know anything.

Being such a big conterdiction it was pretty near a insult, and I said, Well hay, do you want a fight?

Being something nobody ever says to Reddy Merfy, and he couldn't hardly believe it, saying, Hey, do you know what you're saying, are you looking for a sudden funeral?

Meaning mine, and I quick jumped up and started to make fists, and Reddy jumped up too, still looking so surprised he didn't hardly have room to look mad, and just then somebody grabbed me by the back of the collar, saying, What's going on here? You go on home, young Merfy, he said.

Well hay, G wizz, he started it, Reddy said, and pop took me in the house, saying, Were you actually fool hardly enough to start a fight with Reddy Merfy? and I said, sure, and pop looked at me sispicious, saying, Did you see me coming up the street?

Well, I kind of thought it looked like you, I said.

Proving it's a good thing to feel safe before you act reckless.

Weekend Traffic Heaviest in Years

Motor traffic along Ontario highways is the heaviest in history, Provincial Motorcycle Patrolmen reported at the height of the American Independence Day week-end holiday.

"Not even in the boom years prior to 1929 was motor traffic in Ontario to be compared with the influx of American tourists which I saw on Highway No. 2 on Friday," stated Sergeant Sid Hunter, in charge of the Motorcycle Patrol Division of the O.P.P. stationed here today.

"On one mile stretch of highway east of here, I actually saw a line-up of automobiles well over a mile long proceeding westerly and there were only two Ontario licenced vehicles in the whole procession. Actually yesterday the American cars touring our district outnumbered the Ontario vehicles on the open highway and I might add the Americans are exceedingly good drivers on the whole and are courteous in signalling their traffic intentions," added Sergeant Hunter as he predicted the heaviest week-end of motor traffic in history.

Produce Markets Active See Prices Up Some

Toronto, July 5. — Prices in all lines showed advance in trading on a lively Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter headed the list as all grades registered a gain of ¾ cent a pound, while top-grade eggs were up ½ cent a dozen over the previous day's close.

Offerings continued extremely light on the butter market and, though demand was not heavy, it proved quite sufficient to keep receipts clearing well. According to local dealers, the present decrease in Ontario's butter production, while it is to be expected at this time of year, has been accentuated by dry weather. The number of tourists staying on Ontario farms has also tended to cut into the amount of creamery products shipped to the city, it was stated.

The egg market has been firm during the current week, with an increase of about 2½ cents a dozen on top grades. Northern Ontario dealers and military camps have been aggressive buyers, supplying particularly good demand for grades A-medium and A-pullets. The good local demand is said to be partially due to the American Legion invasion. Though grades B and C have not enjoyed such keen inquiry, they have been moving steadily and there is no surplus.

The dressed poultry market has been fairly active this week and a good demand for fresh dressed fowl and heavy chicken has been evident. Broilers, though quite plentiful, have met a better local demand and any surplus has been taken care of by buyers from Montreal and the Maritimes.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, July 5 (CP).—Produce market prices here yesterday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

"As a result of unsuccessful operations of the enemy at Tarnopol he ations of the enemy at Tnm..al turned his tank units at night toward the direction of Novograd Volynski (to the northeast).

"Our troops successfully fought enemy tank units throughout the night, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and checking his advance toward the east.

"On the Bessarabian sector of the front the enemy threw into the battle big forces near the river Prut at several points, and attempted to develop this success over our troops, but the advance of the enemy is being halted by our troops."

The communique listed Nazi plane losses yesterday as 43, with 27 Red air fleet planes missing.

(A Moscow radio broadcast heard in New York said the Nazi army had paid for its gains with almost 750,000 men killed, wounded or captured and said "the best divisions of the German army have been smashed."

(The Nazis claimed to have crossed the Berezina in some places, but acknowledged stiff resistance.)

Firm Soviet Stand Near Tarnopol.

A Moscow communique reported another firm Soviet stand on the southern flank of the front, below Tarnopol, where it said day-long attacks by strong mechanized forces were repulsed.

Of the key points along the far-flung front between the Baltic and Black Sea, the communique said:

"During the entire day of July 4 unrelenting fighting occurred in the directions of Dvinsk, Borisov, Bobruisk and Tarnopol.

"In the direction of Dvinsk the enemy launched important formations of tanks followed by motorized infantry. Our troops firmly stood their positions, inflicting great losses on the enemy tanks. Only after the enemy threw reserves into the fight did our troops fall back on their positions.

Stubborn Fighting

"At the same time great battles occurred at Lepel where our troops successfully repulsed numerous enemy tank attacks. During the second half of the day, after strong air preparations, the enemy succeeded in making our troops fall back several kilometres to the east.

"Relentless uninterrupted fighting on the Berezina River developed unfavorably for the enemy. His repeated attempts to cross the Berezina were repulsed by our troops.

"During the entire day stubborn fighting took place below Tarnopol where important enemy mechanized units attempted to pierce the front of our troops toward the southeast. In the blows of this fighting our troops again gave firm proof of stubborness, having repulsed the attacks of superior enemy forces."

French-Canadian fliers were with the contingent, including Sgt.-Air Gunner Fernand Boulanger of Montreal.

Sgt.-Air Gunner Bert Stewart of Montreal, Sgt.-Observer F. C. Cingley of Salisbury, N.B., and Sgt.-Air Gunner Knowles Crosby of Yarmouth, N.S., were emphatic in their desire for posting to bombers —"The heavier the better", they said.

Old Boys and Girls Hold Reunion at Carrying Place

July the first of this year will be a day that many will remember for years to come. On that day old friends of many years standing gathered from far and near in the historic Carrying Place which was at one time the proposed capital of Upper Canada.

It was indeed a delight to see the glow on many a face as they reminisced of days gone by. The very fact that the registration showed that former residents came from as far away as Illinois, Florida and Washington States in the United States is proof that friendships established in childhood live through the years no matter what distance divides them.

The day opened in a very appropriate manner by starting with a Church service. Rev. A. E. Strother, Anglican Minister of Carrying Place, was in charge of the service. He dedicated a very beautiful flag presented to the church by Miss Amelia Hayes who spent her girlhood in this village but who is now a resident of nearby Trenton.

The Very Reverend Wm. L. Wright, Dean of Algoma District, preached the sermon. He recalled sleeping in the front seat of the church when his father was Anglican Minister there. Dean Wright took as his text the fifteenth verse of the twenty-third chapter of the Second Book of Samuel. He pointed out the necessity of keeping alive sentiment in this world. He felt if people were ruled more by sentiment there would be no such thing as war.

Unfortunately Rev. Stillman Kemp of Oshawa, arrived too late to take part in the service but Rev. C. Gifford of Consecon assisted by reading the Lesson.

Mr. J. A. Dymond, chairman of the organization welcomed the old girls and boys and took charge of the program for the afternoon.

Classes Interesting

Classes conducted by former teachers were very interesting. Mrs. Wm. Bedell of Hillier had roll call for pupils, who attended school when she taught there as Miss D. Young. She stressed the importance of poetry in our every day life. Despite the fact that around thirty years have rolled by, many could repeat the lines of "The Village Blacksmith". Mr. Chas. L. Jones, B.A., of Toronto, stated, that the junior room of the school was erected while he taught there and he helped build it. Dr. Harry Boyce of Kingston, another teacher of former days, emphasized the necessity of young people making up their minds to get somewhere and they would.

The children of the school rendered choruses which showed that the music teacher, Miss Flora MacDonald, had well trained them. Among the numbers were "Playmates", "Land of Hope and Glory" and Shades of Evening".

Mr. Chas. Young of Montreal, was unable to be present, so Mr. Blake Young gave his brother's paper on the History of the Carrying Place. His father remembered the time when the mail was relayed through Carrying Place from York to Kingston on horseback.

The Old Boys' and Girls' parade was entered into with great enthusiasm. The Argyll Kiltie Band of Belleville led the parade. This band deserves much credit for the fine music they supplied throughout the day and during the evening. They proved their patriotism by giving their services free.

The sports of the day kept many of those attending interested. A girls' soft-ball game between the Allore Lumber and Ice Co., and the Murray and Bristow Drug Store of Trenton was won by the former. The foot races and tug-of-war also had a good many spectators.

The banquet of the evening was one of the highlights of the day, due to the capable supervision of Miss M. E. Corrigan. The tables were beautifully decorated by Mrs. Harry Young, and a sumptuous repast was served.

Acted as Chairman

Rev. A. Strother acted as chairman for the banquet and called upon Rev. J. L. Hutchison, Vicar of Trenton, to say grace. Mr. Strother spoke of the many things we have to be thankful for and of the unity among the British speaking people and of our hopes for the future.

Rev. C. Gifford, the United Church minister of Carrying Place, made a splendid Toastmaster and opened the toast by proposing one to the King.

Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P., proposed the toast to the British Empire. He pointed out that in these trying times we must take stock of ourselves and each and everyone must make sacrifices if democracy and freedom are to survive. The British Empire will be what we contribute as part of it. The response was made by singing "O Canada."

Mr. Dymond in proposing the toast to the Old Boys and Girls, spoke of the pleasure of seeing so many smiling faces of old friends and welcomed them home again. Miss Amelia Hayes responded to this toast. Miss Hayes spoke of the history attached to this village and of the work done by the United Empire Loyalists in building up a tradition that has helped to make the British people admired throughout the world. She felt that it was a great pity to see so many names of Carrying Place's first settlers dying out.

Mr. A. A. Bartin, B.A., I.P.S., of Brighton proposed the toast to schools. He spoke of how the school goes hand in hand with the church. Carrying Place school is only one in his Inspectorate that has a farm attached to it. This proves that the United Empire Loyalists realized that schools had to be a going concern. Mr. Martin felt that it was necessary for teachers to have fine personalities as they and ministers were responsible for teaching democracy but were not paid the salaries they deserved. Mr. H. B. Yarwood, principal of the school, responded to the toast. He told of the activities of the school in war work and in raising money for the British War Victims' Fund. He also stressed the importance of parents visiting the teachers.

Proposed Toast

Mr. Howard Weese, Reeve of Ameliasburg, proposed the toast to the future of the Carrying Place. He pointed out that the name was older than the Dominion of Canada and spoke of the seriousness of the position we are in today. It is very necessary for each one to do his or her part to bring about victory for our Empire. Mr. Austin Clark, the youngest speaker of the evening, responded to the toast. He felt sure that future boys and girls of Carrying Place would meet any challenge that might be before them and make a notable contribution to Canadian citizenship.

Mr. Blake Young proposed the toast to teachers. He was pleased to have so many return to take part in the re-union and wished teachers past and present health, happiness and prosperity. Responding to the toast Dr. Harry Boyce congratulated those in charge of the re-union and stated that teachers are expected to be on their best behaviour at all times. It is very necessary for parents and teacher to guard the child's health. Teachers have a difficult task to perform and to be successful must always try to improve themselves.

The toast to the ladies was proposed by Mr. J. D. Hepburn, M.L.A., of Picton. Mr. Hepburn referred to the value of ladies to society and of the splendid contribution they made toward making the banquet a success. Miss Elsie Fitchett, one of the teachers of Carrying Place, thanked Mr. Hepburn for his kind remarks and the gentlemen for the enthusiasm in which the toast was received.

Miss Flora MacDonald and Master Neil Taft delighted the audience with solos between the toasts.

The guest speaker, Dr. S. H. Roblin of Picton, was introduced by Mr. Strother, but owing to the lengthy program and the heat, withdrew his remarks.

A dance brought to a conclusion a very enjoyable day for both home-comers, present residents and those from the surrounding neighborhood.

Donations of money were received from a number who were unable to attend and it is expected that Carrying Place old boys' reunion will net approximately two hundred dollars to send the British War Victims' Fund of the Evening Telegram.

BUFFALO BISONS AND MONTREAL WIN TWO GAMES

Newark Bears Unable to Play Due to Rain and Teams Close in

LEAFS LOSE TWICE

(By The Associated Press)

It's supposed to be a good omen for a club to be leading its circuit when the Fourth of July rolls around but there probably isn't much consolation in the thought today for Newark Bears of the International Baseball League.

The Bears have had nothing to do the past two days but watch two other clubs knock spots off their slim margin so the passing of Independence Day only means they have to go through 75 more games fighting off the ever-present threat of Buffalo and Montreal.

Rain forced postponement of a scheduled doubleheader between the Bears and Jersey City yesterday, likewise cancelling a Syracuse-Baltimore twinbill. Buffalo and Montreal took advantage by winning two games each.

The second-place Bisons moved to within three games of Newark, defeating the last-place Toronto Leafs, 12-8 and 2-1. The Royals took over third place from Rochester, beating the Wings 4-3 and 8-2.

A mixture of batting and smart pitching gave Buffalo its double victory over Toronto and a sweep of the four-game series.

A crowd of 12,637, largest to attend Red Wing Park this year, watched Montreal win.

FLAG RAISING TO BE CONDUCTED BY CONSUL GENERAL

Ceremonies for raising the national flag of China which will be flown atop the City Hall staff next week to commemorate China Week, and which will be conducted by Mr. Chao Gar Lim, Chinese Consul General for Canada, have been scheduled for 3 p.m., Monday, July 7th., officials of the local Chinese Federation announced today.

The ceremonies will take place in the market square where a representative gathering of local and other Chinese will meet.

Mayor G. E. Thompson and members of the City Council are expected to attend. The public is invited.

The Ukraine, Russia's great wheat-growing territory, has approximately 30,000,000 population.

Lots of Choice

NEW RECRUITING VOGUE

Soldiering is not just "foot slogging" any more. The new Canadian Active Army has many things to attract the interest of young men who are mechanically minded. To demonstrate this, an Army Convoy containing mobile workshops, is now on tour in Eastern Canada. The picture shows a typically friendly young officer explaining to a prospective recruit the work done by an Army Transport Machine Shop.

AMERICANS RENEW

"That is why we are engaged in a serious, in a mighty, in a unified action in the cause of the defense of the hemisphere and the freedom of the seas. We need not the unity alone, but we need speed and efficiency and toil—and an end to back-biting and to the sabotage which runs far deeper than the blowing up of munitions plants.

"I tell the American people solemnly that the United States will never survive as a happy and prosperous oasis of liberty in the midst of a desert of dictatorship.

"And so it is that when we repeat the great pledge to our country and to our flag it must be our deep conviction that we pledge as well our work, our will and, if it be necessary, our lives".

Never before had there been a mass celebration of July Fourth from one corner of the country to the other. It was arranged by the Office of Civilian Defense, with Mr. Roosevelt speaking from here, Chief Justice Stone from Eses Park, Colo., and the Marine Band in Washington playing the Star Spangled Banner.

By short wave radio Mr. Roosevelt's words went to most of the world. In Great Britain the Stars and Stripes were flown and the holiday was observed. Thousands of members of the American Legion celebrated the day in Toronto.

It is almost simple-minded for Americans to wave the flag and reassert a belief in the cause of freedom, and let it go at that, the President said. In these days he said, "we cannot have freedom with pitchforks and muskets".

New Tyranny Has Arisen.

Americans fought in 1776, he declared, for the principle that government should derive its just powers from the consent of the governed. And for 150 years this cause of freedom swept across the world.

"But now, in our generation—in the last few years," Mr. Roosevelt said, "a new resistance, in the form of several new practices of tyranny, has been making such headway that the fundamentals of 1776 are being struck down abroad and threatened here."

Mr. Roosevelt's manuscript rested on a desk where Woodrow Wilson had prepared a draft of the Covenant of the League of Nations, in the hope that an instrument would be established to settle international disputes amicably and banish war among civilized nations.

Wilson, under whom Mr. Roosevelt served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the first Great War, used the desk on the liner George Washington en route to the Paris peace conference.

Today another President used it in delivering to his countrymen a warning that once more they must be ready to fight for their freedom.

Listening attentively to the President from a near-by sofa was Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who fled from her own land when the Germans overran it. On one side of her was her son, Prince Harald; on the other, Mrs. Alice Huntington of Charleston, S.C., an old friend of the Roosevelt family.

At Princess Martha's feet, seated on the floor, were her daughters, Princesses Astrid and Ragnhild. Also present were Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's mother and his uncle, Frederic Delano.

Text of Address.

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address:

In 1776, on the fourth day of July, the representatives of the several States in Congress assembled, declaring our independence, asserted that a decent respect for the opinion of mankind required that they should declare the reason for their action. In this new crisis, we have a like duty.

In 1776 we waged war in behalf of the great principle that government should derive its just powers from the consent of the governed, in other words, representatives chosen in free election. In the century and a half that followed, this cause of human freedom swept across the world.

But now, in our generation—in the last few years—a new resistance, in the form of several new practices of tyranny, has been making such headway that the fundamentals of 1776 are being struck down abroad and definitely they are threatened here.

It is, indeed, a fallacy, based on no logic, for any American to suggest that the rule of force can defeat human freedom in all the other parts of the world and allow it to survive in the United States alone. But it has been that childlike fantasy itself—that misdirected faith—which has led nation after nation to go about its peaceful tasks, relying on the thought, and even the promise, that it and its life and its government would be allowed to live when the juggernaut of force came that way.

Pitchforks Won't Do

It is simple—I could almost say simple-minded— for us Americans to wave the flag, to reassert our belief in the cause of freedom—and to let it go at that.

Yet, all of us who lie awake at night—all of us who study and study again, know full well that in these days we cannot save freedom with pitchforks and muskets alone, after a dictator combination has gained control of the rest of the world.

We know, too, that we cannot save freedom in our own midst, in our own land, if all around us—our neighbor nations — have lost their freedom.

That is why we are engaged in a serious, in a mighty, in a unified action in the cause of the defense of the hemisphere and the freedom of the seas. We need not the loyalty and unity alone, we need speed and efficiency and toil—and an end to backbiting and an end to the sabotage which runs far deeper than the blowing up of munitions plants.

I tell the American people solemnly that the United States will never survive as a happy and prosperous oasis of liberty surrounded by a cruel desert of dictatorship.

And so it is that when we repeat the great pledge to our country and to our flag, it must be our deep conviction that we pledge as well our work, our will and, if it be necessary, our very lives.

Cardinals Blow Doubleheader To Chicago Cubs and Dodgers In First Place by Full Game

Unveiling of Plaque to Memory of Lou Gehrig Postponed Till Sunday

INDIANS GAIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Perhaps the legend regarding the first-place positions in the major leagues at the close of business July 4 doesn't mean a thing to St. Louis Cardinals.

They blew a doubleheader to Chicago Cubs yesterday and turned the National League lead over exclusively to Brooklyn Dodgers, who were kept in their locker room playing cards by an all-day rain which drenched the New York area on the holiday.

Cubs thrilled a crowd of 39,423 fans at Chicago by coming from behind to take both of yesterday's contests, 6-5 and 5-2. This left the Redbirds a game out of the lead.

The same rain that washed out the Dodgers and New York Giants also prevented the New York Yankee-Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox-Philadelphia Athletics encounters in the American League and held the total attendance for the holiday baseball program down to 134,114.

Unveiling Postponed

The Yankees had expected a crowd of between 60,000 and 70,000 for their doubleheader, which was to have been preceded by the unveiling of a monument to Lou Gehrig. This phase of the program was put over till Sunday.

Cleveland Indians whipped St. Louis Browns twice, 9-8 and 3-2, to reduce the margin between first and second place to two games. The Browns provided plenty of trouble, as they usually do for Cleveland, and routed Bob Feller with an embarrassing lack of respect in the first game.

Chicago White Sox and Detroit Tigers divided the other American League games. Lefty Thornton Lee outpitched Tommy Bridges to win the first game for the six 3-2. Detroit captured the second game 10-6 with Rip Radcliff batting in five runs on a homer and a triple. The largest crowd of the day, 40,068, saw the gmes at Detroit.

Braves Spank Phillies.

In the other National League action Boston spanked the Phillies twice and Cincinnati divided with Pittsburgh. Bucky Walters pitched the Reds to a 6-0 shutout in the first game and Vince DiMagio settled the nightcap 6-4 in favor of the Pirates with a three-run homer off Monte Pearson in the fourth inning.

Manny Salvo pitched six-hit ball for the Braves in breaking his own 10-game losing streak with a 4-3 verdict and Jim Tobin did even better with a two-hit masterpiece in copping the second game 2-0.

Goods Efficiently Handled by 'LaPalm the Mover'

While admitting that newspaper advertising is the most accepted method of putting a business story before the public, in the opinion of Mr. Frederick LaPalm, genial proprietor of "LaPalm the Mover" moving vans, the best advertising obtainable is the favorable recommendation of a satisfied customer. For the past twenty-five years "LaPalm the Mover" has rendered complete satisfaction to hundreds of customers throughout Ontario and Quebec, as well as the Maritime provinces.

Recognized as the largest and most up-to-date fleet of moving vans in Central Ontario, no load of furniture is too large or no distance is too far to be efficiently handled by "LaPalm the Mover." North into Ontario and Quebec mining districts, west to Windsor and east to the Maritimes, LaPalm's are giving rapid efficient moving service.

In a personal interview Mr. LaPalm stated that owing to ministerial changes being made at the present time, this week had been the busiest of the entire trucking season. Ministers throughout the district, who had been moved to different charges, almost invariably contacted LaPalm's to move their household effects, he said, and recommendations of the efficient service rendered was instrumental in their trucks seldom making the return journey empty.

The convenience of the moving van as compared to crating and shipping furniture by rail has been responsible in the vans gaining rapid popularity, according to Mr. LaPalm. Considering that handling is reduced to a minimum and the rapid efficient service given, the van is infinitely more attractive than other methods. And then too, charges compare favorably with other moving methods, the rates being figured on the cubic measurement of the furniture and the distance to be transported.

"Every load insured" is LaPalm's motto; their guarantee of satisfaction rendered. Proof of their popularity is inquiries from distant points and moving orders from outside customers.

For furniture-moving satisfaction with loads insured from door to door, or for modern furniture storage, contact "LaPalm the Mover."

Quinte and C. C. M. Bicycles Stocked By Licence's Sporting Goods Store

"Anything or everything in sporting equipment" is the motto of Mr. Stephen Licence, proprietor of Belleville's oldest store dealing exclusively in sporting goods. "Bicycle" Licence, as Mr. Licence is known to district residents, can supply even the most exacting customer, regardless of his sporting hobby or of the game which he plays.

In addition to a complete line of sporting goods, "Bicycle" Licence is the sole agent for Quinte bicycles—bicycles which have proven their worth in the eighteen years that they have been offered to district cyclists. To afford a more complete range from which prospective cyclists might choose, the ever-popular C.C.M. bicycles are also stocked.

The store is also district distributing centre for General Dry Batteries, batteries which compare favorably with the most expensive money can buy. A guarantee against corrosion of flashlight cases and battery containers is given when new type General Dry Batteries are used.

Although equipped to give complete repair service to bicycles and other sporting equipment, the management of the store has restricted this service to customers purchasing sporting equipment from the store.

Monthly Indexes Of May Retail Sales

Partially as a result of higher prices and partly due to an increase in the amout of goods purchased, customers spent 19 per cent more money in retail stores in May of this year than last, and 5 per cent more than in the month of April. Sales for the first five months of the year stand 17 per cent above the corresponding period of 1940 and 30 p.c. above the average of the first five months of 1939. These figures are based on monthly statements of sales covering a sample number of approximately 6,500 retail stores giving representation to 12 different lines of business and dealing chiefly in food, clothing and household requirements. The general unadjusted index of sales for the twelve trades and on the base, 1935-1939 equals 100 stands at 142.9 for May, 1941, 135.7 for April and 119.9 for May last year.

To what extent the gain in aggregate dollar volume represents higher prices and to what extent it reflects an increase in the volume of goods purchased cannot be accurately measured. The Bureau's retail price index averaged 5 per cent higher for the first five months of 1941 than for the corresponding period of 1940 and 11 per cent above the first five months of 1939. While indexes of prices and dollar sales are not strictly comparable, nevertheless the comparison is sufficiently valid to show that not more than about one third of the increase in dollar sales should be attributed to price movements.

Civil Aviation In Month of March

Air carriers in Canada reported a total of 1,219,311 aircraft miles flown in March as against 1,060,379 miles in February. Revenue passengers carried increased from 10,634 in February to 11,884, revenue freight from 1,394,149 to 1,449,596 pounds and mail from 263,697 to 292,199 pounds.

Comparing data for the first quarters of 1940 and 1941, revenue passengers carried increased from 28,002 to 33,074 or by 18 per cent, revenue freight from 2,549,633 to 4,366,381 pounds or by 72 per cent and mail from 739,082 to 819,101 pounds or by 11 per cent.

REDS CLAIM NAZIS USING WOOD, CANVAS TANKS

Used to Pad Out Armored Columns On Battle Front

Russian Lieutenant Says Only One Out of 20 Tanks in Column Genuine—Column Destroyed.

OFFENSIVE BLOCKED

Moscow, July 7 (AP)—The Red army declared today the German drive had been thrown back by Russian counter-offensives in five sectors of the front and asserted Hitler is using tanks of wood and canvas to pad out his armored columns.

These vehicles are self-propelling and carry machine guns, said an official statement. This discovery was said to have been made by Red army scouts observing a tank column moving up to the front in an unidentified sector.

Using field glasses, the leader of the scouts, Junior Lieut. Sobchenko, had a chance to inspect the column closely on a road of the German rear, according to the official account.

He was amazed, it was said, when he "noticed that the body of one of the tanks unexpectedly gave in under the pressure of the elbow of an officer who leaned against it.

"Careful observation revealed that of 20 tanks constituting the column, only one was a genuine tank.

"The others were wooden structures covered with canvas and mounted on caterpillars. Only the real tank that led the column could fire shells; the others conducted only machine-gun fire."

When night came the column was destroyed, the communique said.

Blocked on Whole Front

Without linking this story with its broad claims of successes, the Red army reported the German offensive had been blocked on the whole front.

On the northern reaches of Russia's heavy fortifications, the Stalin line, a night-long battle was said to have broken up a tank-pointed attempt by motorized infantry to break through the Os-

Germany Claims Armored Division Now Quartered in White Russian Capital of Minsk

NO CONFIRMATION

Berlin, July 7 (AP)—The Germans claimed today they had "broken" the Stalin line, Soviet Russia's main fortifications against invasion from the West, and that Axis forces captured Cernauti, capital of Soviet Bucovina.

The claim that the Stalin line, stretching along Western Russia from the Black Sea to the Gulf of Finland, had been broken was made by D.N.B., German news and propaganda agency, and it followed German reports that Hitler's troops were jockeying for positions with Soviet elite troops for what Berlin said possibly would be a vast battle.

Fortifications 75 Miles Deep

(What the Germans mean by "breaking" the Stalin line was not explained. The fortifications are said to be laid 75 miles deep in places. Today's Russian communique said the German advance had been blocked on all fronts by Soviet counter-attack.)

The war bulletin from Hitler's headquarters focussed attention upon claimed gains in Bucovina and Bessarabia, provinces wrested from Rumania by the Soviet union a year ago.

German-Rumanian forces in Bessarabia are "in progressive advance" after repulsing Red army counter-attacks, the communique said.

By reaching Cernauti, beyond the Carpathians in Northern Bucovina just across the frontier from Russia proper, the communique said Axis forces had reached the upper Dniester River.

Says Bulgaria Buys 8 Destroyers From Italians

Ankara, Turkey, July 6 (Delayed)—Reports which The Associated Press could not verify circulated here today to the effect that Bulgaria had purchased eight Italian destroyers for use in the Black Sea.

Bulgarian officials said they had no knowledge of such a deal, but declared that if the reports were true Italian crews would have to deliver the destroyers and remain aboard for a considerable time because Bulgaria has few trained seamen capable of taking the ships over.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—Thundershowers have occurred in many parts of Ontario and it has become cool in the northern districts. It has been warm in the Prairie Provinces over the week-end with light showers occurring in a few distrcts.

Was One of Party Marking Each of Thousand Islands

Kingston, Ont., July 7—(CP)—George Funnell, 80, owner of the first boat in Gananoque and one of the party to mark each of the Thousand Islands early in the century, died here yesterday. Mailman for the Thousand Islands until his death, he was well-known by thousands of visitors.

He holds a "liar's licence" for fantastic answers to fantastic questions by his passengers, and for 21 years was captain with the Brockville infantry regiment. He is survived by two sons and two daughters.

Canadian Infantry Regiments Seen Marked for First Action

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, July 7 (CP)—As the Canadian Corps enlarges its training program and engages in huge mimic battles that spread over two counties or more, several infantry regiments are consistently given assault tasks which mark them as unity which probably will see battle first when the Canucks clash with the Germans.

In the 1st Division, a Western Canada regiment is one of the favorites of the commanders for a number of tough assignments and on the recent army manoeuvre in Sussex and Kent when 100,000 Canadian and British troops participated, the Westerners played a leading role in the push to the English Channel.

A powerful British force, representing invaders, was hemmed in on the South Downs, a British armored division had softened them up and the West Division was ordered to thrust to the sea during the night.

Used as Shock Troops

An all-western brigade drew the vanguard position and this regiment, recruited in Manitoba and British Columbia, once again was called on to be the snock troops.

Joining the regiment for the 12-mile march over the downs to the beaches, I saw first hand how these rugged Canucks stood up to their most difficult manoeuvre. Wearied by two days of almost constant activity, with only snatches of sleep, troops were footsore and tired, but I never heard any serious grumbling.

They climbed an escarpment as steep as the sides of Grouse Mountain near Vancouver, climbed through barbed wire defences, skirmished with opposition and wound up the attack at noon by defeating a stronghold on a farm where "enemy" Bren gun carriers, marked with Swastikas and German slogans failed to break the Canadian offensive.

The British opposition tried every trick in their bag to wreck Canadian plans. I found this out when I was taken prisoner and forced to stay with the Tommies till the fight was over.

ITALIAN CRUISER, 3 SUPPLY SHIPS SUNK BY BRITISH

9,000-Ton Merchant Cruiser Listed as Crippled, While Vichy Auxiliary Vessel Reported Sunk.

ALL IN MEDITERRANIAN

London, July 7—(CP)—A new spurt in British submarine warfare in the Mediterranean resulted in the sinking of an Italian cruiser, thought to be the 10,000-ton Gorizia, and three Axis supply ships totalling more than 15,000 tons, the Admiralty reported in a week-end communique.

A fourth Italian ship, a 9,000-ton merchant cruiser, was listed as crippled by a torpedo, while an auxiliary vessel of the Vichy government was authoritatively reported to have been sunk by British aircraft.

The Gorizia was one of four cruisers of the Zara class launched in 1930 and 1931. The Zara, Fiume and Pola are believed to have been sunk March 28 in the battle of Matapan, off southern Greece. Sinking of the one thought to be the Gorizia took place on June 29, the Admiralty said, when a submarine attacked the ship and four destroyers.

Cruisers of the Zara class carried normal complements of 705 men and were armed with eight 8-inch guns, twelve 3.9-inch guns and 18 anti-aircraft pieces.

London, July 7.—(CP)—Sir Gerald Campbell, director of the British Information Service in the United States, said today that service would try to win "the battle of headlines' in the United States without campaigning to bring America into the war.

The issue, he said, is keep Americans informed, especially as to what Britain is doing with the tools of war she has asked for and is receiving.

NORTHBROOK FIRE BURNS 5 HOUSES, TWO GARAGES

Contents All Destroyed and Damage Estimated at $25,000

WATER SHORTAGE

Tweed, July 7 (Special)—Smouldering ruins of five houses and two garages were smoking testimony today of a disastrous fire that razed half of the village of Northbrook yesterday afternoon. Loss is estimated at $25,000. Most of the contents of the buildings were destroyed.

Heroic efforts on the part of villagers and scores of Canadian and American tourists saved the entire village from destruction. The firefighters were handicapped with no up-to-date fire equipment and a marked shortage of water. Hastily formed bucket brigades secured water from nearby wells and fought a successful fight in warding off the fire threat.

The blaze started in the home of Magistrate John L. Lloyd and swept northward along the village street. According to the magistrate, the fire started from defective electric wiring. He and Mrs. Lloyd were sitting on the lawn in front of their home when a dull thud was plainly audible. Rushing to the house the official was met with a sheet of flame and smoke originating from a dozen places.

Official Records Burned

All Magistrate Lloyd's official records with the exception of one book, which contains magisterial data for the month of June, were destroyed. He was unable to salvage other valuable documents and records.

Within a few seconds the house was a blazing mass with flames licking at the adjacent home of Edward Morley, district game overseer. Neighbors rushed to the scene with buckets of water, but despite their efforts the homes of Osborne

221 PASSENGERS ON RAPIDS PRINCE TAKEN TO SHORE

Spent Night on Board When Boat Ran Aground Shooting Lachine Rapids

NO ONE INJURED

BY ALAN DUCKETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lachine, Que., July 7.—(CP)—Speaking lightly of a night spent amid the turbulent Lachine Rapids, all 221 passengers from the grounded pleasure steamer Rapids Prince were brought ashore by motorboat shortly afternoon today.

A 10-passenger motorboat that made its way through tricky currents of the St. Lawrence River near the Rapids, docked at 12.30 p.m. with its last load of passengers and baggage from the stranded ship. At the same time, preparations were underway for an attempt to free the veteran river ship that ran aground on a shoal last night.

Typical of the reaction of the passengers was that of Kenneth Gall of Zanesville, Ohio, one of about 60 United States tourists aboard the vessel.

"When we realized we were there for the night everybody made the best of it", he said. "I was sitting near the pilot house when we struck. I am sure the fast thinking of the Captain (Cap. Preston J. Cherry of Kingston, Ont.) and the pilot prevented a more serious result. There was no nervousness among the passengers".

The Rapids Prince, a veteran of the "shoot the rapids" cruise in charge of a veteran Captain, ran aground as she made her way through the rapids toward Montreal after leaving Prescott yesterday. It was believed a rudder chain had broken, sending the ship off her course.

Three passengers had been removed from the Prince last night, but officials of Canada Steamships Lines decided that further rescue work would be dangerous in the

AUSTRALIANS WADE THRU RIVER, BREAK LINE OPEN

Break French Damour Line Wide Open by Wedge Outflanking Main Body of Defenders

DEMIR KAPOU TAKEN

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Australian Forces Before Beirut, Lebanon, July 6 (Delayed)—Australian infantry, supported by some of the heaviest land, air and sea bombardments in this Syrian war, broke through the main defences of the Damour line nine miles south of Beirut tonight.

(A Jerusalem dispatch Sunday night said the Australians had captured the village of El Boum in the thrust north of the Damour River.)

The Australians waded across the Damour River at four points before dawn. After 15 hours of fierce fighting on difficult terrain, they broke the French line wide open by a wedge which outflanked the main body of the Vichy defenders entrenched in the town of Damour.

Damour was still in French hands and the road leading from it to Beirut was open, but both were under the menace of fire from Australians to the west.

German Losses In Dead, Wounded Nearly 1,000,000 Says Vice Commissar

Moscow, July 7—(AP)—S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of Foreign Affairs, declared today Germany had lost nearly 1,000,000 men in dead and wounded in her now 16-day-old attack upon Russia.

As spokesman for the Soviet Union, he estimated German casualties in the first 12 days of the attack at 700,000 and said the average daily loss by the Germans was 60,000.

Lozovsky said he was unable to give the ratio of Russian losses, but added that the battles were growing in fierceness and that Russia felt no lack of manpower, having in that respect three times Germany's resources.

War's Fifth Year Opens, Gen Chiang May Take Offensive

Chungking, July 7.—(AP)—The Chinese-Japanese war went into its fifth year today with a virtual stalemate along the 2,800-mile front, where the armies of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek were reported preparing for an attempt to seize the offensive.

The Chinese say they have 5,000,000 soldiers in the field and 10,000,000 more in reserve or in training, while Japan's position, as seen through Chinese eyes, is unchanged—"a million Japanese troops bogged down in the Chinese quagmire".

Science Hunts for Hay Fever Cure As Doctor Finds Disease in Fox Terrier

By HOWARD W. BLAKSLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, July 7 (AP)—All hay fever victims owe two bows to Mitzie, a fox terrier living in Minneapolis:

One curtsey of sympathy, because Mitzie has human hay fever, the first animal ever to show a proved human case.

One bow of gratitude, for Mitzie makes it possible for science to use animals to hunt for the hay fever cure.

Mitzie's case, reported by Dr. F. W. Wittich of Minneapolis. It developed some important discoveries about allergy.

Mitzie's trouble was ordinary ragweed pollen. Each ragweed season in Minneapolis, for years, she sneezed, cried tears, rubbed her nose like a child. She itched all over, too.

Her case was only the prelude to important discoveries. Hay fever was found in another female, and then in a male. A little of allergic puppies is expected soon.

These animals, with known hereditary allergies exactly like the human kind, are expected to make possible important tests. One is the search for a hay fever cure.

Reports of other animal allergies are coming in. One is a horse which breaks out in hives (human type) if given one chocolate drop.

Believe Warships Docked at Brest Battered to Junk

Newspapers in London Demanding More Aggressive Action in Matter of Bombing Germany.

ADVISE INVASION

London, July 7 (CP)—British bombers raided German-held France today in two heavy attacks, continuing without a let-up the overnight assault which extended from the docks at Brest to the Turh Valley.

Watchers on the southeast coast saw a morning armada sweep over, heard distant bomb explosions and estimated many tons of projectiles were dropped upon northern France.

In the afternoon, they saw new flights sweep across the glittering Channel and heard the sharp crash of anti-aircraft fire as the Germans put up a fierce barrage between Boulogne and Calais.

One German plane was reported over northern England, the first daylight raider in weeks. Liverpool ground defences went into action. The plane was believed on a weather reconnaissance flight.

The morning Royal Air Force flight returned from the continent in a great procession, some flying singly, but many in formation.

A burst of machine-gun fire clattered out of the Channel haze, and R.A.F. rescue launches sped in the direction of the shooting. Planes droned over the Channel an hour.

Terrific Explosions Heard

Throughout the afternoon, terrific explosions and heavy gunfire reverberated across the Channel from Northern France as bombers and fighters crossed and recrossed.

An authoritative announcement said that in the morning sweep heavy bombers attacked an aircraft works at Meaulte, near Albert, in northern France, and struck its buildings with heavy explosives and incendiary bombs which started a number of fires.

Escorting R.A.F. fighters were declared to have shot down three German fighters and two British fighers were acknowledged lost, though both their pilots were saved.

Fifty Fires Counted

Fifty fires were counted in Munster as a result of the nocturnal raids, the Air Ministry News Service said.

An enormous fire burned in the railway yards there, the service declared, and sheds were destroyed by terrific explosions.

A huge factory building blazed up in Dortmund. Docks also were set ablaze.

A burning warehouse in Holland lit up a German supply ship in the Zuider Zee, enabling a bomber to score a direct hit on the vessel, the service said. At Brest a bomber swooped down to a 50-foot level and hit the stern of a 10,000-ton liner squarely with a powerful bomb.

A great weight of high explosives and incenditary bombs caused great damage in industrial districts of the Ruhr and Rhineland, especially at Dortmund. Objectives in Munster

Russian Guides Flaming Plane into Nazi Gas Trucks

Moscow, July 2—A Russian statement reported tonight that a Soviet pilot crashed his flaming plane into German gasoline tank trucks in an explosive suicide climax to an encounter at the front.

A shell from a German anti-aircraft gun was said to have hit the gasoline tank of the Russian plane, piloted by Captain Gastelo, commander of an air squadron.

"The fearless commander piloted his plane, enveloped in flames, into a concentration of enemy motor cars and fuel tank cars," the account said. "Dozens of German cars and tank cars exploded, together with the hero's plane."

ANCIENT BORDER DISPUTE FLAMES INTO FIGHTING

Ecuador Charges Peru With Political and Military Aggression

GARRISON BATTLES

Quito, Ecuador, July 7 (AP)—Ecuador charged Peru with political and military aggression today folliwing a week-end of bombing raids and border fighting growing from a century-old frontier dispute.

Steadily-mounting reports from the south told of two days of sporadic garrison battles, artillery shelling of frontier towns by Peruvian troops, and Peruvian bomb raids on Ecualor's military outposts.

After a session of President Arroyo Del Rio's cabinet last night, the ministry of defence issued a communique blaming the outbreak on a penetration of Ecuadorean territory by Peruvian soldiers and civilians.

Cabinet Meets

(The Peruvian cabinet also met for several hours during the night. One Peruvian source was quoted as saying Eucador was trying anew to win a favorable solution to her territorial claims by dragging Peru into mediation which previously had stalled.)

Present at the meeting of Ecuadorean government officials were diplomatic representatives of the United States, Brazil and Argentina, which earlier this year indicated they would be willing to help in arbitrating a settlement of the border dispute dating back to vague frontier mapping early in the 19th. Century.

Several Eucadorean casualties were acknowledged in the fighting. Peruvian artillery shelled frontier positions, and four Peruvian planes bombed Balzalto, Guabillo and Chacras, where a church, military barracks and dwelling were destroyed, a communique said.

Peru Blames Ecuador

Lima, Peru, July 7 (AP)—Peru officially blamed Ecuador today for a wee-enk outbreak of border fighting in which the foreign office said Eucadorean troops were repulsed in simultaneous attacks against Peruvian outposts.

The foreign office reported Peruvian military authorities "have taken adequate steps to safeguard our territorial integrity."

It declared that Ecuadorean troops struck simultaneously at Peruvian posts at Aguas Verdes, La

CUPID NOT BUSY IN MONTH OF JUNE

While Dan Cupid may have broken records in many other cities during the merry month of June, but the little guy with the bow and arrbw had just an ordinary target practise here. Thirty-eight couples paraded down the aisle in Belleville, an ordinary number insofar as other years are concerned.

Fifty-nine births, however, were registered at the city hall, thirty-five of which were male babies.

Deaths amounted to twenty, with thirteen being those of males.

GRADUAL UPTREND IN TOURIST TRADE

Indicative of the gradual uptrend in American tourist business in the city and district, a substantial increase in American funds is reported in various bank branches of the district.

While the majority of the funds is coming from hotels and shops, a large amount is also derived from tourists exchanging their currency for Canadian funds.

One city bank official reported today that the amount taken in thus far is seven or eight times as much as that taken in the corresponding period last year.

The amount is steadily increasing, another banker stated, and if present rises continue, a near record will be established.

MUCH-WELCOMED SHOWER IN CITY

Sunday night's thunder and lightning storm which heralded a much-welcomed shower in the immediate district of Belleville was only a local storm insofar as the rain was concerned, it was revealed this morning by residents from the north of the city.

Threatening skies on Sunday afternoon gave indications that a storm was passing to the south of Belleville but motorists returning from the Sandbanks and other holiday resorts in Prince Edward County stated that it was not until seven o'clock that the district was visited by a light shower. Sunday night's shower, sweeping in from the northwest visited only a narrow district and although quite heavy, lasted only a few minutes. There was no rain at Foxboro, the shower having swept through farther south.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS BUSY WEEKEND

Grass fires breaking out at the Catholic picnic grounds, west of the city on Saturday afternoon were responsible for the Belleville Fire Department making two runs to that district, firemen engaging in several minutes' work before the trouble was brought under control. These two blazes, together with two rubbish fires and a blazing awning at the Model Ladies' Wear store on Front Street, resulted in the busiest week-end the brigade has had in several weeks.

On Saturday evening firemen were called to an Albert Street address where a bonfire was reported out of control, while on Sunday evening the awning of the Model Ladies' Wear store was set blazing, presumably by a cigarette being carelessly tossed by a passing pedestrian. A rubbish fire at the College Street dump was responsible for the fifth alarm of the week-end. In every case, however, the blazes were extinguished before any material damage resulted.

Rotary Carnival Attracts Large Crowds

Undeniably excellent in their entertainment qualities, the shows and attractions forming the major part of the Rotary Club Karnival now running in Victoria Park continue to draw large crowds. Saturday night saw another gala gathering thronging the area where the Karnival is located, and indications point to similar attendances tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday.

The Karnival will close its doors on Wednesday night when the feature attraction will be the drawing for "Rotary Ann", dollar-covered dolly. The lucky winner will be announced a few minutes after eleven o'clock when the drawing for the ticket will be made.

The major attractions, although the entire Karnival is one of outstanding features, include the many rides which children and grownups of the city and district have been enjoying since the Karnival opened on Saturday. The youngsters are taking keen delight in manipulating the miniature automobiles on the oval track, and not a few oldsters have availed themselves of the opportunity of enjoying themselves in the tiny cars. For the tiny folk the merry-go-rounds are proving sources of enjoyment and both the "horse" and auto rides have been thronged with laughing carefree youngsters.

The aerial rides and the thrilling "Ridee-o" are also being well patronized and a fun-seeking crowd are combining enjoyment and clean entertainment with the comparative coolness of the park on these hot nights.

Many beautiful prizes, not to mention boxes of confectionery have found their way into the hands and homes of hundreds of winners through the medium of the various games and wheels of chance. A bevy of white mice which run for food-filled holes on a table is an attractive game while the ever-popular Bingo is as usual, attracting large crowds of lovers of this pastime.

The show is clean and wholesome, and the Rotary Club extends an invitation to all to attend their Karnival.

Tourist Traffic Heaviest in Years Over the Weekend

The influx of American tourists reached a new peak over the Fourth of July Independence Day holiday week-end in Ontario and the Belleville district highways shared in the increase number of American motor vehicles to traverse provincial highways.

Sergeant Sid Hunter in charge of the Motorcycle Patrol of the O.P.P., stated today that the heaviest traffic ever seen on district highways was in evidence over the week-end. "Fortunately no serious accidents occurred in this area, but the traffic was the heaviest I've seen", stated Sergeant Hunter as he added that the American tourist motorists actually out-numbered Canadian drivers in the matter of automobiles on the open highways.

Two Accidents

While one of the heaviest streams of traffic passed through the city over the week-end, only two accidents marred an otherwire perfect holiday. Mrs. Hazel Leach of Kingston, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning suffering from severe concussion and injuries sustained when an American tourist is alleged to have driven his car into one owned by the injured woman about seven miles west of the city on Highway No. 2.

Five members of the R.C.A.F. base at Trenton were pushing their car along the highway owing to the lack of gasoline when the American tourist's car sideswiped the gasless vehicle and careened into Mrs. Leach's oncoming motor car knocking the latter vehicle into the ditch, where the driver sustained her injuries.

She was taken to the hospital, where her hurts were attended by Dr. R. Gibson.

When Ernest Elmey failed to notice a heavy transport following his light truck along No. 2 highway about 5.30 a.m. yesterday, he attempted to make a left hand turn across the highway and the resulting collision tore the side from his truck and snapped off a nearby telephone pole. The transport was slightly damaged. No one was hurt, Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch stated after investigation.

Hitlerism 'Foul And Evil Spirit From Hell Itself'

Pastor Forsgren Says Christian Church Has Task to Perform — Denounces Pacifism and Says Major Operation of Military Victory Over Forces of Aggression Needed

"How any Christian can be so narrow-minded as to think that they do not need to do anything about the momentous struggle engaging this Empire and its Allies today is more than I can understand," said Pastor Bertil Forsgren in his closing address to an audience which nearly filled the City Hall auditorium last evening. He strongly denounced pacifism, saying there have been more than 20 years to preach and practice that teaching and that it has utterly failed. Now the world is dreadfully sick, and the need demands a major operation of a military victory over the forces of aggression, and that it would be criminal and fatal to withhold the knife. The speaker emphatically declared, that every pacifist, even if a sincere Christian, by his pacifistic efforts aids the aggressor's war machine, and to that extent hinders the Empire's war effort.

"I know the Christian Church has a task to perform," he went on, "or else God would have taken it out of the world." He spoke of three things that constitute the individual Christian's duty now, "First, be a loyal citizen of the British Empire and do not breathe out destructive criticism and gossip. Whenever I meet people like that, I wish they could be shipped to Nazi Germany. Then they would appreciate our privileges under the Union Jack. Secondly, find your job to help, and then do it wholeheartedly, sacrificially and uncompromisingly. Thirdly, while at it, seek to win as many as you can for Jesus Christ." The speaker stressed that hatred should not have any part in the Christian's prosecution of the war effort, and that military victories won on hatred alone will not last.

Mr. Forsgren told of a personal interview with one of Hitler's closest confidants, who was associated with the Nazi leader from the earliest days. From this interview, the speaker cited many features of the inner character of Nazism, proving that Hitlerism is a foul and evil spirit from hell itself, and that to defeat it we must mobilize greater spiritual resources. "Notice I said Hitlerism, not Hitler. We can kill Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Himmler, every German soldier, and still we would not have defeated Hitlerism. It is the foul, evil spirit of the anti-Christ that has taken possession of the majority of the German people.

He told his audience that there is a Christian fifth column in Germany, the unyielding spirit of genuine Christian experience. "We must save and encourage that spirit, by clasping hands with it across the seas in prayer, and in the providence of God's will, it will prove a great factor in the overthrow of Hitlerism."

Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck, on behalf of Evangel Temple congregation, which brought Mr. Forsgren to the city for the series of religious patriotic meetings, expressed his thanks to all who had a part in making these services a success. Rev. D. R. Chatreau of Emmanuel Church led in prayer. The entire offering of the evening was for the Toronto Telegram British War Victims' Fund amounting to $25.20. Before delivering his sermon, Pastor Forsgren sang one of his own compositions. Pastor Kulbeck pronounced the benediction, and the meeting was closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

Japan Adopts Wait and See Policy in War

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Word that Japan is considering an extension of her territorial waters which would cut off the Russian port of Vladivostok from United States war supplies may be taken as an indication that the Tokyo Government is leaning toward active steps to aid Germany .

It seems a fair deduction, however, that the essence of Japan's undisclosed policy decision with regard to the Nazi-Soviet war can be stated in three words, "wait and see."

For the moment, at least, her policy is to avoid flaunting directly in the faces of her Axis mates in Berlin and Rome a flat refusal to implement her tripartite pact with action against Russia. It was that which led Tokyo statesmen to the novel procedure of reaching a grave decision—and then putting it into cold storage, undisclosed.

Know More Than Huns.

Presumably Japan intends to do nothing of major importance for the present. One reason may be that Tokyo knows much more about Soviet resources and resourcefulness than does Berlin. Japan has been dealing with Moscow for a long time and is quite well aware that even if Germany wrests control of White Russia, the Ukraine and the Leningrad region, Russia still will have sufficient manpower and war industry resources cast of the Urals to make her a ponderous factor in the Far East.

Nor can Tokyo doubt that the Axis-Soviet war will increase Japanese difficulties in China. It surely has removed the last possibility of serious friction between Chinese nationalists and the powerful Chinese Communist elements.

There was a time when Tokyo agents sought hopefully to promote that discord. Their dream of internal disintegration in China is now shattered.

There are reasons to doubt that Japan will move to restrict the usefulness of Vladivostok unless she is ready to fight Russia's Far Eastern forces.

A Nazi-Finn attempt already is under way to squeeze Russia out of her only all-year sea outlet into the Atlantic at Murmansk. In addition, Axis forces are threatening her approaches to the Mediterranean via the Black Sea. If Red forces are driven out of both the Murmansk area and the Ukraine, whatever remains of Russia in Soviet hands will have only Far Eastern sea outlets to the world.

Silhouette of U.S. Fleet.

With Vladivostok in effect blockaded, Japan's costly puppet regime in Manchuria would become an inviting Russian objective. Its restitution to China from which Japan took it by force would offer reasonable excuse for a Russian offensive that might receive the blessings of London and Washington. There is a powerful and self-sustained Russian army in Siberia not engaged or apt to be engaged in the western war.

Fence-sitting is neither a glorious nor comfortable occupation for politicians, statesmen or nations; but there are times when no other course seems open.

Japan is at that point now, for in addition to Russia, Tokyo must always keep one policy-making eye trained on the United States fleet in the Pacific.

Some years ago, when Washington-Tokyo relations were less strained than now, a highly-placed authority in Washington, still a dominant figure in foreign policy-making, told this writer of a hope he had. It was that some day, with the upbuilding of the navy, foreign diplomats always would see over the shoulders of American conferees the silhouette of the American fleet.

The most thrilling love story ever brought to the screen!

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

A physician with a patient suffering with intense pain in the heart was unable to stop the pain even with powerful drugs. The patient was so weak that operation to cut the nerve at its root was considered too dangerous. He decided, therefore, to inject part of root of the nerve with alcohol and the patient, made free of pain, became much stronger physically.

In most cases of severe heart pain, rest in bed for 6 or 8 weeks, and resting much of the time for a few more weeks, gives complete relief from pain. In fact, the pain may never return. The fact that where the pain cannot be controlled by drugs, it may, in many cases, be relieved by alcohol injections into the root of the nerve, is good news to these heart patients.

Dr. J. C. White in 'Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics', states that he and his associates performed 85 paravertebral (alongside the spine) alcohol injections of the upper spinal roots and heart nerve on 63 patients suffering from pain which drugs did not relieve; 32 experienced complete or nearly complete relief from pain; 19 had their severe attacks reduced to a mild form which could be controlled by drugs; 5 had unsatisfactory results; and the remainder died before two weeks had passed.

"This procedure carries little risks in experienced hands with results only slightly poorer than surgical operations on these roots".

Following an effective injection with alcohol relief is usually permanent and patients still get a warning signal if pain is about to occur and can get off their feet and prevent the attack of pain.

On what kind of case should this alcohol injection into the root of the heart nerve be used? Alcohol injection should be reserved for the patient with intolerable pain, who is a poor risk anyway. The severer the pain and the less chance the patient has to withstand operation by surgery, the more suitable is the patient. When the patient can withstand operation, operation is considered a better method than the alcohol injection because operation is not followed by pain between the ribs, as is often the case followed alcohol injection.

"The patient must, therefore, be told that there is about eight chances in ten that he will get relief from his heart pain, but he is likely to suffer with intercostal neuritis—pain between ribs.

"Injection of alcohol, however, cannot be expected to give satisfactory results except in the hands of one who has made a special study of the method".

2 PLANE CRASHES CLAIM 4 LIVES

Five Other Violent Deaths in Ontario Reported Over Weekend

(By the Canadian Press)

Plane crashes accounted for four of nine violent deaths reported in Ontario during the week-end.

Pilot Officer Harold Bjorenstad, 23, and Observer John Anderson, 21, both of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, crashed to their deaths Saturday when their plane went into a spin at 5,000 feet and plummeted to earth. The crash occurred at Clarkson, about 20 miles west of Toronto.

Two unidentified members of the Royal Australian Air Force lost their lives Sunday in an almost identical crash. Their plane was seen to suddenly spurt smoke and then nose-dived into the ground at Decew Falls, three miles south of St. Catharines. Pilot of the plane, on a routine flight from No. 1 Gunnery and Bombing School at Jarvis, Ont., bailed out and suffered shock, cuts and bruises on landing. He was Pilot Officer Harold Moore whose home was believed to be at Port Dover, Ont.

Crew of Nazi Ship Interned in Canada

Its fate was unknown until the postcards came from Canada.

Britain Develops New "Killer" Tank

London, July 7 (CP)—Britain has a new 16-ton "killer" tank which, the Minister of Supply said yesterday, is powerful enough to destroy any machine it is likely to encounter.

It is armed with a Besa gun and a cannon firing a two-pound shell, capable of piercing any tank "as yet met in any German armored formation," the Ministry said, and carries a crew of three at a 15-an-hour speed.

The Ministry said that "heavier, deadlier and harder-hitting vehicles" are being designed.

Woman Hurls Rock Into Tank Turret In 'Invasion' Test

London, July 7 (CP)—Crewmen of an "invading" tank in an English village during army manoeuvres were surprised when the wife of an air raid warden hurled a rock into the open turret.

"Well, I'm fighting invaders," was the retort.

An umpire, summoned, ruled the tank had been "destroyed."

ANTHONY EDEN'S SPEECH

Foreign Secretary Eden made a point the other day when he declared that Britain will fight until Hitler and all he stands for are crushed and that the extension of the war by the Nazi attack on Russia is not to be taken as a suggestion for relaxation but as an example of the insatiable appetite of the Germans. This he said should cause nations to redouble their efforts against the Germans.

Mr. Eden referred to Hess's flight to Scotland and said there was sign that some among the German people are beginning to see perils ahead and the resultant confusion of thought finds expression in a strange variety of ways, such as the parachute descent of the deputy fuehrer. He said there would doubtless be stranger happenings than that before "we are through with the men who now rule Germany."

But Britain, as Captain Eden says, will in no way negotiate with Hitler at any time on any subject because experience has taught the people that the foundations of peace are constant vigilance and sufficient armed strength to strike down any possible aggression.

In his words "We have but one aim—to break the power of the tyrant Hitler so that nations may be free to work together to build a safer, saner and happier world in security and at peace." Hitler has shown that no reliance can be placed on this wrecker of most solemn pledges Hitler uses but to deceive. Britain will be adamant against Hitlerism to the end of Hitlerism.

CAUTION FOR BATHERS

When so many persons are taking to the waters in the heat of the season, it is a time when caution should be advised lest bathers take too great risk. There are those who cannot swim and yet go in bathing, there are those who can swim well or to a degree and take chances in the thrill of the art of swimming. There are those who take real chances in even shallow water, they dive in water of insufficient depth or in places where there are projecting rocks or sunken logs. There are those who, in order to escape the heat which at times becomes very oppressive, take to streams, the nature of whose bottom they do not know. This is especially dangerous.

Hamilton Spectator warns particularly against diving in water which is too shallow. One would think that anyone would know that it is dangerous to dive into water of which the depth is not known but such actions are not unknown. The Spectator tells of three youths who are in hospital in Toronto and may suffer long invalidism for diving in water they mistakenly believed was of sufficient depth, but which proved to be no more than two or three feet deep.

Depth of water is deceiving from a height of even a few feet and there is the danger of obstructions, logs or stones. It is advised that the swimmer immerse himself slowly before doing any diving and before plunging in headforemost. Water may be opaque and so give a semblance of depth which is not real.

The Spectator goes to particular care to point out that the young men in hospital have expressed a wish that swimmers and divers be told of the danger of taking this risk and to point out that the doctors state that in such a dive the head bears a violent impact but possibly the most serious damage is done to the top of the spinal column. There is the danger of severing the spinal cord and causing paralysis.

It is to be hoped that no bather or swimmer will take this grave risk, that all will take time to be careful and investigate before plunging or being lured to dive into water where lurks peril.

Sometimes the good swimmer is lost through overconfidence and through taking too great chances. There are dangers for both those who can swim and those who cannot.

Caution is well worth while for it may mean life or saving one from a period of suffering or even invalidism as in the case of those who in diving misjudge the depth and suffer injury in shallow water. Bathing is a natural form of play and exercise. It demands the use of ordinary precautions. No one in the excitement of play should take risks.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

VENI, VIDI, VICI

("United we can guide the world to peace and happiness. Our hearts are joined and our pulses beat as one."—Winston Churchill.)

Toronto—This city submitted "quietly" over the weekend to the "invaders" from south of the border. The colorful American Legion spearheaded its attacks from many points. They came in all the gaudiness of their trappings. They came armed not with sinister weapons of death, of destruction and terror. They came armed to the teeth with friendliness, good cheer and that camaraderie born when men face the hell of modern war together.

They came with pageantry of colorful uniforms, silken banners and blaring trumpets. It could have been a picture taken from old medieval times, when knights on prancing chargers cavorted through city and town and received the homage of veiled ladies from the quietness of shaded balconies and lofty towers.

And Toronto threw wide her generous arms and gathered the Legionnaires to her welcoming bosom.

Colorful Parades

The "Yanks" were here. They paraded in all the pageantry-loving showmanship that is characteristic of the holidaying American. In a triumphal parade they moved through the city streets where hundreds of silken banners, Old Glorys, and Union Jacks mingled and intermingled in the breeze. Their "panzer" divisions moved gaily through the city, headed not by grim, fierce-visaged, dictator lieutenants, but by trim, shortskirted drum majorettes.

Mingling in the parade at intermittent periods and contrasting with the gaudy uniforms of the Legionnaires, were detachments of the Canadian Corps, some in their colored blazers and white flannels, others their divisional berets and medals.

One Legion unit wore dazzling chrome helmets; others were bedecked in swanky shakos, yet more were in trim forage caps, all preceded by the jaunty baton-twirling majorettes.

Take Personal Charge

Then they took personal charge of the city. There was no doubt in the minds of any of the local sons that the "Yanks" were here. They broke into small groups and "Gestapoed" stores, hotels, shops and offices. The city was their's and they were determined to "give the town the "once-over."

They did. They wandered wherever the spirit of the moment took them. Bandsmen retained their instruments and many a Toronto belle was serenaded by a shining knight from south of the border.

And they didn't forget the 4th of July atmosphere. Thousands of fire-crackers staccatoed on street corners, in shops and various other places. Highlighting the scene was a gaudy orange-colored relic of the early automobile age, which paraded through the main thoroughfares clanging a locomotive bell and screeching an ear-splitting siren.

Later they "consolidated their positions in High Park." But a speedy counter attack by Canadian troops soon dislodged them and they fell back goodnaturedly, after losing several "prisoners" and a number of strategic positions and "war material." "Supplies" wer confiscated, but later shared by "prisoner" and "captor."

Democracy At Its Best

The "invasion" was another perfect exemplification of how two peace-loving peoples can live side by side in peace and amity, friendship and brotherhood. It once again demonstrated that Canada and the United States, divided by a border upon which bristles not a gun, are examples to a world torn by hate, greed and aggression. It proved that an outthrust hand is more conducive to the peace and happiness of mankind than an outthrust bayonet. Here we have the roar of welcoming cheers, not the reverberating thunder of invading cannon. Here we have the gesture of good-will, not the Gestapo. Here we have little children not cringing in terror beside a frightened mother, but smiling kiddies perched high on the shoulder of a smiling "invader."

The American Legion convention is something that Hitler and Mussolini and their satellites would never understand.

The Unconfused Issue

New York, July 7.—"I would rather," said the ineffable Mr. Lindbergh, "see my country ally herself with England, or even with Germany with all her faults, than with the cruelty, the godlessness and the barbarism that exist in Soviet Russia."

I have seldom read more insincere words. What Mr. Lindbergh would "rather" see us do he made very clear way back last summer. He would "rather" see us make a non-aggression pact with a victorious Germany. What he advocated in Chicago last summer was that we recognize the fact that Germany was going to win the war, and then make a treaty with the Nazis. He said that without such a treaty "with the dominant power of Europe" there would be no possibility of peace.

Now, what it would be interesting to hear from Mr. Lindbergh is whether, after the attack on Russia, he still things that a treaty with Hitler is a treaty.

It is very curious that no word of condemnation of Russia passed Mr. Lindbergh's lips as long as Russia was, in effect, an ally of Germany. On the contrary, Mrs. Lindbergh assured us that both Communism and Nazism were "waves of the future."

Wholeheartedly and wholehoggedly, both Lindberghs swallowed the then official Nazi version that this war was against British imperialism, and that the future lay with the "Socialist" States. Nor did godlessness bother either of them.

Mrs. Lindbergh, in her book, put Christianity and capitalism in the same paragraph as two things she was no longer quite sure about.

"The longer this war in Europe continues, the more confused the issues become," said Mr. Lindbergh.

Lindbergh Confused

The issues are confusing to Mr. Lindbergh because he has been following the Nazi Party line in interpreting the war. That certainly makes things confusing. Because Hitler's war was first to free and unite Germans, then against bolshevism, then against plutodemocracy, then against the British conception of the gentleman, then against the division of Europe and the desruction of unity, then for "freeing" such little States as Slovakia and Croatia, and now against everything. Hitler has fought for nationalism and against nationalism, for socialism and against socialism, for Europe and against Europe.

But the British viewpoint has not been in the least confusing. Neville Chamberlain stated it at the outbreak of the war. "If I should think that one man wished to dominate the world, I should think he would have to be stopped."

Nobody is fighting Nazism. As a philosophy of life for Germans, if the Germans like it, why it's okay with the rest of us. What the world has been fighting has been Nazism's aggression against the world. The world did not go to war against Communism because Stalin kept his armies at home. He kept them home, that is to say, until Hitler began moving his.

This is a war for democracy only insofar as democracy recognizes the rights of peoples to freedom and independence, and to use their labor and the soil on which they live for building up their own lives. Were the Russian government three times as bad as it is, Hitler would not be justified in conquering Russia. Were the German Government even worse than it is, nobody would be justified in attacking Germany and trying to enslave her people. Nobody did attack Germany. Germany attacked others. This war is to stop her from doing so.

No Confusion About the Issue

That's the issue. And there is nothing confusing about it. It is not confusing that Hitler should attack rich, middle-class democracies, like Holland or poor authoritarian states like Greece or weak constitutional monarchies like Yugoslavia, or powerful empires like France and Britain, or the Soviet Union.

Hitler is not waging a war for an ideology. He is waging an ideology for a war. He does not let his ideology determine his policy. His policy determines his ideology. He is neither crusading against money nor against bolshevism. He is crusading for money, resources and power against everybody. He doesn't pick his victims because of their ideas, but because of their strategical positions and their resources.

The world, as Mr. Lindbergh ought to know, is round. If Hitler moves far enough east he ends up on the frontier of Alaska, where Russia now is, and if he moves far enough west, he ends up in the Portugese islands, which are the nearest points in the Atlantic to South America.

Since Russia stands in the way of one course and Britain in the way of the other, we are pro-Russian and pro-British in this struggle. Because we simply do not wish to see Nazi Germany dominate the world. Also we would not like to see Britain or Russia dominate the world, Mr. Lindbergh, but we do not happen to think that either eventually is likely.

Germans Invent Communism

As for the ideology of communism that you so suddenly detest, it is a German invention, Mr. Lindbergh. Both of these totalitarian conceptions originated in German philosophy and they are much more alike than they are indifferent. Also, the Bolshevik revolution in Russia was aided and abetted by the German General Staff for the same reason that Hitler has aided and abetted revolutions in the democracies: namely, to weaken the victim. Lenin and twenty-three Bolsheviks were sent in a sealed car through Germany to Russia for the purpose of getting Russia out of the last war, and some of the same staff officers who helped them get there are now engaged in fighting Russia to overthrow the regime they started.

Nothing is at all complicated, Mr. Lindbergh, except if you are trying to keep up with Dr. Goebbels. Then you are likely to meet yourself in the doorway coming out.

But on our side there is nothing confusing at all. We are against one man and one nation dominating the world and we think that if he dominates Europe, Asia and Africa, the United States will be on the spot. We, whom you call "interventionists" are strongly in favor of blocking him before he gets to the Portuguese islands and before he gets to the gates of Alaska.

We think that if he gets to the Portuguese islands and to the gates of Alaska the "treaty" you recommend will have the value that all treatier have when negotiated at the point of a gun, plus the value that any treaty has when negotiated with Hitler.

THE BURMA ROAD

One of the most important and interesting motor roads in the world today is the Burma Road, the life-line of the Chinese nationalist government.

When in December, 1937, General Chiang Kai-Chek removed his capital to Chungking in South-West China, his forces operating against the Japanese were virtually cut off from the sea.

To continue resistance it was essential to receive munitions and other supplies from the southwest.

A vast army of Chinese coolies were set to work to convert into a motor road the century-old silk trail and caravan route running from the northern railhead at Lashio in Upper Burma to Kunming, capital of Yunnan province in China, a distance of about 770 miles.

The most difficult stretch of the road, some 300 miles, was built in nine months by 200,000 Chinese coolies.

After the Burma-China road was sufficiently completed for traffic certain political groups in Burma, influenced by the Japanese, demanded the closing of the road on the theory that it would provide an inlet for Chinese immigration.

During the controversy the Burmese premier, Dr. Ba Maw, resigned, and to appease the Japanese temporarily the British closed the Burma-China road during the rainy season from June to October in 1940.

But the road was reopened October 17, 1940, and since then a stream of trucks have been carrying munitions and other needed supplies over it to the nationalist government.

The Japanese carried out their threat to bomb the road from the air but thus far have been unable to obstruct the traffic seriously.

This road is so long, so tortuous, and passes over so few important bridges that it is difficult to bomb it effectively from the air.

The real Japanese threat to the Burma-China road is not from the air but from land forces operating through French Indo-China and Thailand.

Frequent land and rock slides and the presence of numerous morasses, sinkholes asd ruts make it necessary to have large crews on the job along the road to remove obstructions and help trucks in distress.

During the rainy season the Burma road is virtually impassable.

The road winds and jogs for hundreds of miles through one of the wildest and most picturesque mountain regions in the world.

IN PRAISE OF WORK

Nothing out of pleasure save a fleeting hour of rest;
Nothing out of dancing but a little grace at best;
Nothing for the future out of wine and mirth and song;
'Tis only difficulties that leave a fellow strong!

'Tis well that mind and body sometimes should play a bit,
But every fighter knows it; 'tis work that leaves him fit.
And every student knows it, or learn it soon he will.
Hard study leads to wisdom; only practice leads to skill.

Give not your heart to pleasures though fair they seem to be.
Who would enjoy the drama must work to earn the fee.
The prides of ball and banquet not past their evening live,
But grim old Difficulty has character to give.

So watch your heart with pleasure; grow not too fond of play.
The joys they have to give you last seldom past the day;
But stern taskmaster Hardship, though fearsome he appears,
Will give you strength and courage and pride for all your years.

Observers Receive Stripes, Badges At Ceremonial at Picton School

Sergt. J. W. Grindley Given 'Mentioned in Dispatches' Certificate

A LARGE CLASS

Picton, July 7—At a ceremonial parade held at the R.A.F. Station, Picton, Ont., at 11.30 a.m. on Saturday the 5th of July, the second course of air observers to complete their training at No. 31 Bombing and Gunnery School, received their sergeants stripes and their observers badges. They were all recruited in the United Kingdom and sent to Canada for their specialist training at R.A.F. schools, transferred to the Dominion. They will now be returned to the United Kingdom for a final polish to their training at one of the Operational Training Units, where they will gain intimate experience in that type of aircraft in which they will finally undertake operational bombing sorties.

No. 31 B. & G. School was originally No. 6 B. & G. School, and was destined to be stationed at Pembray in Wales, but was subsequently sent out to Canada and re-numbered No. 31 to bring it into conformity with No. 31 Air Navigation School, already in operation at Port Albert, near Goderich, Ont. At present Picton is operating at half-strength and taking only pupils who pass out from Port Albert after completing their navigational training there. In the fall, the second eschelon of the Picton school is due to arrive in this country and pupils will then, also, be taken from the newly forming No. 31 Air Observers School, near Hamilton.

Commander a Specialist

The Station Commander at Picton is Group Captain C. H. Keith, a regular officer of the R.A.F., who is a specialist in both navigation and armament, having commanded a heavy bomber station in England for the first year of this war, and was appointed for a time as President of a Selection Board charged with the duty of interviewing and selecting volunteers for air crew duties. In conversation the Group Captain remarked: "I cannot overstress the importance attached to the duties lying ahead of these observers. Upon their ability and devotion to duty depends the whole success of a bombing raid. The accurate navigation of their aircraft to the selected target calls for considerable skill and minute attention; theirs is the responsibility for so directing the pilot that the approach to the target is accurate and they must release their bombs to a split second if the maximum result is to be achieved against the target. In addition we train them as air gunners, so that they may defend their aircraft whenever it is attacked by an enemy fighter. These airmen are all hand-picked volunteers, and their first course has been of a standard, which is an encouragement to everyone charged with their training. In Canada we can go right ahead with training, unmolested by enemy activity and our output should be steady, considerable and of a desirable high standard. The R.C.A.F. have selected a magnificent site for the school and its air ranges, and provided excellent accommodation in an amazingly short space of time."

Staff Well Leavened

Wing Commander P. W. Lowe-Homes, the chief instructor, is a regular R.A.F. officer who is an armament technical officer and has had long and varied experience in armament training with active service experience in India. Squadron Leader J. Avent, D.F.C., is the first British Columbian to gain this decoration in the present war and came to Picton straight off operational flying with the R.A.F. coastal command, to look after the flying side of the observers training. The staff of the school is well leavened with those who have had considerable experience in the training of gunnery and bombing. Competition between the pupils is carefully fostered; some will be recommended for commissioned rank; some will be reported as suitable to become instructors after they have gained operational experience. The one who gains the highest marks wins a trophy presented by the school staff and his name will be recorded on an ornamental plaque in the pupils' study room. This was presented to Group Captain Keith to Sgt. Observer Law of Lancashire, Eng. with Sgt. Observer Thomas of Portsmouth as runner-up.

Certificate Presented

A special feature of the ceremonial parade was the presentation of a Mentioned in Despatches Certificate to Sgt. J. W. Grindley, who is stationed here. In making the presentation, Group Captain Keith said:

"His Majesty's Secretary of State for Air, Sir Archibald Sinclair has forwarded to me for presentation to No. 353741, Sergeant J. W. Grindley, a certificate recording His Majesty's high appreciation of the services rendered by this N.C.O., which were mentioned in an Active Service Despatch, dated 22nd. July, 1940, from Air Marshal Sir Arthur Barrett, K.C.B., C.M.G., M.C., Air Officer Commanding the Advanced Air Striking Force in France, and published in the London Gazette, dated 1st. January, 1941.

"Sergeant Grindley was N.C.O. in charge of the Motor Transport of No. 73 (Fighter) Squadron, which Unit was operating against the enemy between the 1st. and 20th. June, 1940, covering the withdrawal of British forces consequent upon the collapse of the French army. This squadron withdrew from Verdun successively to Rheims, Gaye, Troyes, Nantes and St. Nazaire. During this difficult withdrawal and despite enemy action, largely due to the example and devotion to duty of the N.C.O. every M.T. vehicle was successfully withdrawn and denied to the enemy.

Very Modest

Sgt. Grindley is very modest and refused to go into detail about his exploits which won him this honor. Though under continual fire, his section of the Motor Transport successfully withdrew to the embarkation port, without losing any supplies. 'I only did what anyone else would have done under the circumstances,' he modestly remarked. Before entering the service, he was a bus driver in London, where his wife and young son reside. He preferred to forget his own experiences to pay tribute to those who are standing up to the enemy's attacks. 'The people are really marvellous despite everything and all of them deserve medals,' he said. He was unaware for many months that he had been cited for bravery, not being aware until friends wrote and told him they had read of it in the newspapers. His section was part of the Advanced Air Striking Force, that section of the R.A.F. which did such great work during the early months of the war even though when greatly outnumbered.

In addressing the students, Group Captain Keith spoke of the responsibilities connected with the decorations received by the men. He urged them to live to set an example for others. "Go out from here determined to do your part in upholding the splendid tradition won by those already in battle. To outward appearances you are now men who will be the envy of others. Live that you may deserve it, humble in spirit, yet confident in ability, determined but not arrogant, cheerful but not foolhardy, and that good fortune may go with you, and lead you in the path of distinction and prosperity, is the wish of all of us you leave behind at Picton."

The class was drawn up on the quadrangle for the ceremony, with planes roaring overhead occasionally causing brief delays. A new class will begin their training here in a few days.

Miss Shirley Peeling and girl friend of Utica, N.Y., are guests for a week of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peeling.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Welsh of Peterboro are guests for a week of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Patterson.

FIRST CLASS COOKS, PLUMBERS IN DEMAND

No less than twenty young girls, all who have attained excellent marks in stenography and typing exams are now listed with the employment service.

There were no calls for laborers listed with the employment office this morning, although first class cooks and plumbers were in demand for positions vacant at the Trenton Air Station.

221 PASSENGERS

E.D.T. Mrs. R. S. Hibbs of Toronto, taken off on the same trip, confirmed that their first knowledge of the grounding came from ship's officers.

The Rapids Prince, a steel twin-screw vessel of 197 feet, was espec-treacherous rapids after dark. The ship was not believed to have suffered any extensive damage.

Enjoyed Forced Stay

Mr. and Mrs. John Buckley of Chicago said they had enjoyed their forced stay aboard the ship, authough Mrs. Buckley found her life - preserver pillow "slightly bumpy, even when it stayed in position."

The ship was not equipped for night travel and passengers bunked down on deck chairs and in the lounges. Rain during the night chased most of the deck-chair holders inboard after midnight, and passengers spent the night dancing to the ship's orchestra and in sing songs and card games.

Passengers had high praise for officers and crew of the ship who doled out mattresses and pillows until the supply was exhausted and then passed out life-preservers for pillows to passengers sleeping on chairs and on the cabin floors.

Journey to Shore Dangerous

"We were scared, a bit", said Irene Ball of Toronto and Jean Thompson, her vacation companion from Toronto. "But we enjoyed it after the first little while", Miss Ball added hastily. "We slept comfortably in a cabin, and it was quite exciting coming ashore in the small boat".

Mrs. George Perrin of New York, said she and her husband had enjoyed the enforced night stay, and added that the trip to shore was "a bit nerve-wracking".

A five-year-old girl, Gale Renney of Saskatoon, and her mother came ashore in the third trip of the motor launch. Neither complained of the night although both said it had been "tiring."

Garfield Alguire of Toronto, who also came ashore on the third trip, said he felt "nothing at all" when the ship grounded about 7.30 p.m. fally built to run the rapids of the St. Lawrence—a route avoided by other vessels by going through the Lachine Canal. Shallow-bottomed with a nine-foot draught, the 1,300-ton vessel was built in Toronto in 1910.

Rudder-Chain Breaks

The grounding was believed caused by the breaking of a rudder-chain, which sent the vessel approximately 50 feet off its course. The bow of the vessel slipped up on a shoal, causing it to stick fast, although officials said the rocks had not ripped the bottom.

The spot was practically the same one where the old Rapids Prince went aground in 1922, with the 400 passengers aboard on that occasion being removed by lifeboat the next day. One person was drowned at that time, an assistant steward who lost his life when a small boat in which he was attempting to reach the mainland for food capsized.

The grounding this time occurred about halfway between two Montreal suburbs, Lachine and Ville La Salle. Thousands of residents of the two municipalities and nearby Verdun thronged the shoreline last night to watch the stranded vessel, its lights ablaze as passengers made the best of it by dancing to the ship's orchestra and strolling the decks until near midnight.

TWEED LODGE I.O.O.F. ATTENDS CHURCH SERVICE

Brotherhood is Theme of Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A.—Graves of Deceased Members Decorated

Tweed (Special)—The members of Tweed Lodge No. 290 I.O.O.F., held their annual church service on Sunday, July 6th at 2.30 p.m. Service was held in Tweed United Church with Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., in charge. Visiting brothers were present from Stirling, Thomasburg, Madoc and Kingston. The visitors and local members marched from the Oddfellows' Hall to the church. Following the church service, the graves of deceased brethren who had been buried in Victoria cemetery were decorated with flowers by the members of the order.

At the church service, Mr. Donald Johnston of Fergus, sang "The Lord's Prayer" (Malotte) by request.

Rev. Mr. Morrison gave an excellent address on the subject "Brotherhood."

"Brotherhood," said the preacher, "is a grand word and a grand fact in the life of man. It varies greatly in the extent of its application. There is the brotherhood of blood which binds us within the bounds of the family and the home. It is a strong and sacred tie, one of the loveliest gifts which life can bestow upon us. A good brother or sister is more precious than gold and rubies.

"A wider brotherhood is the brotherhood of race. Those who live within the bounds of the same country and under the same flag. These are united under the same ideals and thoughts. This brotherhood of race can be abused, and often is abused. There are those who make of patriotism a refuge for scoundrels, and its sentiments are invoked by the chisellers and grafters. In this brotherhood noble men and women have found one of the greatest sources of power and inspiration for good. They combine to create a people strong, willing and generous.

"The third is a brotherhood of ideals. It is wider than either of the others and embraces all men of every race and time who hold the same convictions. It is on the brotherhood of ideals that the Independent Order of Oddfellows is based. The teachings and ideals of Christ are its basis. Here we find the brotherhood of friendship, truth and love. The only key required to gain admission into membership of the order is the key of character. The question of rank or wealth does not enter.

'Brotherhood,' concluded the preacher will be only a sham unless all are inbued with the principles of honor, trustworthiness and unselfish goodwill."

Following the church service the Oddfellows proceeded to Victoria cemetery where the graves of departed brethren were decorated. The following are buried in Tweed: John Stokes, Robert McGuire, Wellington Hardy, Norman M. Lloyd, Charles Moon, J. O. Molyneaux, David Beatty, P. A. Bartlett, John Wray, Lyman Godfrey, John Pratt, James H. Clare, Sidney Christie, J. J. Wilder, J. W. Logan, Ford Elliott, James Thompson, John Marchen, Wm. McCammon, J. W. Easterbrook, E. R. Huyck, James Holdcroft, W. G. Arber, Dr. W. M. Mather, J. F. Stokes, Jr., J. F. Houston, F. E. Houston, Joseph Mills, C. F. Varty (Temple Lodge, Man.).

The following brethren are buried elsewhere: W. T. Hinds, Chas. Porter, Charles Shaw, Louis Dumbusky, Thos. Watson, W. O. Benn, Dr. H. C. Kindred, W. H. Rollins, Wm. Way, Dr. J. A. Thompson.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Allied campaign in Syria has come to the stage of armistice discussions. So far Vichy's chief representative in the Levant, Gen. Henri Dentz, has refused to entertain generous terms proffered on behalf of the Allied commanders. British circles in Ankara however, are inclined to believe his subordinate officers regard the proposals more favorably.

Despite the slow progress made against the Vichy forces, British and Free French troops are steadily increasing their pressure, both from the south and from Iraq in the east. With Turkey refusing passage for badly needed supplies and the British fleet blocking the sea route, it seems only a matter of time before General Dentz must capitulate.

Terms Quite Simple

The armistice terms are reported to be simple: Officers and men would have the choice of passage to unoccupied France or of joining the Free French forces. All war equipment found in Syria would fall to the Allies.

Ankara dispatches hint at a possible Axis ruse to get part of the Italian navy into the Black Sea to participate in the war with Russia. These advices say German-occupied Bulgaria, which is situated on the Black Sea, has "bought" eight Italian destroyers. Through this nominal change of ownership the Axis would be able to get the ships through the Dardanelles, which under the Montreux agreement Turkey is bound to close to belligerent naval craft.

From Washington comes word that ships carrying tanks, aircraft and other vital war equipment from the United States are reaching the Middle East at the rate of almost one a day. These supplies are vitally needed if Britain is to take full advantage of German preoccupation with Russia and strike at the German armored divisions in Eastern Libya.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Firefly"

Eclipsing memorable "Maytime" in sheer greatness, Jeanette MacDonald in the musical triumph "The Firefly," is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. Allan Jones, Warren William, Billy Gilbert and Douglas Dumbrille, head the supporting playing that includes a cast of thousands.

It becomes immediately evident from this imposing array of production talent that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has spared nothing of its lavish resources in filming what this reviewer considers the outstanding musical picture of all time.

Gorgeous scenes in the High Sierras, regal Spain reproduced on thirty magnificent sets and a massive re-enactment of the battle of Vittoria in which Napoleon was defeated by Wellington, provide a visual feast for the eyes.

There are seven outstanding musical numbers, five of them retained from the original Primi operetta, two especially written by him for the picture. Miss MacDonald sings "Love is Like a Firefly," "He Who Loves and Runs Away" and "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart" with superb artistry. She dances with grace and plays her role with the true ability that has made her a leading star of screen drama.

Jones sings "A Woman's Kiss" and "The Donkey Serenade," and they sing in duet "Giannina Mia" and "Sympathy." The score is gay with Spanish melody throughout.

"Under Age"

Nan Grey and Alan Baxter, two of the screen's newest stars, in one of the most dramatic achievements Hollywood has produced, entitled "Under Age" is the second feature on the program now at the McCarthy and if space would permit, a detail review of this added feature would be written, but to readers of this column your reviewer can only state that "Under Age" is one of the most entertaining, unheralded feature attractions presented here in quite some time, a picture that while not receiving tremendous advance publicity, is down-to-earth enjoyment from beginning to end. An interesting news reel completes the show.

CHEESE PRODUCTION UP

Ottawa, July 7 (CP)—Agriculture Department officials today reported cheese gradings in Ontario and Quebec were 68,201 boxes for the week ended July 5, a gain of 11.91 per cent over the same week last year.

The increase was smaller than that reported in recent weeks and officials believed the comparatively lower figure was due to dry weather conditions existing in areas where most of Canada's cheese is produced.

COURT SUSPENDS DRIVING LICENCES OF 2 MOTORISTS

Magistrate Butler Carries Out Promise to Deprive Drivers of Licences for 30 Days

Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., put into practice his promise of suspending drivers' licences following convictions of violations of traffic laws in Belleville today. Two local citizens felt the sting of the drive to lessen traffic violations when their driving privileges were revoked for one full month following convictions of careless driving, with fines of $10 and costs, amounting to $22.25 in all, being assessed in addition to the cancellation of driving rights for 30 days.

In addition other motorists paid lesser fines after being convicted of minor infractions of city traffic ordinances. Jas. W. Hanley paid one dollar and costs after admitting to driving a motor car after sundown without adequate lights and also was assessed a dollar and costs for failing to produce his driver's licence. W. B. Lowe paid a dollar and costs for failing to stop at a designated stop street as Magistrate Butler continued to render increased penalties upon motorists convicted of violations of traffic bylaws.

"If warnings fail to produce results, we'll rid the streets of these drivers by cancelling their driving rights," stated His Worship, as he deprived two motorists of the privilege of driving their motor cars for one full month.

Herbert Peterson, Bloomfield, appeared on a charge of intoxication. "May I speak first?" asked the accused as he was arraigned.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" replied Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, who was given an answer in the affirmative. "This is a second offence of intoxication within three months registered against this man," reminded Mr. Robertson.

Peterson was fined $50 and costs and in default of payment sentenced to two months in the common jail.

AT THE CAPITOL

Double Horror Show

Two of the most terrifying pictures ever to come out of the movie studios shocked and thrilled the Sunday midnight crowd last night at the Capitol Theatre. They are "Man Made Monster" and "Horror Island," and they still may be seen tonight.

In "Man Made Monster" Lon Chaney Jr., contributed a performance that will rank well with the best work of his famous father. He followed in the footsteps of his father, and disguised in a gruesome facial covering and encased in a 70-pound rubber suit, played the role of a human electrical man.

In early scenes of the film, Lon appears as a normal happy-go-lucky fellow.

Later he is transformed into a fearsome, super-charged monster following application of electrical shocks administered by scientist Lionel Atwill who is attempting to prove a theory that human life can be motivated and controlled by electricity.

Success of the experiments leads to highly dramatic complications.

Another successful entertainment was chalked up for Universal movie makers, acknowledged leaders in the field of dramatic shockers, when "Horror Island," another spine-chiller, opened at the Capitol Theatre.

A novelty horror special which derives a nice balance of comedy through the efforts of funsters in supporting roles, "Horror Island" is the story of a week-end treasure hunt cruise to the one-time hideout of Captain Morgan, the pirate. Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo, and Fuzzy Knight lead the expedition, while among the interesting group of passengers are Peggy Moran, Lewis Howard, Walter Catlett, Ralf Harolde, Iris Adrian, John Eldredge, and Hobart Cavanaugh.

Foran, as the promoter who turns sleuth to track down a maniacal killer, is colorfully convincing. Probably one of the most outstanding character portrayals of his career is enacted by Carrillo as a lovable old mariner. Knight, Howard, and Catlett appear to advantage in original brands of comedy. Miss Moran, Harolde, Eldredge, and Miss Adrian are excellent in other prominent roles.

Director George Waggner adds to his growing success in the creation of tense drama and he has fine material to work with in this instance.

The same program includes an interesting travelogue showing the perils of the fishermen who roam the Arctic seas.

LOADING BUNDLES FOR BREMEN

Ground crewmen of the British Royal Air Force are shown loading some of their new super-bombs into the racks of a giant long-range bomber before the takeoff for a raid on German-held territory and Germany proper. It was bombs like these, some of which weigh 2,000 pounds, that are blasting the great ports of Bremen and Hamburg as well as the so-called invasion ports on the French coast.

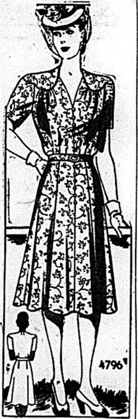
Dress Has New Extended Yoke

Pattern 4796



By ANNE ADAMS

The smart woman who takes a size thirty-four or over knows that she can wear the very newest styles—if they are adapted and adjusted to her own special figure problems. Pattern 4796 by Anne Adams is a perfect example of this point—it has unusual fashion interest, yet is simple and well-cut for slimming flattery. The decorative scalloped yokes are extended to give the new natural look to your shoulders, and the back yoke is cut in one piece with the bodice. Another this-season note is that deep V-neckline. Gathering below the yokes and darts above the waist smooth the soft, bodice lines; the skirt has smart double front panels. Let the Sewing Instructor point out the easy- sew-your-own way.

Pattern 4796 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 2 7-8 yards 39-inch fabric.

For Tuesday, July 8

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PLANETARY configurations for this day must, in a general way, be interpreted as difficult, hazardous and of ill omen. There may be much to contend with in all business relations, which may be subject to peculiar or strange irregularities, with pitfalls, treachery and fraud, especially where writings, documents or verbal agreements are involved. There may be much stubborn opposition from higher-ups, although relatives and social contracts may be beneficial. Safeguard the health as well as property from danger. When momentous decisions must be made, the inner guidance or intuitions may be safe.

Those whose birthday it is may have to endure a difficult year in business affairs, but will find compensations in private happiness and solace. There may be menace of opposition from high places, but this could be offset by friends or elders giving aid in critical places. The intuitions of spiritual vision may be relied upon but there are peculiar dangers, treacheries, frauds and physical perils to be coped with by vigilance and sagacity, particularly where papers, writings and unguarded speech are concerned. Make changes carefully and protect the health.

A child born on this day should have difficulty in getting along with its superiors and business associates although its real disposition will be friendly, sympathetic and guided by worthy spiritual promptings.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Approves Spunky Letter

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We find your column very interesting and highly approve the sentiment expressed in Mrs. Pepper's recent letter. Our family has been very happy, and as the spunky lady says, There's no substitute for love.

Too many girls are willing to resort to all sorts of ways for roping in the men. And the result is usually a short-lived marriage. Whenever men get to be men again and women lose some of their more unlovely traits, such as gossip and deceit, we'll probably have spiritual marriages, happy homes and fewer divorces.

I agree with Mrs. Pepper that neither money, fame, not even children can force love upon a man or woman.

Meredith.

In case you may have forgotten Mrs. Pepper's letter, she wrote that if her husband wanted to leave her and her boys, she'd find his hat, pack his suitcase, and even tell the other woman what he liked for his meals and not to mind his untidy habits, such as strewing newspapers and cigar ashes all over the place. Mrs. Pepper believed in mutual love under the domestic roof.

Parents Must Learn To Give Up Daughters.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm almost 20 years of age, the only child in our family. My folks have given me everything possible, and I am grateful to them.

As long as I can remember, my parents have broken up any love affair they saw was getting too serious. I've been going with a young man of my own age, and as we have much in common we've grown fond of each other and have been making plans for our future together. We've gone together three years and I know we're really in love.

My folks have come between us again and I simply cannot bear being separated from him. I don't want to run away and hurt my parents, but I love this young man so much that I would not want to live without him. The only reason my parents have is they're afraid of losing me. Please help me!

G.Q.

Please don't lose your temper, get tearful or violent when you tell your parents that this time you are in earnest and intend to marry the young man of your choice. Tell them that you would hate to run away and get married, and will do that only as a last resort. Many parents have this possessive attitude toward their daughters, which comes, as you say from loving them too much.

Loves Classmate

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He wants me to become engaged to him as soon as I graduate from high school, but I hesitate because I am deeply in love with a boy in my class. For about a year I haven't been speaking to this boy. We got mad because I wouldn't let him kiss me. I told him I wanted to be sure I loved him before I became serious.

Now, I'm sure I love him but we ignore each other. I told him I hated him and that I hoped I'd never see him again. Shall I continue to go with the first boy I told you about? He is rich and shows me an elegant time, and almost makes me forget the second. Or shall I go on being tortured every time I hear or see anything that reminds me of the boy I love? Our eyes met one day last week, and he did not look as if he hated me.

Freda

My dear, you're having the time of your life, though you don't realize it. You're only 18 and have two devoted swains in love with you. Better make up with the second boy and go out with them both. If it's possible, add a couple more to your circle of admirers.

Boys in high school are too young to think of marriage. That's the breathing space heaven gives us before we settle down to the domestic round of making ends meet, housekeeping, baby-tending. Marketing and all of the rest of it. As the poet says, "Enjoy thy youth; it will not stay."

Confesses Her Love in Roundabout Way

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I can't understand why she won't tell me she loves me. Instead, she tells her sister about it, and her sister passes the information on to me. I don't like this roundabout lovemaking. Why doesn't she tell me she loves me instead of telling her sister? She doesn't mind if I put my arm around her and she has accepted a ring from me. Yet, when I ask her if she loves me, she seems to turn to ice.

Bill

This young lady probably belongs to the demure type, and is opposed to giving herself away. But from what you tell me I don't see what you have to worry about.

Belleville Branch of Red Cross

The regular monthly executive meeting of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on Friday, July 4th, in the Red Cross rooms.

Concerning salvage collection it was reported that commencing in September the Women's Canadian Club will undertake this work. A committee has already been formed and is proceeding with organization and publicity.

Progress re the Blood Donor Group has had to be postponed until autumn.

Mr. Hefkey gave the treasurer's report. Communications were read and discussed concerning (1) help to be given discharged soldiers; (2) The Toronto Daily Star Red Cross Bomb Victims' Fund; (3) collecting the annual Red Cross membership fee which has usually been included in campaign funds. As no campaign is being held in 1941 persons willing to become members of the Red Cross Society are asked to pay their fees at the Red Cross rooms or to Mr. Hefkey at the Royal Bank and receive membership tickets.

It was reported that the jam making was well under way.

Mrs. Cameron reported good success to date in "Barrels for Britain" project, whereby many grocery stores have placed barrels to be filled with canned goods to be shipped through the Red Cross to British bomb victims.

Mrs. Lazier's report of the Women's War Work Committee is as follows:

"During the month of June, the Women's War Work Committee has continued its work in spite of decreased attendance in groups, and on the part of some women with leisure, we regret to add, lack of interest. Six shipments of supplies have been sent to headquarters, these contained 449 knitted comforts for the Navy, Army, Women's Auxiliary Corps in England, Civilian Defence Workers in England, Airforce and Bombed Victims, also 559 articles of clothing for the British Civilian Relief and 30 leather jerkins for Minesweepers.

This committee would like to thank Mrs. Porter and any of her assistants for their work in placing posters in the shop windows for this display of knitted and sewn articles in the windows of the Victory Loan Office. Also may we thank the officials of that body for their permission for use of their show window and Mr. Trudeau for the loan of a new truck for the Red Cross float in the Victory Loan parade, the truck was under the efficient management of Mrs. Lipton and a group of workers who co-operated in every way.

On June 13th the convener attended a meeting of the Provincial Executive, minutes of which may be seen at the Red Cross office here.

Again the writer takes this opportunity of asking for the assistance of expert knitters, cutters and sewers for the summer season.

Respectfully submitted.
Florence M. Lazier.

TOGETHER FOR GOOD

Complete victory was won by Marion Talley, star of opera, screen and radio, in her bitterly fought divorce battle with her husband, Adolph Eckstrom. Not only did Superior Judge Ingall W. Bull award Miss Talley a divorce and sole custody of her six-year-old daughter, Susan Eckstrom, but he cleared her of the charges of multiple immorality which Eckstrom had hurled. Miss Talley and her daughter, Susan, are shown ABOVE, after the court's decision was rendered.

Elmer Riddle, Cincinnati Reds, 'Hottest' Pitcher in National Loop with Nine Straight Wins

Gained Ninth Win by Allowing Cardinals Only Three Hits

DIMAG STILL GOING

By BILL BONI

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

A most unpopular question in seven National League cities today is "Who's Elmer?" and Cincinnati Reds are the only club which has the answer.

Besides the answer, the Reds also have Elmer — Elmer Riddle, who began his baseball career with Wausau (Wis.) of the Northern League in 1936, and is pitching his second season for the Reds.

Elmer right now is the hottest pitcher in what always has been known as a pitchers' league. He has won nine games and hasn't lost any, having achieved No. 9 yesterday with a three-hit, 3-0 shutout of St. Louis Cardinals which dropped the Redbirds three games back of the leading Brooklyn Dodgers.

Dodgers Take Advantage

The Dodgers, taking advantage of this assistance by Riddle and the Reds, got some fine five-hit pitching from their own Kirby Higbe to top Boston Braves 5-2, a three-run triple by Dolph Camilli and two-run homer by Pete Reiser accounting for the scoring. In the nightcap the Braves just had come from behind to tie the score at 4, all in the seventh when rain called a halt to the day's proceedings.

Rain also cut short a projected Giant-Phillies doubleheader after the New Yorkers had won the eight-inning opener, 7-3, behind Carl Hubbell's six-hit hurling. But in Pittsburgh the weather man didn't interfere, and as a result the Pirates were able to whip Chicago Cubs 2-1 and 13-4 to oust their victims from fifth place.

Pirates Now Fifth

Elbie Fletcher's home runs (he barely missed a third) accounted for the Pittsburgh tallies in the first game, in which Rip Sewell starved the Cubs on four hits.

In the American League New York Yankees had the stage. They drew the year's top crowd, 60,948, which first witnessed a simple, impressive dedication of his teammates' memorial to Lou Gehrig and then saw those mates proceed to take apart Philadelphia Athletics, 8-4 and 3-1.

Joe DiMaggio and Red Rolfe got four hits apiece in the first game and in the second DiMaggio stretched his hitting streak to 48 straight with a triple and single which drove in two runs.

Since 40-year-old Ted Lyons was giving Chicago White Sox a 9-4 triumph over Cleveland, the Yanks' bulge on the Indians grew to 3 1-2 games.

While Chicago was winning with a veteran, Boston Red Sox won 6-2 and 4-3 victories over the last-place Washington Senators.

Split Twin Bill

Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns split their double bill. A six-run blast in the fifth and Al Benton's relief pitching gave Detroit the first game, 7-5, but the Browns got to Dizzy Trout for four runs in six innings and enough to win the second, 5-3.

In Saturday's National League games, the Dodgers took the Braves 2-1, Pittsburgh walloped the Cubs 9-6 and Cincinnati squeezed out a 2-1 victory over the Cards. New York at Philadelphia was rained out. In the American League, the lowly Browns won two from Detroit 9-3 and 10-1, Boston shut out the Senators 5-0, the Yankees defeated the A's 10-5—at the expense of the Canadian hurler, Phil Marchildon — and Cleveland beat Chicago 5-3.

Feller Expected To Start Game For Americans

All-Star Struggle Will be Played at Detroit on Tuesday

AMERICANS FAVORED

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Detroit, July 7 (AP)—Baseball switched its spotlight today from the Major League pennant races to tomorrow's ninth annual all-star struggle, "the dream game" which the fans finally forced the clubs to give them as a mid-summer fixture.

President William Harridge of the American League, who led the vanguard of notables on to the scene, said all indications pointed to Briggs Stadium being jammed to its limit of approximately 57,000 for the game, making this the third largest turnout in the history of the affair.

The American leaguers were installed as early 5-to-4 favorites and the folks here were happily predicting the junior circuit would avenge Detroit's defeat in last year's World Series as well as the American League loss in the 1940 all-star game at St. Louis. The Americans have won five of the eight previous battles.

Del Baker and Bill McKechnie, the rival managers in the World Series and field generals for tomorrow's tussle, are due to arrive today along with the 25 selected players from each league.

Feller Expected to Start

Nothing was known about the lineups for the contest, but Bob Feller, Cleveland's great right-hander, is expected to start on the mound for the Americans and either Bucky Walters of Cincinnati or Whitlow Wyatt of Brooklyn for the National Leaguers.

McKechnie probably will give the fans here a look at most of his cast of celebrities, following his procedure of last year when he used all but three of his players in humiliating his rivals 4-0.

His most likely lineup for the start is John Mize of the Cardinals at first base, Billy Herman of the Dodgers at second, Arky Vaughan of Pittsburgh at short, Stan Hack of Chicago on third, Medwick of the Dodgers, Terry Moore of the Cards, and Mel Ott of the Giants in the outfield, with Walters pitching and Harry Danning of the Giants catching.

The American League probably will use Rudy York of Detroit at first, Joe Gordon of the Yankees on second, Manager Joe Cronin of Boston Red Sox at short, Ken Keltner of Cleveland at third, Ted Williams of Boston, Joe Dimaggio of New York and Jeff Heath of the Indians in the outfield with Bill Dickey of the Yanks catching Feller.

Oshawa Golfer Wins Tourney

Bradley Defeats Jack Chinery in Final Match One Up in Ragged Game

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—A tournament dark horse, Bruce Bradley of Oshawa, won the Ontario amateur golf championship Saturday afternoon at Mississauga Golf Club by posting a one up victory over Jack Chinery of Toronto. Bradley had a medal score of 78 and Chinery had a 79.

The championship final was not productive of good golf. Both boys were nervous and many of their tee shots were wavering and their iron shots frequently found the rough. They matched stroke for stroke on the outward nine and Chinery held a one hole margin at the turn. Bradley deadlocked the match at the tenth and was never worse than even from then until the finish.

At the seventeenth Bradley earned a par four while Chinery went one over when his tee shot landed in a clump of bushes on fairway. It was an unplayable stroke and the penalty incurred gave Bradley the edge needed for victory. They halved the eighteenth with two over par sixes.

Bradley got into the final by virtue of his 4 and 3 win over Jim Twiss of Toronto while Chinery whipped Gil Walker of London 3 and 2 in the other semifinal match.

The defending champion, Phil Farley, was defeated in Friday's matches.

BUFFALO BISONS HAVE TWO READY FOR BIG TIME

Myer, Second Baseman, and Rocco, First Sacker, Are Quite Impressive

LEAFS BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

Buffalo Bisons of the International Baseball League, who sent the now-famous infield combination of Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack up to Cleveland Indians, have another pair of young infielders about ready to move into the big time.

They are Lambert (Dutch) Meyer, who may step up any day to take Charley Gehringer's place at second base for Detroit Tigers' and Mickey Rocco, a husky first baseman. They both played in the Southern Association last season and hit better than .300. Now they're two big reasons why Buffalo is second in the league and threatening Newark's hold on top.

Rocco was the most effective of the pair yesterday as the Bisons belted over Montreal Royals twice, 9-4, 10-6. Rocco made six hits in seven times up, including his 15th home run of the season and drove in five counters. Meyer, shut out in the first game, came back with a double and two singles in the second and figured in four double plays during the afternoon.

Al Vincent, Buffalo manager, and pitcher Freddie Hutchinson were chased from the park for arguing with the umpires.

Royals in Fourth Place

The double defeat dropped Montreal into fourth place, a half-game behind Rochester Red Wings, who broke even with Newark. The league leaders extended their winning streak to 11 straight when they took the first game 6-5 but the Red Wings came back to gain a 3-0 decision.

Another notable streak was ended when Syracuse Chiefs beat the last-place Toronto Leafs 3-1 to end a string of 14 successive defeats. The day's other bill saw Jersey City and Baltimore trade shutouts, the Little Giants taking the first game 3-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Roy Henshaw and the Orioles winning the second 2-0, when Elmer Burkart duplicated the three-hit effort.

Syracuse's Tom Sunkel did even better, giving only two hits to hand Toronto its 10th straight defeat.

Saturday, Newark took a doubleheader from Jersey City, winning the first 5-1 and the seven-inning afterpiece 2-1. Baltimore defeated Syracuse 2-1 and 4-1 in another twin bill.

The hapless Leafs were trounced 8-3 by Rochester and Buffalo whipped Montreal 10-3.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Joe DiMaggio and Red Rolfe, Yankees: Rolfe got homer and three singles in first game, DiMaggio six hits, including double and triple in two games as Yanks swept doubleheader with Athletics.

Kirby Higbe, Dodgers: His five-hit pitching tamed Braves.

Ted Lyons, White Sox: Held Indians to four hits in first seven innings and nine in all for eighth victory of year.

Heber Newsome and Cecil Hughson, Red Sox: Rookie hurlers turned back Washington in twin bill, Newsome on five hits.

Elmer Riddle, Reds: Gave Cardinals three hits, allowing only one man to reach third, in gaining 3-0 shutout.

OTTAWA AND HULL TIED FOR FIRST PLACE IN LOOP

Kingston Loses Two and Wins One in Week to Place Third

TEAMS BUNCHED

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa Royal Canadiens and Hull B and B, each with seven wins and three losses, are tied for first place in the Interprovincial Baseball League standings. The leaders meet Wednesday in a game which—unless it is a tie—will put one of them temporarily in the lead.

Ottawa gained their first-place slow by defeating Hull Volants, 6-1, in a double-header played in Hull Sunday. Bill Jelly, Ottawa hurler, allowed Volants only five hits while his team-mates collected eight from two Volant pitchers.

B and B capitalized on seven Kingston errors to defeat the Ponies, 8-1, in the second game of the double bill. The loss dropped Kingston into third place, the lowest they have been in the six team standings since the season opened.

Kingston set up a record for runs scored in one game when they collected 24 against Smith's Falls Saturday. The win for Ponies moved them into undisputed possession of first place for one day.

Buckingham won their first game of the season Wednesday when they defeated Hull Volants, 9-7. Volants errors—they had seven —were responsible for their defeat. Previously Buckingham had gone eight games without a win.

Last Tuesday Ottawa forced a four-way tie for first place in the standings when they journeyed to Kingston and defeated Ponies 14-11 in a free-hitting game which produced 27 hits.

New York, July 7.—(AP) — Here's a laugh to take the edge off Blue Monday: Chick Meehan's second shot against the boxing monopoly will be fired by three members of the Jack Kearns boxing "Trust"—Lee Savold, Pat Comiskey and Mello Bettina. . . Mike Jacobs is paging Diogenes to help him find the Old Midas touch—he blew $12,000 on the Zivic-Davis fiasco.

News in ragtime.

Most people think that Dizzy Dean made fine use of his noble bean, in fading from the baseball show to pop off on the radio . . . Old Diz was never known to balk when up there bobbed a chance to talk, and all agree that on the air the field for gab is passing fair. . . For going ahead and getting hitched, Conn's curly head soon may be stitched . . . . The word is out his pop-in-law is going to clout him on the jaw . . Baseball Career Of C. Gehringer Nearing End

Detroit Second Baseman is Replaced by Rookie as a Defensive Measure

16 YEARS AT POST

By WATSON SPOELSTRA

(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Detroit, July 7 (AP)—The abrupt end of the 18-year Major League baseball career of Charles Leonard Gehringer, Detroit's mechanical man second baseman, was believed in sight today although the 38-year-old veteran is the only one to say precisely when.

For two years baseball men have generally agreed that age is taking its toll on the once agile infielder and links Detroit's current Tigers with the Ty Cobb era. Gehringer had a back ailment most of last season and said after the World series that he might hang up his glove.

At the halfway mark this season, Gehringer is batting a few points above the .200 mark and ground balls that once were easy chances for him are filtering through for base hits.

What brought fresh reports on the Gehringer retirement was the substitution of a younger player Friday late in the game as a defensive move.

It was the ninth inning and Detroit had a four-run lead on Chicago. Managr Del Baker sent fleet George (Tuck) Stainback to the outfield in a defensive move and then replaced Gehringer, a player bracketed with the great Napoleon Lajoie and Eddie Collins, with a raw rookie, Boyd Perry, who has been in the big leagues only a few weeks.

Only Gehringer will decide, however, when to call it a career. A native son whose batting and fielding feats are in the copy book of every Michigan schoolboy. Gehringer is the most popular of all Tigers to the paying customer. His popularity in the front office also is unexcelled and he can keep on picking up those pay cheques (his 1941 salary reportedly is $30,000) as long as he desires.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by

GEO. E. WATKIN.

A rink of our ladies composed of Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Cross, Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Watkin, skip., took in the annual ladies' tournament at Peterboro on Friday. They won their three games and were just one point from bringing home the Duffus cup. They each received a tea set for their performance.

I would advise our men to take a trip to Peterboro, their greens are wonderful this year.

Joe Black and Alf Symons sure went to town against Austin Watkin and the older member of that family in a cup game Thursday evening—no mercy on cripples.

Mary and Cleo Colling were playing a game of singles a short time ago, result of the game, Mary cut the grass. "What a man."

When you feel like a good game of doubles phone Earn Vanner and ask him to bring his young brother up, they are a real pair.

Peterboro is sending in a couple of entries for Wednesday's doubles —is your's in yet?

Only one hundred and sixty shopping days before Xmas, and no club games yet.

Tonight is jitney night, phone your entry at 7.15 o'clock.

On Friday night in the Tip Top cup series, Harvey Stewart and John Bean put up a good fight against those real boys Abe and John on the seventeenth end with the score tied and Harvey laying four shots. Abe drew the shot dead. "Stay with him Harvey", you will get him yet.

Watch John Bean he is developing into one of the best leads in our club.

GOSSIP · NEWS · COMMENT

Tomorrow sees the ninth annual Major League all-star game when the cream of the American and National Leagues cross bats. For those sticklers of statistics, however, here are a few facts: Only once has the home team lost; that was in 1934 when the National League lost 9 to 7 at the Polo Grounds. It might also be interesting to know the American League has won every game played in the odd years and this one is in 1941 when it will be a repitition of previous all-star classics — American hitting versus National League pitching. In their first eight games the American League won five to the National League's three and with the exception of the first three classics, 1933 to '35 inclusive when the American League triumphed, no league has won two successive games. The National League pitching triumphed last year when they let the powerful American League hitters down with three scratch hits and won 3 to 0.

Jimmy Foxx, of the Boston Red Sox is the veteran of both squads and the only one to be selected for all nine all-star games, although he has only played in six. Bill Dickey, the Yankee catcher, shares with Foxx the distinction of having played six of these mid-season classics, which were originally brought into being by Arch Ward of Chicago Tribune. Mel Ott, Joe Medwick and Billy Herman have been selected seven times on the National League team and played each time. Joe Cronin was named seven times and played six, while Arky Vaughan was named the same number of times but only played in five games. Joe DiMaggio, whose hitting powers have brought him into the spotlight of baseball of late, has been named five times and played as many games. This year Dominic DiMaggio, Joe's younger brother from Boston, has been named as a member of the junior circuit's entry. Brooklyn and the Yankees with six candidates each dominate the respective teams individually.

Like all such sporting classics there are always the heroes and hoboes connected with this annual classic and Carl Hubbell's pitching on the 1934 game was one of the highlights of the series. Some of the stars of other classics include:

1933—Babe Ruth banged an early honor and came up with a great running catch of Chick Hafey's hit that seemed good for a triple as the Americans won, 4-2.

1935—Lefty Gomez pitched three innings and gave up three hits and one run as the Americans scored a 4-1 victory.

1936—Diz Dean's hurling brought the Nations their first triumph. Diz allowed no hits in his opening three innings.

1937—Lou Gehrig drove in four runs. He started Dean's defeat with a homer and later hit a double.

1938—Johnny Vander Meer became the only rookie to win. He gave up only one hit in his openings, three innings. The Americans have won five of the eight games.

The local league standings today are:

Men's Senior

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Corby's A.C.	9	1	.900
Point Anne	7	4	.636
Esquire Jrs.	4	6	.400

SACO	1	8	.111

Games this week — Tonight, Corby's vs. Esquire and SACO at Point Anne; Wednesday, Reliance at Corby's and Friday Esquire at SACO.

Ladies' League

	Won	Lost	P.C.
SWACO	4	1	.800
Big-Z	3	2	.600
Vikings	3	3	.500
Deacons	2	3	.400
Corbins	1	4	.200

Games this week — Tuesday, Eatons at Zellers; Friday, SWACO at Corbins.

South Hastings

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Latta	5	1	.833
Cannifton	4	3	.571
Shannonville	1	6	.143

Games this week—Wednesday, Cannifton at Latta; Friday, Shannonville at Cannifton.

Do you remember when Freddie Welsh won the world lightweight boxing championship with a 20-round decision over Willie Ritchie at London 17 years ago tonight? He held the title until May 28, 1927, when Benny Leonard defeated him by a technical knockout at New York.

Mel Ott sprouts from an ancient baseball family. The Otts of Gretna, La., were always ball-tossers. In the old days when Cleveland trained at New Orleans every year, an uncle of the National league home run king hurled a 1-0 shutout against the Indians, pitching for a semi-pro nine in a spring exhibition game.

Against parental objections, Billy Conn says he married pretty Mary Lou Smith, daughter of a former Major League baseball player. Poppa Smith says he's still very much against the match, but Mary Lou and Conn seem to be quite happy about the whole thing and what's there "Old-man Smith can do about this love-bug thing? Conn and his bride will make a honeymoon and movie-making trip to Hollywood, where Conn is slated to make a talking picture.

Sport Spice — Joe DiMaggio ran his games of consecutive hitting to 48, the same number as there are stars in "Old Glory" . . . . The Dodgers and Yankees substantially increased their respective league leads over the week end and there are no further games until Wednesday. . . . Tonight's dual bill in the City Softball League is of much importance, especially with third place at stake. . . . Jimmy Dykes, manager of the Chicago White Sox, drew an indefinite suspension for allegedly browbeating American League umpires. . . . We always thought it was open season on umpires from May until September (world series excluded) . . . . The Kingston Ponies ran up a record score in the Interprovincial League by beating Smith's Falls 24 to 3 on Saturday. . . . The veteran Bob Elliott cracked out a single, double and triple. . . . Looks as though Charlie Gehringer has come to the end of his brilliant major league career after 16 years of a colorful major league career. . . . and at reduced prices.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

CLOTHING SOLDIER JOB FOR MANY HANDS

Between seventy-five and one hundred thousand workers in more than seventy communities across the Dominion are busy these days turning out the personal equipment of Canadian soldiers as the one above. His equipment costs in the neighborhood of $120 and almost every item is made in Canada. His steel helmet and gas mask were designed in Canada. Scenes of busy activity pictured here are being duplicated from coast to coast as factories work at top speed to turn out the equipment needed for the men enlisting during the current recruiting campaign. — Photos—Director of Public Information.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

Late that afternoon the first reporters reached Halcyon Island. The stranger's telephone call to the New York Clarion had crossed one from the editor of the Richland Daily Press, who had already contacted a New York daily. The story that Natalie Marchbanks, who was formerly Natalie Schuyler, was honeymooning on an island set aside for the use or couples too poor to afford a honeymoon, was news; the fact that she had bestowed some very extravagant gifts on a little nobody and his wife in some hick southern town was also news. Most of the New York papers thought well enough of the tip, at any rate, to dispatch a reporter to find out more about it.

They were all lounging on the beach, as they usually did in the late afternoon, when a boat came speeding toward the pier.

Tom, sitting up and shading his eyes with his hand against the sun glare, said, "Looks as though we were going to have company."

"He's late," said Betsy grimly.

"Who's late?" demanded Tom, puzzled.

"Morton Blake," answered Betsy. "I've been expecting him ever since the morning after the shipwreck."

The boat had come close enough in now, so that they could see there were several people in it — half a dozen men besides the boatman.

"Maybe he's brought over some of his thugs to persuade us to sell," Betsy offered, when Tom conveyed the information that there were a number of people in the boat.

"He wouldn't dare—" began Natalie, and Betsy chuckled dryly.

"Don't sound like a ten-twenty thirty melodrama, lady, until you've met Mort," she suggested dryly. "All he needs is a black mustache, and a thick-handled whip to be Simon Legree as of today."

The boat had grated against the pier; the boatman steadied it and the six men leaped ashore. They came racing down the beach together and all but tumbled over each other as they saw Natalie, looking lovely, as always, in her yellow lastex bathing suit and wooden-soled beach clogs.

"Miss Schuyler — I mean Mrs. Marchbanks — I'm from the New York Clarion. I'd like an exclusive story from you about this Simpson affair, and why you are honeymooning here—" the first man to reach them demanded breathlessly.

"Hey, you slug, what do you mean 'exclusive story'?" demanded another of the newcomers, and was echoed by his companions. "What do you think the rest of us are doing here?"

The little colony of Halcyon Island stared with startled eyes at the men who surrounded Natalie as though the others didn't exist. The lovely goldens twilight was spattered by questions that showered about Natalie's dazed head like leaves in autumn.

"Is it true you are getting a divorce from Marchbanks"?

"What's the low-down on the twelve-thousand-dollar buggy you gave the kids in Virginia?"

"Any truth in the report that you and Marchbanks are adopting a baby?"

"How about the story that you transferred your entire estate to him the very day you were married?"

"What about the report that he insisted on a million-dollar settlement before the marriage?".

"What are your plans after you leave here?"

Natalie flung up wildly protesting hands and looked toward where Brooks had been standing a moment ago. But he was gone now. She saw him striding down the beach, his hands jammed hard in the pockets of his white duck slacks, his shoulders squared and his head at the angle that told her he was in a murderous rage.

"Oh, Brooks—wait!" she wailed, but if he heard her he did not so much as look back or slacken his pace.

It was then that Donald took charge. Masterfully, he shouldered his way through the group about Natalie and said sharply.

"Hey, lay off you lugs — Patterson, Jordan, Hutchens. What makes you birds think there's a story down here that hasn't reached the papers yet — and with me on the job?"

For the first time the little group of clamoring men seemed aware that Natalie was not alone on the island. They stared at Donald, and one after the other recognized him.

"Well, for Pete's sake, Heath, what are you doing here?"

"Oh, there's no story, eh? Then how come YOU'RE here — you so-and-so?"

"It so happens," Donald assured them haughtily, "that I'm here on my honeymoon — and what's it to you?"

The men stared at him, their eyebrows going up.

"Your honeymoon?" one of them repeated incredulously.

"My honeymoon. Want to make something out of it?" Donald was pretty belligerent about it.

"Sa-a-ay, that's right—you DID get married, you poor nut, didn't you?" said Patterson in a tone faintly touched with pity.

"I did," snapped Donald, "And I can't seem to care much for that tone in your voice, me lad. Just because you're the type of gorilla no girl in her right mind would look at twice, is no reason why you should laugh and show your ignorance when another man is more fortunate."

"Okay. No offense, bully -- keep your shirt on," said Patterson in the patient, long-suffering tone of one willing to go a long way toward peace. "After all, I didn't come here to argue with you. I came to get a story about Natalie Schuyler and her wacky honeymoon—"

"Which is just too darned bad, because there isn't any story," said Donald firmly.

The men regarded him with frank suspicion.

"You wouldn't kid us, would you, mister?" they demanded skeptically.

"I would indeed, and with a high degree of pleasure, if I had anything to gain by it,' Donald admitted frankly.

"And you thought you could get away with it," Patterson contributed.

"Oh, I could get away with it, if I thought it was worth trying—" Donald assured them. Then he changed his tone and said cheerfully, "Look, boys, how'd it be if you fellows sort of took a walk for yourselves while I talk this over with my client—"

"Your client!" they chorused.

"Why, yes— didn't I tell you? I'm public relations counsel—press agent to you, you saps!—for Miss Schuyler. I mean, of course, Mrs. Marchbanks. I can assure you that you will get absolutely nothing out of her in the way of a story without my consent and approval. Right, Mrs. Marchbanks?"

"Right"! said Natalie with a firmness that told the reporters they would be wasting time asking her any further questions.

"So you see, fellows," Donald announced, "you have nothing to gain by being stubborn. But if you'll be nice about it, you may get your story, after all."

"Remind me to break your neck when I see you again, will you?" said Patterson grimly.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was trying to get the stopper out of a little fancy glass bottle, saying to pop, O deer I'm afraid I'll have to give it up. I've been trying to get this stopper out of this bottle off and on for weeks, I mean litterly weeks, and I suppose I'll eventually have to give up graciously, but I can assure you it wont be without a few more determined struggles, she said.

What happens when an inpenetratable bottle meets an invincible woman? pop said. What the thing no doubt needs is a few seconds in the skilled hands of a mechanically gifted man, let's have a look at it, he said, and ma said, With pleasure I'm sure.

And she handed it to him, saying, If you can make the slightest impression on it you're an unmitigated genius, and pop said I accept the title in advance. What's been put in can be worked out, that's a well-known law of physicks, he said.

And he started to try to twist the stopper out with his fingers, only it wouldn't twist, pop saying, So you wont turn, heh? Then maybe you'll pry, he said.

And he took out his penknife and tried to get the little blade under the stopper, saying, Owtch, horse blanket to blazes.

And he started to suck his little finger, ma saying, Willyum be careful, you'll stick yourself.

Do you mean again? pop said. And he tried again mad, and the point of the little blade broke off, pop saying, There, blast it to blazes, my good penknife. Why, this confounded bottle is empty anyway, what do you want the stopper out for? he said, and ma said, Because it's such an attractive little bottle I might have some use for it some time, although it's not actually worth anything.

What the dooce could you use a lot of broken glass for? pop said.

And he got up and threw the bottle out the back window the maddest yet.

AT THE BELLE

"Blood and Sand"

Tyrone Power and Rita Hayworth star in "Blood and Sand" now at the Belle Theatre. "Blood and Sand" is the dramatic story of a humble peasant who conquered Spain by becoming its most famous bullfighter, but who was, in turn, conquered by a beautiful hard-hearted temptress. Although he loses his glory, his honors and his friends, his devoted wife remains faithful to the end.

Highlighting the colorful drama and excitment is the torrid romance between Rita Hayworth and Tyrone Power. One of the greatest love stories of modern times, it accentuates the pace at which the matadors are forced to live and truly portrays the life of one of the world's bravest men—the reckless kings of the bullfight arenas.

Linda Darnell plays the wife and Rita Hayworth the temptress. They head a cast of outstanding featured players which includes Nazimova, Anthony Quinn, J. Carrol Naish, John Carradine, Lynn Bari, Laird Cregar and Vicente Gomez. It has been hailed as a perfect cast, but its most impressive point, say reviewers, is that each role is blended to provide a motion picture masterpiece.

Director Rouben Mamoulian took a troupe of 300 to Mexico City to shoot background scenes for this film of Spanish life. For it is in this new world capital that the charm, colors and atmosphere of old Spain still survive.

The critics have enthusiastically received this latest 20th Century-Fox production and are unanimous in their praise of Tyrone Power's performance. They say that it's the best thing he's ever done. Unstinting praise has also been lavished on the supporting cast, whose acting was undoubtedly inspired by the powerful drama they helped bring to the screen.

Robert T. Kane was the associate producer and Jo Swerling wrote the screen play, which is based on the famous novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

The same program includes the Belle News of the Day and a coloured fun cartoon.

ITALIAN CRUISER

A Violent Explosion

The three Axis supply ships listed as sunk were the Italian steamer Polinnia, 1,592 tons, another ship of about 6,000 tons and one of 8,000. The last "blew up with a violent explosion and is thought to have been carrying ammunition," the Admiralty said

The French vessel was listed as the St. Didier and was reported to have been "detected abusing Turkish territorial waters with distinguishing marks painted out and flying the Turkish flag."

(Lloyds register of shipping lists at St. Didier as a French ship of 2,778 tons.)

Au authoritative source said Turkey had made representations to the British government regarding damage reported caused to Turkish property during the attack on the St. Didier, sunk July 4 near Adalia, northwest of Cyprus. The same source said the St. Didier had been abusing Turkish territorial waters, using them for the transport of war materials to Syria.

Negro Killed Near Sheridan As Car Overturns

Toronto, July 7.—(CP)—A negro, believed to be Cassel Smith of St. Catharnes, was killed and two others injured, when the car in which they were riding overturned on the Queen Elizabeth Way at nearby Sheridan yesterday.

The injured are David H. Grant, Toronto, and Mark Douglas of Hamilton.

It is believed the automobile went out of control, ran into a ditch and turned over four times before coming to a halt.

AUSTRALIANS

The Australian general in command said the question was whether the French would withdraw, or whether the attackers would have to go into the town for a mop-up at close quarters.

North of the Damour line are lesser defences, three miles south of Beirut, to which the French may choose to fall back. However, Beirut, itself, headquarters of Gen. Henri Dentz, then would be well within range of opposing artillery.

Intense Bombardment

The intensity of the Australian pre-dawn bombardment, which was confined to the Vichy military forces and their cannon and tanks on the Damour line, was necessitated mainly by ruggedness of the country, which is full of crags. Walking a mile over it in normal circumstances requires three hours.

Australian artillery opened a withering fire at 1:40 a.m., shortly after 4 a.m. the infantry went into action.

High above the battlefield, opposing aircraft fought. The brief battle ended when one Vichy craft sank behind the hills, obviously in difficulty, and R.A.F. pilots chased another out to sea so far that it may not have been able to return.

The British Mediterranean fleet, with an umbrella of aircraft to ward off possible attack from above manoeuvred slowly up and down before the Vichy defences, hurling shells at them.

Indian Troops Take City

Cairo, July 7 (AP)—The British Middle East command announced today that Indian troops making up the northernmost wing of the Allied army had captured the Syrian city of Demir Kapou, and that British mechanized forces continued their advance toward Homs.

"In the central sector," a communique said, "an important position north of Djezzine has been captured by British forces.

"On the coast, Australian troops have crossed the (Damour) River and are now in contact with the main Vichy position about Damour."

Demir Kapou is a village near the Turkish frontier, 18 miles west of Tell Kotchek and 250 miles east of Aleppo.

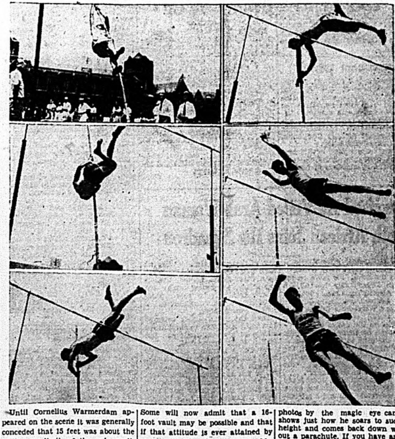
GOING OV ER THE CEILING FOR NEW RECORD



Until Cornelius Warmerdam appeared on the scene it was generally conceded that 15 feet was about the ceiling, or limit, of the pole vault. But since the young man from San Francisco began to "go to town" with his big stick, the experts have been hastily revising their figures. Some will now admit that a 16-foot vault may be possible and that if that attitude is ever attained by man without wings, young Mr. Warmerdam is the man to do it. The San Franciscian already has crossed the bar at 15 feet 5 3-4 inches, and the ABOVE series of photos by the magic eye camera shows just how he soars to such a height and comes back down without a parachute. If you have ambitions to be a pole vaulter, study the series and you will learn more from it than you ever could from a written discription of how Cornelius does it.

BELIEVE WARSHIPS

were attacked with special severity and great explosions and large fires were observed by air crews.

Three German warships, believed badly battered in previous raids, were bombed heavily at the Nazi-occupied naval base of Brest on the French coast as the R.A.F. continued its efforts to reduce the ships to junk. Extensive damage was done to the naval base and harbor as the planes followed up a smashing attack of last Friday night on Brest.

Lighter attacks were made on Duesseldorf and Cologne and on the Port of Emden and docks at Rotterdam in the Netherlands.

In an encounter with a British plane over the Zuider Zee, a Junkers' 88 was shot down. From all these operations, six British planes failed to return.

Dusseldorf Attacked

At Brest, as on Friday, bombs straddled the battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, and the cruiser Prinz Eugen which fled the Royal Navy at the time of the Bismarck sinking. The ships are believed to be so smashed by repeated attacks be so smashed by repeated attacks on enemy territory that they are unable to leave anchorage.

Many Fliers Take Part

The Air Ministry news service said today that fliers from the Dominions, including Canada, as well as from Poland, France, Belgium and the United States, accompanied Royal Air Force bombers in an attack on Northern France yesterday.

The attack was aimed principally at Lille and American Eagle Squadron pilots were credited with one of 11 Nazi planes shot down.

"Except for anti-aircraft fire near the coast the sweep was not interfered with until after the target was reached," the news service said. "Then German fighters appeared. They came in numerous small groups from above, but Spitfires and Hurricanes closed in and held them away from the bombers."

Demands Growing

Intensification of the battering aerial offensive was accompanied by growing demands for outright invasion of the continent while Germany is engaged with Russia in the east.

Declaring that exceptional risks must be taken if victory is to be won, The News Chronicle said:

"Is not this the time to land raiding parties on a big scale in territories as near as possible to the Reich, where they can destroy equipment—perhaps even airfields, delay preparations for invasion (of Britain) and draw off divisions of the German army from hard-pressed Russia?"

Expect Stronger Action

The Daily Herald said "the public expects stronger action and is waiting for it with increased impatience as the days slip by."

During last night a few Nazi planes flew over the British Isles and bombs were dropped in East Anglia and north and southeast England points. Some casualties were caused. Three enemy aircraft were shot down.

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted the R.A.F. attacks on the Ruhr and said some damage and casualties were caused.)

The big Blenheim bombers which sailed into yesterday's attack at dawn struck at steel and engineering works and railways at Lille. Nine British planes are missing from this sweep.

Airfields Damaged

The main night bomber force Saturday night and early Sunday struck at munitions factories and steel works in western Germany, while U. S.-made, twin-motored Douglas fighter-bombers hit at Nazi airfields in occupied France.

Returning pilots said they left oil dumps at Rotterdam in The Netherlands burning fiercely and started a long series of explosions at Magdeburg, site of a branch of the Krupp munitions works.

They also fired oil dumps at Munenster. At Bielefeld they hit an important power station and a gas works nearby blew up while other fires broke out in the town.

A Sunday communique said Royal Air Force bombers sank four Nazi patrol vessels in the North Sea yesterday and damaged two others, while hits were made on barges off the Netherlands coast and on a German ship of 3,000 tons and another of 800 off Norway.

GERMANY

German armored units are in the White Russian capital of Minsk, German claims outline Red army retreats well into Russia proper in the north and to the eastern fringes of Soviet Buffer territory in the South.

Just north of the latter front, in the Galicia area, the High Command claimed German forces were pursuing the Russians on a broad sector across the Secret River, east of German-captured Lwow and almost at the border of the Russian Ukraine.

North of the Pripet Swamps, it added, German forces are pressing forward toward the Dnieper and upper Dvina Rivers, and in the northernmost battle areas "operations of German and Finnish troops continue on schedule."

Without locating the hole it claimed had been punched in the Stalin line, D.N.B., reported German forces still advancing from the Volhyniaarea, west of the Ukraine capital of Kiev.

Russian forces, it said, failed to hold strongly-armed modern casemates after Red army rearguard units had been crushed.

Capture of Minsk four days ago was claimed by D. N. B., Nazi propaganda and news agency, which quoted a Nazi war reported as saying a mechanized division had rumbled into the city and begun the work of mopping up.

The German High Command's latest communique did not mention Minsk, but said operations against the Stalin line were continuing "according to plan" and claimed that the number of prisoners taken between June 22, the day the invasion began, and July 5th totalled 300,000.

A special communique claimed 52,000 Red troops had "deserted" west of Minsk.

The German press, commenting on this report and on an earlier report of the surrender of 20,000 Russians, spoke of a revolt, involving "political and military leadership."

Claim Air Successes

The High Command's regular communique yesterday claimed the Soviet Air Force lost 281 planes Saturday while the Nazis lost 11. The Berlin propaganda radio estimated the Russians have lost more than 7,000 planes in two weeks.

In speaking of operations against the Stalin line, the communique said nothing of the armored spearhead which had been reported in contact with the main Soviet defences along the Dnieper River at Orsha.

It noted, though that further air attacks were made on the rail and highway junctions at Smolensk, the ancient industrial city and railroad centre on the Dnieper, 70 miles upstream from Orsha and 230 miles west of Moscow. The city previously had been reported in flames from continual aerial hammering.

"In the region of Zhitomir (in the Ukraine) over 500 Soviet trucks were destroyed and 18 railroad cars were seriously damaged by bomb hits and airplane guns," said the communique.

NORTHBROOK FIRE

Whiteman, Lionel Lloyd and Gordon Woods were quickly enveloped by the flames.

Foresighted firefighters quickly drained the gasoline from the tanks in front of two garages owned by Gordon Woods, which were directly in the path of the flames, preventing an explosion which would have menaced the United Church and a hotel directly opposite.

Neighbors removed some of the contents from the homes of the Morley and Lionel Lloyd houses. The families were away at the time.

Residents of the village especially those affected by the fire, paid tribute to scores of American tourists en route to and from holiday spots and who stopped and assisted the firefighters in their efforts to reduce the fires.

Forestry Rangers Assist

Crews of men were rushed to the scene from the Forestry Stations north of the village but by the time they arrived the flames had laid waste to an area over two hundred yards in length. Only smoking ruins remained.

Neighboring communities could not be contacted owing to dearth of telephone service. Tweed, thirty miles away, did not know of the blaze until a late hour as the Northbrook telephone system was closed at the time.

Residents who lost their homes and other buildings through the fire stated today their intentions of rebuilding as soon as possible. A strange coincidence is seen in the fact that exactly twenty-one years ago another disastrous fire wiped out the entire village.

Chief of Police Clair Hayes of Tweed, assisted by others, kept traffic lanes clear and assisted the firefighters in their efforts.

Loss is said to be partially covered by insurance.

USED TO PAD OUT

trov region toward Pskov, an anchor of the Stalin line.

"In the night fighting, our troops inflicted on the enemy tanks a heavy defeat," said a Russian communique.

Likewise repulsed, according to the Russians, were German attacks aimed at forcing the Dvina River line, near Polotsk, northwest of Orsha and thrusts into the Ukraine in the vicinity of Novograd Volynski and into Bessarabia at unspecified points.

South of Polotsk, in the Lepel region where the Germans were seeking to outflank the Berezina River defences in a drive toward Orsha, the invaders were said to have taken a defensive stand following counter-attacks against motorized troops.

At sea, the Soviet communique reported a battle yesterday between Russian destroyers and enemy warships at the mouth of Riga Bay in which two enemy destroyers were said to have been sunk. An enemy submarine also was reported sunk in a minefield in the Gulf of Finland.

No substantial changes were reported overnight in the positions of Soviet and German armies along the vast front, where the Red army's counter-attacks in some places were said to have thrown the Nazis onto the defensive.

Of the positions along the fighting front a Moscow communique declared:

During last night fighting continued in the direction of Ostrov, Polotsk, Lepel and Novograd Volynski.

"In the Ostrov direction our troops repulsed repeated attempts by enemy motorized and mechanized troops to break through toward the northeast. In night fighting our troops inflicted on the enemy a heavy defeat.

Enemy Defeat at Dvina

"In the Polotsk direction heavy fighting took place with the enemy who attempted to force the western Dvina, but all his attempts were repulsed with heavy losses to him.

"In the Lepel direction the enemy, following our counter-attack against his mechanized troops, went over to the defence. Fighting continues . . .

"In the Novograd Volynski direction enemy motorized troops attempted to break through toward the east but by counter-action of our troops all the enemy attempts were repulsed.

"In the Bessarabian sector of the front the enemy, suffering very heavy losses, was thrown back to his previous position."

Heavy fighting continued along a 400-mile front from Estonia to the Pripet Marshes in southern White Russia and along the 400 miles stretching south from the Marshes to the Black Sea, but the Russians said heavy losses had blunted the Nazi drive to the East.

In its third week, the war still was a Gargantuan test of power between troops and guns on wheels with large scale tank fights raging near Ostrov, just east of the Estonia-Latvia border; Lepel, in the Lake country of northern White Russia; and Novograd Volynski, 140 miles west of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Tremendous Nazi Losses

A Soviet communique described Nazi losses as tremendous, both along the main fighting front and from guerilla operations ordered by Stalin in territory the Nazis overran during the first two weeks of battle.

Large German forces were reported wiped out by artillery pounding. Railroad and transport forces moving up behind the Nazi lines were said to have been wiped out by guerilla bands who struck and disappeared.

Of fighting along one river (possibly the Berezina in the hotly contested central front) the communique declared:—

"The south bank of the river was strewn with the bodies of many hundreds of German soldiers.

Russians Charge With Bayonets

"Fresh enemy reserves thrown into battle crossed to our shore at the cost of tremendous sacrifices.

"With a resolute bayonet charge, units of the 'X' Division threw German Fascists back across the river, inflicting heavy casualties on them.

"The bodies of several thousand Fascist soldiers remained behind on the field of battle and many more perished in the river".

trgeJCe

The Russians gave this as the situation at key points along the front from north to south after the week-end of fighting:

Soviet counter attacks inflicted heavy losses on the Nazis in the Ostrov sector.

Fierce fighting developed in the Dzisna sector between Dvinsk and Polotsk.

At Lepel big tank battles developed in which "mechanized enemy troops which had been subjected to tank attacks were forced on the defensive."

Heavy Fighting Develops

The Red army took the offensive against the Germans in the Norisov sector of the Berezina River front where heavy fighting developed.

Near Bobruisk repeated Nazi attempts to cross the Dnieper River were repelled.

Soviet forces held stubbornly against attacks by mechanized forces driving into the Ukraine in the Novograd Volynski region.

Fierce fighting developed in Bessarabia where German and Rumanian troops attacked toward Balti.

Moscow greeted seven more British officers arriving to reinforce Britain's military and economic mission to Russia. The new arrivals included air raid defense and fire-fighting experts of army, navy and air force officers.

HEAR 2 OFFICERS ARE ACQUITTED IN COURT MARTIAL

Official Announcement to This Effect Expected With Findings on Probe Into Nazi Escapes Last April

REPORT RECEIVED

Ottawa, July 7—(CP)—Two officers who faced a general court martial following the escape of 28 German prisoners of war in April from a northern Ontario internment camp, have been acquitted, it was learned on good authority today.

Official announcement to this effect was expected soon, along mechanizezd forces stationed here.

Two of the German prisoners of war were killed when they resisted efforts to recapture them. Two others managed to get as far away from the camp as Medicine Hat, Alta., but the rest were recaptured in the general camp area.

At the time of the mass break the camp was under the command of Maj. C. B. Lindsey as acting commandant.

After the men had been rounded up defence headquarters announced Brig. Gen. J. F. L. Embury, judge of the Saskatchewan Court of King's Bench, would preside over a court of inquiry into the mass break. Hearings were held at the camp and headquarters here recently announced the report of the inquiry had been received.

One-Third Rate R. R. Fare for Soldiers on Leave

Ottawa, July 7 —(CP)— Soldiers on annual embarkation leave from training centres at Debert, N.S., Sussex, N.B., and London, Ont., already are enjoying the new one-third rate railway fares under an arrangement between the Defence Department and the railways and by Thursday the plan will be in general operation throughout Canada, defence headquarters said today.

Millers to Confer On Vitamin Bread

Ottawa, July 7—(CP)—Development of a standard Canadian bread loaf containing a larger measure the health-giving vitamin content of wheat will be the subject of a conference of millers now being arranged, Agriculture Department officials said today.

Dr. L. H. Newman, Dominion cerealist, said the millers' co-operation is vitally important to progress of the higher-vitamin bread program as adjustments in machinery will be necessary to preserve the vitamin qualities in flour.

To give the required vitamin content, many bakers are making use of yeast, which adds to the cost of production. Experiments by cerealists using Canadian grain has shown that vitamin qualities can be maintained by changes in the milling process.

U.S. Stake in Asia "Far Too Real" To Be Abandoned

Washington, July 7 —(AP)— Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt said today that America's stake in Asia is "far too real" to be abandoned" in order to appease the political machine which now happens to be in power in Tokyo"

His address, emphatic in serving notice that the United States would resist any Japanese attempt to raise a military barrier between America and the Far East, was prepared for exercises of the Washington Chinese colony in observance of the fourth anniversary of the outbreak of Sino-Japanese fighting.

McNutt warned that a German conquest of Russia might bring Japan into outright military collaboration with the Axis, and declared China and the United States must take action now to prevent the "unification of the totalitarian battlefront" across all Europe and Asia.

The former High Commissioner of the Philippines predicted ultimate Chinese victory—a victory in which China will command the Orient."

Wave of Resistance Steadily Rising Against Invaders

Moscow, July 7 (CP)—"A wave of resistance to the invaders is steadfastly rising in countries occupied by the German Fascists," a Russian communique said last night.

The communique said that in The Netherlands disturbances have assumed such menacing dimensions that German troops "resort to arms for the suppression of the people's discontent, and shoot on the spot citizens who express discontent with the German occupants.

"Inscriptions saying 'the new or- on many homes in Norway. The on many houses in ..orway. The number of sentences passed by German tribunals in cases of offences against the army is growing daily."

Guerrilla activities in German-occupied Poland are expanding, the communique added. "Armed with shotguns, pistols, and rifles, Polish partisans wage a courageous struggle against their enslavers."

German soldiers captured by the Russians reported numerous guerilla actions behind the German front lines. The communique mentioned that one German soldier "described incredible difficulties which a column of trucks carrying fuel to front line tank units had to overcome. "Each hillock, each roadside and bush served as good cover for partisans. German soldiers try to evade night journeys to the front under every possible pretext."

Goodwill Invasion of Legionnaires Ends

Toronto, July 7 —(CP)— The goodwill invasion of American Legionnaires here was a matter of history today.

The gaily-dressed Americans, guests of the Canadian Corps since Thursday, started the homeward trek by automobile, bus and train yesterday following their three-day "siege" of the city.

Climax to their visit was an impressive drumhead service at Riverdale Park when Legionnaires and Canadian Corps members marched side by side. More than 50,000 persons crowded into the huge amphitheatre.

Principal speaker of the occasion was Col. Archdeacon Frederick George Scott, beloved chaplain of the Canadian Corps who spoke to "the boys" again.

Cannon Scott told his vast international audience that "a new heaven and a new earth" would be the aftermath of the present war and that "God has given us in our hands the privilege of being the guardians and promoters of the liberty and freedom of mankind." He said the United States was "Canada's best friend, the Empire's best friend and liberty's best friend" and thanked President Roosevelt for the help given in the democracies' hour of emergency.

The final touch of the invasion came shortly before midnight when the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were lowered from flagpoles at Exhibition Park. Concluding scenes were attended by more than 30,000 citizens.

Officials Hope Fish May Replace Bacon and Ham

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, July 7 (CP)—Department of Fisheries officials and the Fish Industry are hopeful many Canadians can be persuaded to eat fish cakes or fried filets of fish for breakfast instead of bacon or ham, now that the call has gone out for Canadians to eat less pork products.

A promotion program to increase fish consumption has been going on for some time, department officials said today, and demonstrators move from town to town telling housewives the benefits of fish in the diet, and showing how to cook it.

With the Bacon Board asking consumers to cut down their consumption bacon and ham and other pork products and prices of other meats fairly high department officials regard this as an opportune time to get Canadians into the way of eating fish.

Both Rich in Proteins

"I am sure the fish industry will be fully alive to this oportunity," said Dr. D. B. Finn, Deputy Minister of Fisheries. While bacon and fish taste different both are rich in protein and from a nutritive standpoint are similar, he said.

Along the coasts cakes made from salted or dried fish are a fairly common breakfast diet but inland they are not much used.

Canadian fish exporters are finding a brisk sale for dried and salted fish in the West Indies. Before the war Norway and Newfoundland supplies most of that market but with Norway no longer able to export Newfoundland and Canadian fishermen are shipping great quantities of fish there.

Says Production 'On Schedule or Ahead' in U.S.

New York, July 7 (AP)—United States production is "on schedule or ahead" throughout the country, according to a survey by the National Association of Manufacturers.

The machine-tool bottleneck of last January has been largely eliminated but skilled labor and materials still are needed.

A major source of present delays in production was found in changes in specifications after orders had been placed, 59 per cent of the manufacturers reporting this difficulty.

Lease-Lend Cargoes Reported Reaching Suez at Fast Rate

Deliveries of Tanks and Bombers Accelerated to This Schedule in Two Months

FIRST INFORMATION

Washington, July 7 (AP)—United States ships bearing lease-lend cargoes are reported to be reaching the British—Middle East command at the rate of almost one a day.

Deliveries of munitions from tanks to bombers have been accelerated to this schedule in less than two months for it was on May 9 that the Maritime Commission disclosed that arrangements were being made to start the first shipments.

Authoritative officials with knowledge of the lease-lend programs progress revealed Sunday that between 20 and 25 American-flag ships are sailing each month for Egyptian ports by way of either the Atlantic or Pacific routes to the Red Sea.

This was the first specific information on the subject. It tended to bear out guarded testimony given to a Senate Committee recently that a "huge amount" of lease-lend material had been shipped to the Middle East, to China and to India.

Net Recognizing Zone

The shipments going to Egypt must pass through a zone in the Red Sea which the Nazis have declared an area of active operations in their counter-blockade. The United States has not recognized the Nazi proscription of the area, and the American-flag ships apparently have been negotiation it without loss.

At the time Germany banned the area during the period of her activity in the Mediterranean theatre of war, experts voiced doubts she could make the blockade effective because of the zone's distance from her air bases in Greece and Crete. The belief then was that she could do little more than to mine the area by plane occasionally.

Some of the first lease-lend cargoes to arrive in Egypt included speedy new-type 13-ton tanks which helped Britain replace mechanized equipment lost in Greece and in North Africa. A number of the tanks already have been in action, and it was reported that they are satisfactory.

Other material included bombers, fighters, field artillery, other guns and ammunition. The planes and some of the weapons are understood to be in use in the Syrian campaign.

Has Fought In Seven Wars With Five Armies

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—Capt. Alex. McLeod, a former United States test pilot who has fought in seven wars with five armies has found a place in the new conflict. He is the only non-Norwegian holding a commission in the Royal Norwegian Air Force here.

Capt. McLeod is chief technical instructor in the R.N.A.F. Technical School at "Little Norway" Camp.

He has high praise for the Norwegians in training here. "I've seen them go into the air and pull off formations that for the number of hours training they have is astounding. I've seen lots of patriotism. They don't talk much about theirs, but I've never seen a bunch of fellows who live it so deeply."

Prime Minister Prepares for Day Of Speech Making

Prince Albert, Sask., July 7—(CP)—After a week-end of relaxation on the shore of Lake Waskeiu in Prince Albert National Park, Prime Minister Mackenzie King prepared for a day of speech-making in this city, heart of the constituency he represents in parliament.

The Prime Minister will be guest at a civic luncheon and in the evening will address an open air meeting of his constituents in aid of the recruiting campaign.

Significant of the non-political nature of Mr. King's visit on this occasion, he will be thanked at the night rally by John Diefenbaker, Conservative member of parliament for Lake Centre and Saskatchewan Conservative leader who resides here.

To Visit Training Centre

In the afternoon Mr. King will visit the Prince Albert Royal Canadian Air Force training centre and witness a parade by units of with findings of the court martial.

The Prime Minister will leave for Regina tonight immediately after the open air rally and a busy program has been arranged for Tuesday in the Saskatchewan capital. On Wednesday he will be in and about Brandon, in Southwestern Manitoba, and Thursday he will address a luncheon gathering in Winnipeg, the last engagement before reaching Ottawa Saturday morning.

Saturday night he walked through the Lake Waskesiu settlement, visited the pleasure boat docks and the power house, and talked with old friends of the district. Sunday afternoon he attended a reception held at the cottage of Mr. Justice T. C. Davis of the Saskatchewan Supreme Court, now Associate Depputy Minister of National War Services.

85 Reported Killed When Lightning Strikes Theatre

Guadalajara, Mexico, July 7 (AP)—At least 85 persons were reported killed and 11 injured seriously last night when lightning struck a crowded motion-picture theatre, causing the audience to stampede. Most victims were trampled in the struggle to escape from the building, which caught fire and collapsed.

Authorities estimated 2000 persons were in the theatre at the time.

Firemen, police and soldiers aided in removing bodies to the morgue which was stormed by several thousand frantic citizens seeking to learn whereabouts of relatives.

Patrons Become Irate As Circus Doesn't Go On

Detroit, July 7 (AP)—Promotion men billed a thrill circus here yesterday as a "previous to war" — and it was almost just that.

Les Golden, a representative of the American Guild of Variety Arts (A.F.L.) stepped in and stopped the show until performers were paid.

Larry Sundrock, promoter, said he couldn't do that, for other creditors had been sticking too close to the box office.

When announcement was made that the show wouldn't go on, irate patrons stormed the box office, demanding their monew back; set fire to one car, damaged show equipment, cut water hoses and injured several persons.

Disguised As Veiled Arab Woman South African Joins His Squadron

BY GODFREY ANDERSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Royal Air Force on the Western Desert, July 7.—(AP)—A South African Tomahawk pilot, who fooled German sentries by his disguise as a veiled Arab woman leading a camel, is back with his squadron on the desert today.

Although he tramped 100 miles across the sand in constant danger of discovery by enemy patrols, the worst he suffered was blistered feet and a riotous welcome as "the glamor queen of the desert".

The 22-year-old pilot, whose home is in Johannesburg, was shot down by anti-aircraft fire while ground-strafing Nazi motor columns June 18 in Cyrenaica. When his American-made plane crashed in a wadi he leaped out unharmed and ran into the desert to escape German patrols rushing to the wreck.

For six days he hid in a deep waterhole, sometimes scarcely daring to breathe when the Germans passed within a short distance of the spot where he lay. The seventh day all seemed quiet. With an Arab guide he crept out disguised as a veiled native woman. Traveling nights, he pushed across the desert, preferring to walk rather than endure the discomfort of a jolting camel's back.

Once the camel nearly betrayed him when it decided to kneel in the middle of a desert track as an Italian truck approached.

"It was a stubborn, disagreeable beast and tried to bite me", he said.

When his beard grew too thick for a veil to conceal, he changed sex overnight. Came the dawn and the grubby camel driver was hailed from a passing tank. He thought the game was up till a voice cried in English:

"Who the hell are you?"

When he returned to his camp he found he had been posted as missing and all his kit sent back to base.

This is the second time this pilot has returned afoot. He walked back into the Sudan from Ethiopia earlier in the war.

Ninety Per Cent. Norse Airmen Are With Allies

Crown Prince Says Most of Them Escaped From Norway at Time of Invasion

London, July 7 (CP)—Crown Prince Olaf of Norway told a luncheon gathering today more than 90 per cent of the Norwegian air force pilots had escaped their country and were fighting with the Allies.

He said the Norwegian air force had been re-formed in Canada in June of last year with a nucleus of 20 pilots.

The Prince added a vast majority of Norwegians are not co-operating with the Nazis in Norway and had lived a year under the "new order and didn't like it."

"Norwegians have crossed the North Sea in every sort of ship, including rowboats and sailing ships to participate in the common cause against aggression," he said.

"I have spoken to many of these people and find they had been driven here by love of their country and freedom. When the war is over and victory won, I hope we will be able to say Norway has pulled her weight in the struggle for the freedom of humanity."

SKY TROOPERS OF U.K. PERFORM

Drop From Low Level and Stage First Demonstration for Canadian Army

By ROSS MUNRO
(Can. Press War Correspondent)

Somewhere in England, July 7—(CP Cable)—Daring British parachute troops dropping from low level staged their first demonstration for the Canadian army today with two Canadian cabinet members, Air Minister C. G. Power and Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie, Canadian Army and Air Force chiefs, and 5,000 troops as spectators.

Accompanied by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Corps Commander and Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the ministers saw two plane loads of parachute troops drift to earth from the troop-carrying aircraft. After the demonstration they chatted with the sky troopers. Later they inspected a Quebec regiment and then lunched at Canadian Corps Headquarters.

Canadian Ministers Pay Tribute

Speaking after the luncheon, attended by High Commissioner Vincent Massey and the largest group of senior officers ever together at headquarters, Messrs. Power and Mackenzie paid tribute to the corps and its leader and stressed the important undertaken in this war. playing in Britain's defence.

"We learned from the highest authority that the Canadians are on the right of the line and in a key position for the defence of this heart of the empire", Mr. Power said. "Your job is one of the most imoprtant undertaken in this war. The whole empire has faith in the corps".

Mr. Mackenzie said "there is a deep feeling of admiration and esteem in Canada for the overseas army and those leading it", adding that no Canadian citizen ever commanded more affection and admiration than Gen. McNaughton, under whose guidance the corps had been made one of the finest armed forces in the world.

"We will return to Canada ceaseless crusaders for your every need and such things as equipment and supplies", the Pensions Minister added.

Butler's Barracks At Niagara-on-Lake Removed by Militia

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Highways Minister and Chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission, said today that military authorities at Niagara-on-the-Lake had removed and destroyed a building on the edge of the Niagara military camp known as Butler's Barracks, and said the removal was "an unnecessary piece of vandalism."

Mr. McQuesten said the building was probably the most important and interesting structure in Upper Canada. It was used to house Butler's Rangers during their campaigns in the Revolutionary War and was the base of operations for this band.

The barracks was a source of great interest to people from the United States and was a good tourist attraction, Mr. McQuesten said.

"We have far too few of these memorials linking us to the past, and its removal is a matter of lasting regret, reflecting on the stupidity and careless ignorance of men who should know better than to destroy it," said the Minister.

Republics Fusion To Help Halt Peru-Ecuador Strife

Washington, July 7—(AP)—Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said today he was sure the United States and all other American Republics were anxious to be of service in halting hostilities that have broken out between Peru and Ecuador over an ancient border dispute.

Asked whether the government had received any reports indicating that "outside influences" were provoking the Peru - Ecuadorean clashes, Welles replied by quoting an old Spanish proverb: Very often in muddy waters fishing is good.

Oxford Council Opposes Queues Except for Buses

London, July 7 (AP) — Britain is prepared to buck that line of people tugging, shoving, perspiring and waiting in turn to buy everything, anything.

With virtually everything rationed, queues form for nearly every object from birdseed to bath soap.

Rising criticism against queues which block traffic is being led by the town of Oxford.

The Oxford Council announced it was planning to make illegal all queues except those for buses in the centre of the city.

"Many people," said the Mayor, "are going into queues without knowing what they are queuing up for."

"Queuing," declared a councillor, "is a disease which should be attacked in its early stages."

However, it is hard to blame the citizens of London. They see a queue of persons and, reasoning that they must be waiting for something good, jump into the end of the line.

Port of Palermo Heavily Attacked

Cairo, July 7 (AP)—The Royal Air Force today announced several large ships were hit by bombs in a raid by British bombers on the port of Palermo on the Italian Island of Sicily.

"Bomber aircraft of the R.A.F. raided enemy shipping in the harbor of Palermo yesterday," said the daily communique.

"The attack was particularly successful, heavy damage being inflicted on a number of vessels. Two bombs hit a ship of 8,000 tons, and hits also were made on ships of 5,000 and 2,000 tons, respectively.

"A ship of 1,000 tons which was set on fire by three bombs emitted clouds of black smoke accompanied by an explosion. Another 5,000-ton ship was hit by incendiaries.

"Pilots and rear gunners of our aircraft heavily machine-gunned cruisers in the harbor. The attack caused great confusion and alarm, and occupants of small craft were seen leaping into the water.

"When the raiders were four miles away from their target, explosions were still taking place near the dry dock."

Steps May Be Taken To Curtail Consumption Of Gasoline, Oil

Ottawa, July 7 (CP)—Some steps to curtail non-essential consumption of gasoline and oil in Canada in a manner which will not affect the flow of American tourists to the Dominion are expected to be announced in the near future, possibly this week, sources usually well informed said today.

There was no word here as to the nature of the steps contemplated. The expectation was they would be announced by Oil Controller Geo. Cottrelle of Toronto, or Munitions Minister Howe.

Discussions on the subect of oil and gasoline conservation are known to have been held between United States and Canadian representatives.

A tanker shortage, due to the war at sea, has made some conservation steps necessary, it was said.

Mr. Cottrelle and Mr. Howe both recently visited Washington and Mr. Howe has announced already that Canada would follow the lead of the United States in this matter. There have been frequent hints in the capital of impending conservation steps, including some measure of rationing.

Mrs. Helen Scott is suffering from a severe back injury and a possible fracture of the vertebrae. Mr. Scott received a severe scalp injury in the accident and may suffer from a concussion. Mrs. Thomas Scott received facial cuts.

Heavy Electrical Storm Visits Toronto

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—A heavy electrical storm broke over Toronto and parts of Western Ontario suddenly this afternoon, causing interruptions to Hydro service.

Heavy rain and wind let up after about an hour.

Caught in the start of the storm while taking off in Toronto Bay, a Royal Norwegian Air Force seaplane made a hurried forced landing and was assised to shore by a Toronto lifesaving boat.

At Galt, there were three Hydro interruptions and a transformer was struck by lightning.

Urges Elimination Of Impost on Articles For National Defence

Washington, July 7 (AP)— War Secretary Henry Stimson, it was learned today, has urged Congress to enact legislation permitting the United States Treasury to eliminate import duties on any article certified by any department or agency to be useful for National Defence.

The proposal has drawn charges from opponents it would give the administration a free hand to eliminate tariffs at will.

Stimson supported the legislation in a letter to Chairman Robert Reynolds (Democrat, North Carolina) of the Senate Military Committee.

U.S. NAVY AT ICELAND

RUSSIANS CUT WIDE SWATHS IN RANKS OF HUNS

INDUSTRIAL GERMANY FEELS WEIGHT OF R.A.F.

35 Heavy Tanks, Two Battalions Claimed Destroyed

Reds Claim German Drive to Capture Leningrad Repulsed with Heavy Losses to Enemy.

FUTILE EFFORTS

BY HENRY CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, July 8.—(AP)—The Red Army was reported to be cutting wide swaths in the ranks of the Germans today in fighting concentrated largely at strategic river crossings.

The Russians struck their heaviest blow south of the Ukrainian city of Novograd Volynski, a communique said, and also inflicted heavy losses on the Germans in defending the Dnieper ad Dniester Rivers in the central and southern sectors.

A fierce sun beat down on hard, dry battlefields.

Lines of Battle

The communique indicated the lines of conflict throughout the vital 600-mile central front, upon which the Russians rely for the defence of Moscow, stretched tightly, almost directly north and south, between Ostrov, on the Latvian frontier, and Mogilev Podolski, on the Dniester at the Bessarabian border.

Destructions of four German units totalling approximately 6,000 men was specifically announced in Moscow.

The heaviest toll of Nazi forces apparently was taken along the Dnieper river front, where 35 heavy German tanks and two infantry battalions were reported destroyed, and in the shell-blowed fields of the Western Ukraine where two regiments were reported wiped out by Russian counter-attacks.

To the north, where German mechanized forces have been driving through the Ostrov area northeast toward Leningrad, strong Soviet resistance stemmed the German drive, the Moscow communique said.

It reported fierce fighting, too, in the Borisov area of the Baltic front against a drive toward Bolotsk on the Upper Dvina.

In the central region of Lepel, where fighting has centred along the canal linking the Dvina and the Upper Berezina, the Russians declared Soviet and German troops were locked in attack and counter-

Nazis Claim Trickery a Big Factor in Russian Resistance Along Whole Front — At Stalin Line.

HAMMER ZHITOMIR

Berlin, July 8 —(AP)— The German army claimed today its attempt to crack the Stalin Line is "proceeding on schedule" and the German air force was reported to have virtually destroyed Zhitomir in an effort to open a road to the Ukraine.

Hitler's headquarters returned to a single-sentence report on the tremendous conflict, saying: "Operations on the eastern front are proceeding on schedule."

Unofficial accounts, however, declared that the German army flinging itself upon Russian barbed defences had to contend with every imaginable form of defence.

The Nazis claimed that on the southern wing of the front a "pursuit of the enemy" was in progress on the road to Kiev, capital of the wheat-producing province. D. N. B. Nazi propaganda and news agency, claimed penetrations of the vast Stalin line were made in this area. The Nazi High Command made no such claim.

Nazi planes hammered at railway facilities about Zhitomir, a city of 73,000, 80 miles southwest of Kiev and 200 miles northeast of Lwow. Two railroads cross there, making the city important for the movement of Russian troops in and out of the Northern Ukraine.

In the vital centre sector where the Nazis were pictured as hammering at the Stalin line, the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland in describing how German troops have to keep their wits forever about them, said fields of Russians, mistaken for corpses, sometimes spring to arms and open murderous fire on Nazi soldiers.

War As Pictured in Berlin

Russian armored car crews, when their vehicles are put out of action, will disappear in fields of high grain, only to turn up suddenly elsewhere to begin a fierce sniping action.

In general terms, as pictured in Berlin, the situation at the front was this:

Extreme north—the situation is satisfactory to German and Finnish arms.

The Baltic Front—The Germans were bombing the Russians east of Lake Peipus along the Estonian-Russian frontier.

Central Front, north of Pripet Marshes—The Nazis were hurling themselves in a broad front against the Red defences along the upper Dvina River, which flows north to the Baltic, and the Dnieper which flows south to the Black Sea.

Behind this front, the city of Smolensk, 90 miles northeast of Minsk and 230 miles southwest of Moscow, was reported almost constantly being bombed.

South of Pripet Marshes —The Germans are pursuing the Russians after the reported capture of some bunkers in the Stalin Line.

FINNS MAKE CLAIM

Helsinki, July 8 —(AP)— A Finnish communique claimed today that Russian parachute troops landed in Finland have been "rendered harmless." It claimed four Russian planes had been shot down by the Finnish air force.

CAN HAVE WHAT THEY WANT

Cairo, July 8.— (AP)— Oliver Lyttleton, British War Cabinet member who has been elegated to supervise political affairs in the Middle East, said at a press conference today the equipment the United States is sending Britain is "the best material available in the world".

Commenting on the Russian-German war, he said: "We are fighting this war to let everyone have the political system he wants, so we neither approve nor condemn Communism. If the Russians want it let them have it".

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—Synopsis: Rain has been general in southern and eastern districts of Ontario, while in the Lake Superior region it has been fair and cool. The weather continues warm in the Prairie Provinces with scattered showers occuring in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

U.S. OCCUPATION OF ICELAND STEP TO THWART NAZIS

Action Is Intended to Prevent German Pincer Movement on British Supply Lines.

HEMISPHERE DEFENCE

Washington, July 8 —(AP)— Occupation of Iceland by United States armed forces was described in administration circles today as a step intended to thwart a German pincers movement on Britain's indispensable supply lines.

This pincers movement, extending from the Equator to the Arctic, would have as its immediate objective the cutting off of Britain from all overseas supplies, including lease-lend shipments. An informed military authority said an operation of such magnitude constituted a logical prelude to an invasion attempt of Britain.

Should an invasion be successful, he said, the Reich would be in position for a pincers campaign against the Western Hemisphere—the threat the President mentioned yesterday when he notified Congress that American naval forces had landed in Iceland as the occupation vanguard.

Administration supporters generally took this long range view, for they spoke of the occupation as a defence precaution and endorsed it as such. Opposition legislators, however, were apprehensive and voiced fear the action might lead to war.

The move—and its full significance—was the big topic of discus-

British Forces Advance on 3 Syrian Fronts

Cairo, July 8—(AP) — Advances on three Syrian fronts and successful mopping up operations behind Australian lines south of Damascus, the key to Beirut, were announced by the British Middle East command today.

"Indian troops have made further progress westward from Demir Kapou," a communique said of the thrusts towards the Vichy air base of Aleppo which parallels the Turkish frontier.

"Our advance toward Homs from Deir-Ez-Zor is continuing and local gains again have been made north of Djezzine. (British desert forces were reported authoritatively in London to have reached Forgloss, 15 miles east of the rail centre of Homs.)

In the coastal sector south of Beirut, all objectives south of the village of Damour were said to have been occupied and "fighting is continuing."

Reach Rail Centre

London, July 8—(CP)—British desert forces pushing west from Palmyra were reported authoritatively today to have reached Forgloss, 15 miles from the Syrian rail centre of Homs.

Another force moving southwest from Palmyra was said to have joined Free French in the Qaratelne area, almost half-way between Palmyra and Damascus.

London, July 8 —(CP)— A Soviet military mission of army, navy and air force officers arrived today in London.

The mission, which shortly will be in touch with the staffs of Britain's three fighting services, reciprocates for a British mission sent to Moscow, authoritative sources said.

It was understood that Maj. Gen. Golikov, Deputy Chief of the Soviet General Staff, is heading the mission here.

One of the members is Rear-Admiral Kharlamov of the Soviet Naval Staff.

Representatives of Russian technical troops also were included, but no economic delegates accompanied the group.

Russians Hold Up Huns Destroy Supply Columns Strike at Rear by Night

Vichy, July 8 (AP)—For the second successive day, Germans were reported in military advices reaching Vichy yesterday to have been held up along the Russian front.

The Germans are understood to be running into difficulties of supply because of the activity of a Russian Free Corps constantly attacking at the rear and destroying supply columns by night.

Lebedev's eye-witness account of engagement said it was the first between Russian and German surface vessels in the Baltic.

Foresees Day War Will End By Smashing Will of German People to Continue Struggle

Right Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, Main Speaker at Testimonial Dinner in Honor of C. O. Knowles, Editor-in-Chief of Toronto Telegram Which Sponsors British War Victims' Fund, Declares German People and Hitler "Will Crumple Under Our Bombs" if Britain Builds Air Force So Powerful as to Conquer Skies Over "His Central Fortress of Germany" — Mr. Knowles Praises the Provincial Press for Co-operation in Fund.

Toronto, July 8 (Special)—Tribute to the people of Ontario for the magnificent help they have given the war victims in Britain was paid in full measure last night at a $10-a-plate testimonial dinner to C. O. Knowles, editor-in-chief of The Evening Telegram which is sponsoring the British War Victims' Fund.

From the Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner to Canada from the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Leader of the Conservative Party in the Senate; from Sir George Wilkinson, Lord Mayor of London, (Thanks to a broadcasting of a speech by him in the Mansion House) and from Col. the Rev. Sidney Lambert, O.B.E. came praise for those who have, by their sacrifice and generosity, helped swell the fund.

Call For Redoubling of Aid

Coupled with the praise was a clarion call from each speaker for the redoubling of aid to the "bombed, battered, bloody but unbeaten" Britons in the front line.

The testimonial dinner, in the huge banquet hall of the Royal York Hotel was attended by almost 900 leading citizens of Toronto and Ontario. As one result of it the fund will be increased by some $7,000. A demand for a "full out" war effort was made by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, who saw Britain not as the "first line of defence" but as

SOUTHAMPTON SUBJECTED TO HEAVY ATTACK

One of the Heaviest Raids Made on England in the Past Month or More.

FEW CASUALTIES

Southampton, England, July 8—(CP)—Nazi night raiders subjected this port to a sharp attack last night which did substantial damage and killed a number of persons.

The raiders blasted away for several hours in one of the heaviest attacks they have made on Britain recently. The business section was hardest hit.

The last big attack on England was made on the night of May 10 when many of the historic structures of the city of London were ruined.

Incendiaries showering down with high explosives, when the Nazis used dive bombing tactics, started a large number of fires and caused damage to two churches, two banks, a school and a number of private homes.

It was feared the death toll would be raised when results of a hit on a public air-raid shelter are known.

It was reported that four Nazi aircraft were shot down in the area as night fighters made use of bright moonlight to harry the enemy. There also was a strong anti-aircraft barrage.

Six German Ships In Convoy of Eight Hit Off Holland

Nazi Speedboat Off Calais Sunk by RAF Bombers—Munitions Dump or Factory Destroyed at Boulogne.

4 CITIES RAIDED

London, July 8—(CP)—British aircraft shuttled by the hundreds over the English Channel today, the throb of their motors persisting like the roar of a dynamo, in an offensive against German objectives in Northern France which has continued without let-up for the last 24 hours.

Heavy bombers escorted by fighters droned steadily to the attack. It was a powerful continuation of widespread thrusts overnight against targets in Western Germany, Holland, Belgium and France.

Observers at a southeast coast town reported that the sound of the explosions in the operations against France, begun at the Channel coast, were growing fainter, and apparently the R. A. F. bombers were moving farther inland to unload. Britons said they believed the Germans were hard pressed and were taking new measures with anti-aircraft guns to supplement the efforts of fighter forces depleted for the war against Russia.

Cliff watchers last night saw flashes like gunfire at sea and speculated on the possibility that ships, specially armed for anti-aircraft duty with German convoys, were being anchored off the French coast after nightfall under orders to try to knock down some of the British bombers.

A synthetic oil plant between Lens and Bethune in France was attacked in daylight today and seven Nazi planes shot down. The R.A.F. lost six planes in the attacks over France but the pilots of two were safe. The plant was manufacturing oil for the Nazis war machine. Bombs burst across it and one section burst into flames.

Attacks Successful

During the night the British planes dropped heavy explosives on Frankfort, Duesseldorf, Duisburg, Muenster, Krefeld, Cologne, Muenchen-Gladgath, Ostend, Dunkerque and Boulogne, the Air Ministry said. Nine planes were lost.

Weather favored the unending smashes at enemy territory and the attacks were described as "highly successful." Factory buildings and warehouses collapsed and

Finest Existing Norman Church In Europe Reduced to Ash Heap

Periodic announcements have disclosed bomb damage to historic places in London. This first of a series of five articles describes the appearance of the Temple and Grays Inn, both heavily damaged.

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, July 8 (CP)—Ghosts of Shakespeare and other literary giants must brood over the desolation wrought in the Temple by Nazi bombers.

This home of lawyers, savagely battered again and again in heavy raids on London, nurtured and housed many great literary figures. In the Temple Dickens was a clerk in his early days, Thackeray had chambers, Charles Lamb was born and Goldsmith lived.

Whole sections of its placid courtyards and stately buildings have been smashed, including the Temple Church, described as the finest existing Norman Church in Europe.

The altar, pews and choir stalls were reduced to heaps of ashes.

Outside the church the tomb of Oliver Goldsmith was partly buried in rubble. The Latin inscription on his effigy, written by his friend Dr. Johnson, was destroyed. Molten lead fell on the recumbent effigies of 13th Century Knights in Chain Mail that lay in the centre of the circular nave. Nothing was left of the organ with its screen attributed to Grinling Gibbons.

Pitted With Craters

The inner Temple Gardens, which Shakespeare made the scene of the quarrel between supporters of Lancaster and York where red and white roses were picked as emblems of the two factions, are pitted with four bomb craters.

No. 10 Crown Office Court, where Thackeray had chambers, was destroyed. So was No. 2 where Charles Lamb was born and spent the first seven years of his life. Half of brick court was razed. No. 1 occupied by Lord Chief Justice Coleridge and later by Sir James Frazer, escaped with blast damage.

Inner Temple Hall was extensively damaged in early raids and subsequently was burned out. Part of the library was blown away but the books it contained were unharmed. Middle Temple Hall suffered heavy damage later.

Gray's Inn also has been heavily damaged. Only the walls remain standing of its fine Elizabethan Hall, chapel and library. Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" was produced there in 1594.

Residential quarters in Gray's Inn also have been battered. Many were demolished, others suffered blast damage. Bombs have scarred the stately lawns and the sturdy old trees that tower above the time-blackened buildings.

DRIVER OF CAR HELD BLAMELESS FOR BOY'S DEATH

Robert Post, 9, West Huntingdon, Instantly Killed When Struck by Car

INQUEST HELD

West Huntingdon, July 8 (Special)—A coroner's jury probing the circumstances surrounding the death of nine-year-old Robert Post, who was instantly killed last night when struck by an automobile near his home one mile north of this village, exonerated Robert Hind, Bannockburn, driver of the car, from all blame in connection with the boy's death.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Post, according to evidence given at the inquest held in Stirling today under Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, had closed a field-gate after his father had driven a team of horses through it. The lad ran out into the road and failed to see the oncoming automobile. After the impact, Dr. A. E. Carleton, Stirling, was called, but the lad was beyond aid.

Robert Hind, Bannockburn station agent told the jury that he did not see the boy until he ran out from a ditch directly in front of the automobile. "He was only four or five feet away from the car when I saw him. I could do nothing to prevent the accident."

Elmer Post testified that he turned around after the car had passed him, and saw his son run across the road, hesitate, and then run in front of the car. In his opinion, Hind could have done nothing to avert the tragedy.

Provincial Police Constable R. S. Patterson, Belleville, who investigated the accident also testified. The jury deliberated about fifteen minutes before returning a verdict attaching no blame to the driver.

Many Trainloads Of Nazi Wounded Reported in Berlin

New York, July 8 —(AP)— The Columbia Broadcasting System's Stockholm correspondent quoted a traveller reaching Sweden from Germany today as declaring that many trainloads of German wounded are reaching Berlin from the eastern front.

"I counted seven such trains myself when leaving Berlin three days ago," the traveller said. "It is said that the reason the German wounded are sent so far back from the front is that hospitals in Poland and East Prussia are already filled."

Swedish Freighter Sunk in Atlantic

New York, July 8—(AP) — The 2,241-ton Swedish freighter Stig Forthon has been sunk in the North Sea through war action and her crew saved, advices from Stockholm said today.

POWER DISRUPTIONS NOTICED IN CITY

Severe electrical disturbances caused by electrical storms throughout the eastern part of Ontario and Quebec, were responsible for a short disruption of power service in Belleville around four o'clock on Monday afternoon, while power was not at any time cut entirely off. heavy motors at industrial plants in some cases had to be stopped while lights dimmed until only a mere glimmer was noticeable. The disruption was only brief, however, lasting about fifteen minutes altogether.

He was remanded to the custody of the county jail without bail today.

BELLEVILLE BOYS ENJOY SHORT LEAVES

A number of Belleville boys now attached to the 3-47th Battery, R.C.A., and stationed at Petawawa Military Camp, spent the week-end in the city with friends and relatives. Extended leaves of furlough were enjoyed by some of the boys, the majority of whom had to report for duty late today.

HOMEGROWN TOMATOES MAKE APPEARANCE

Luscious, scarlet homegrown tomatoes, said to be the first grown in city gardens, were brought to the office of the Ontario Intelligencer today by Mrs. Walter Breach, 68½ Cedar Street.

The tomatoes were firm, of excellent quality and good size. Prospects of a good yield were good, Mrs. Breach said, adding that this is the third consecutive year that Mr. Breach has been the first to produce the garden-grown vegetable.

DROUGHT HOLDS GRIP ON DISTRICT

Prospects of Grain Crops Reduced to Minimum, Pasture Dried Up

Although other parts of the province have recently been visited by rainfall which will go a long way to relieve a distressing crop situation, the area about the Bay of Quinte, especially Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, is still in the grip of a serious drought that has reduced prospects of grain crops to a minimum and has dried up pastures until a serious falling off in milk production is imminent.

Generally speaking the hay crop in the two counties was far below normal, new seeding being the most affected, although in the isolated case, farmers reported their cuts of clover and alfalfa as being nearly normal.

Fears Felt of Fodder Shortage

Fears of a shortage of fodder for dairy herds and other farm stocks are being entertained for this winter as in addition to a recognized shortage of hay being almost general, there is also the prospect of corn crops being far below normal. In many instances farmers who seldom fail to have a good corn crop will this year have next to none, the dryness of the season having prevented the seed from sprouting, it being necessary to plow up such fields in readiness for a crop of buckwheat should the drought be broken before it is too late for this crop.

Corn Crop Shortage

The shortage of the corn crop will also seriously affect the canning factory pack, it is felt, with difficulty in getting canned corn this winter looming as a possibility as last season's stocks are almost entirely depleted. The pea crop in the Quinte district is also considerably less than normal, officials estimating it at only 20 per cent in Prince Edward County.

The effects of the drought in drying up pasture fields and in a rapid falling off in milk production, together with the prospects of a poor grain crop will be the most seriously felt in this district. Fall wheat and rye is much better than spring grain, the latter in many instances being so short that farmers are expecting difficulty in cutting with the binder. More than one farmer has been heard to say cows have been turned into poorly developed grain fields in an effort to maintain milk production.

COUNCIL RECESSES FOR HOLIDAYS UNTIL SEPT. 1ST

Special Committee on Oiling Reports and Streets to be Oiled Given

OTHER BUSINESS

The last regular meeting of the City Council before the summer holidays saw considerable business transacted and it was necessary to extend the time one hour before the council adjourned. The Council will resume their regular sessions on September first with the committee meeting to be held on August 28th. During the holiday the necessary arrangements to make payments and transact business were made by by-law.

A flurry was caused when a recommendation was introduced "that Fire Chief William Lynch be given a new suit of clothes and allowed to attend the Firemen's Convention with all expenses paid and on city time." It is believed this recommendation was hotly debated in the committee room on Thursday night last and was renewed when the recommendation came up for ratification at the regular meeting on Monday night. Ald. Wotten led the debate on the question when he stated he believed the Fire Chief should attend the convention and that he should be properly clothed as he was a representative of the city. Ald. Clapp voiced the same sentiments, while Ald. Kennedy stated that the matter had been taken up with him and he had told the Chief he could go if he went during his holiday period. "That is not quite fair," said Ald. Wotten. At this point the letter sent by the Fire Chief to the Council was read by the Chairman in Commitee, Ald. Armstrong, and at its conclusion a vote was taken with Aldermen Wotten, Marshall, Butler, Follwell, Pringle and Clapp supporting the motion and Aldermen Kennedy, Rollins, Clarke, Thompson and Jeffery opposing. The letter from the Fire Chief follows:

Re City Council to come .. ..
His Worship Mayor Thompson and Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ontario,

Dear Sirs,—

I have asked my Chairman, Mr. Kennedy, to change his decision in regards to a new uniform. He has refused to do so, so I am appealing to you as a body to see if I may have a new uniform. My present one is getting shabby and I would appreciate a new one.

In reference to the Chiefs' Convention, Chairman Kennedy has been talking to me in regard to this and upon learning the dates of the convention and the time of my holidays his decision is that I must deduct the four days I spend at the convention from my holidays. I do not think this is fair as I am entitled to four days off a month and since March 1, 1941, I have only had one. There was thirty-five dollars set aside for this purpose in our estimate and I would like to know at once if I am going as arrangements will have to be made.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours truly,
W. J. Lynch,
Fire Chief.

Special Oiling

The Special Oiling Committee gave a comprehensive report of their investigations of the various streets in the city, that required oiling and a list was submitted to be oiled and will be published in the local paper. The report as submitted by City Engineer Mott follows:

His Worship Mayor Thompson and Aldermen of the City Council,

Belleville, Ontario.
Re: Street Oiling for 1941

Gentlemen,—

The Special Street Oiling Committee begs to report that an inspection of the streets within the city limits was made on Wednesday morning, July 2nd., and it was recommended that a total of 31 streets, as shown on the attached list, should be treated this season in order to preserve the foundation of the roadway by building up the wearing surface with road oil and pea gravel.

Inspection was also made of several of our paved streets and it was decided that some treatment should be given to those streets where the present asphalt surface is cracking up. West Dundas Street, from the Devil's Elbow to Sidney Street will be given a coating of oil and pea gravel. The north end of Pinnacle Street between Foundry St., and Victoria Avenue will be treated in the same manner. That part of the pavement along each side of the railway tracks on Pinnacle Street between Victoria Avenue and Dundas Street will also be treated for a width of 5' on each side of the track. One block of Station Street pavement between Dafoe Street and Ashley Street will be treated so that it can be examined next Spring after the year's traffic has passed over it.

In order to carry out this maintenance work it will be necessary to purchase approximately 16,000 imperial gallons of liquid asphalt and approximately 900 tons of washed pea gravel.

Advertise Construction

The Council also recommended "that the City Clerk advertise the city's intention of constructing a sanitary sewer on Dufferin Avenue, whether the Public Utilities construct the water mains or not and that we feel the Utilities should carry a portion of the cost and when construction of the sewer is being done we feel this is the proper time to lay water main and would ask the Commission to reconsider the matter in the interest of economy and a copy of the resolution be sent to the Public Utilities." The letter covering this matter from the City Engineer is herewith given:

His Worship Mayor Thompson and Aldermen of the City Council,

Belleville, Ontario,

Re: Dufferin Ave., Sewer and Water Mains

Gentlemen,—

Regarding the construction of a sanitary sewer and water main on Dufferin Avenue between Victoria Avenue and Pine Street, I beg to report as follows:

In my report of May 8th to the City Council I suggested that the Public Utilities Commission be approached with the proposition of having them assume 50 per cent. of the cost of digging and backfilling the trench for the Dufferin Avenue sewer, which would amount to approximately $1,050.00 and also the cost of supplying all material and completing the laying of a 6" water main and a total of 34 water services, which would amount to approximately $1,855.19, so that both the sanitary sewer and the water main could be placed in the same trench.

The Commission replied by letter on June 19th stating its willingness to carry out this work but wanted their costs to be included in the assessment against the abutting properties under the provisions of the Local Improvement Act. This arrangement is entirely different from what I had proposed, as I expected the Commission to finance their work with their own funds.

In conversation with Mr. Scott today he informed me that the Utilities Act gives power to carry out work in the manner suggested by his Commission and this is the way in which the Commission would like the work to be done. However, the Act does not state that this work cannot be carried out in the manner of my suggestion. Mr. Scott's plan is that as soon as the property along this street becomes revenue producing to the Utilities the assessment for water main and services would be deducted from the individual water rates for each particular lot and this amount in turn would be credited to the City by the Commission to reduce the assessment for that part of the debenture covering the Utilities expenditure.

Under this latter arrangement it means that the City, in addition to borrowing the amount of approximately $7,167.02 to construct the sanitary sewer, will have to borrow an additional $1,855.19 to pay the Commission for supplying material and laying their water main and services in our trenches. The City would thus be assuming the total cost of both sewer and water mains on this street until all the lots were disposed of to private owners.

My plan, as I stated before, was to have the Commission pay us the sum of $1,050.00 to cover 50 per cent, of the digging and backfilling and assume the full cost of supplying and laying its water main and services. This would reduce the cost of the sewer construction by $1,050.00 and no assessment would then have to be made for the water main and services.

It is essential to have the water main and services constructed at the same time in order to make use of the sanitary sewer and connections.

I must have a definite decision on this matter at once in order that I may prepare the advertisement for the sanitary sewer construction.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES A. MOTT,
City Engineer.

By-laws To Be Published

Fifty copies of the Revised By-laws will be published according to a recommendation of the Council, while two new typewriters were ordered purchased for the Relief Office and the City Treasurer. The Comptroller will act for the Treasurer and the City Clerk, while they are on holidays. The Kiwanis Club was granted permission to hold a street carnival on August 20th and 21st. The sum of $500 will be expended to make permanent repairs on the retaining wall on the east side of Victoria Park. A lot on Purdy Street that was ordered sold to Fred Day was rescinded by the Council after a number of facts were obtained by the Special Property Committee. Mayor Thompson was given permission to declare Monday, August 4th, as Civic Holiday.

The thanks of the Kinsmen Club and Rev. E. N. O. Kulbeck for use of city property was received and filed. A house and lot at 34 St. Paul Street was not sold to Harry Smith for $160 and new tenders will be called. A house and lot at 74 South George Street was sold to Harry Smith for $250 and a house and lot at 75 South John Street was not sold for the tenders received and new tenders will be called. The house and lot at 1 St. Paul Street was not sold and new tenders will be called. A letter was received from the Public Utilities Commission stating that the bid for the Gas Plant by a Montreal firm was not acceptable and that an answer was requested from the Council to their letter of May 8th. The mayor was asked to secure further information. A number of by-laws dealing with transfer of property to residents in the city were passed also one for making payments during adjournment of council. There being no further business the council adjourned until Monday, Sept. 1st.

OFFICERS-TO-BE GIVEN RIGOROUS PRACTICAL TEST

Future Leaders of Canada's Army Urged to Win Confidence of Men and to Set Example

By JAMES McCOOK

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Brockville, Ont., July 8 (CP) — Examinations are as much a source of anxiety to future army officers as they are to schoolboys and college students.

To the officers' training centre here come groups of young men from all parts of eastern Canada seeking the qualifications which will fit them for commissions in the active army! They are at work a few hours after arrival and registration and allocation of hut number is made.

Progress of the prospective commander of men is watched with the closest attention by the instructor officers. Although a soldier comes with the highest recommendation of a superior at his home establishment, he is required to make the grade at the training centre before his promotion can be approved.

Much of the training is practical, with day and night manoeuvres, mimic attacks and ordinary hard foot-slogging. In addition there are written examination which check on the knowledge being gathered by the students.

When the examination papers come to be checked, the student who is close to the pass mark is sure of consideration. Papers running close to the borderline are referred to a second examiner, who is not informed of the marks given by the other officer.

Checked by Senior

Should one examiner pass the student and the other mark him as having failed, the senior examiner will check the paper himself and give his ruling.

When Defence Minister Ralston and R. Hon. J. G. Coates, former prime minister of New Zealand, inspected the training centre recently they displayed much interest in the collection of rope knots displayed on the walls of a hut used by engineers.

Both the Canadian and New Zealand statesmen had their favorite knots and expressed regret they had been unable to make a more thorough study of what they thought an interesting subject.

When he addressed the training centre students, Col. Ralston said they should imagine themselves in a battle where they had no non-commissioned officers to assist them.

"Let your men know that you know what their job is—that's the way to get their confidence," said the minister.

And that is what the training centre has set out to do, officers said. The men who will be leaders must me able to do everything they will require of their own men, and the training centre will see that they are able to do it—and well.

China's Flag Floats Over City For First Time in History

Chinese Nationals of Belleville and Native Citizens Join in Applause as the Union Jack and the Chinese Flag of Red, White and Blue Break on City Hall Flagstaff—Belleville First City in Canada to Fly Flag of China for Chinese Week

For the first time in the history of Belleville, the red, white and blue of the Chinese National flag fluttered from the City Hall staff.

When the colors of the flag broke out beneath the red, white and blue of a tattered Union Jack yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, the assembled Chinese Nationals of the city and a large gathering of native residents broke out in sustained applause.

Previous to the raising of the flag, Mr. Jialin Jowe, Consul of the Republic of China, Ottawa, briefly addressed his compatriots in their native dialect, and in turn the white residents of the city.

"China appreciates what Britain is doing for her. And on behalf of my countrymen in Belleville, Ontario and the Dominion. I thank you sincerely. Belleville has the honor of being the first city in Canada to fly the Chinese Flag in commenoration of Chinese Week which starts today. In doing this you have left a deep and lasting impression upon me and my countrymen".

The distinguished Chinese guest, who spoke at the weekly luncheon of the Belleville Rotary Club at noon, was officially greeted by His Worship Mayor Thompson, Alderman H. J. Clarke, Alderman Andrew Kennedy and others. The Rev. Dr. James Semple, Bridge Street United Church also expressed greetings.

In the city the Chinese flags flew from atop Chinese restaurants and laundries. It was a gala day in the lives of the Chinese nationals of the city and they celebrated the occasion by closing their places of business during the flag-raising ceremonies.

Consul Jowe was met upon his arrival in the city by William Wong, Dan Lee, Louis Chen and Roy Ling, members of the Belleville federation of Chinese. Following the flag-raising ceremonies, Consul Jowe, Mayor Thompson, Dr. Semple and Aldermen Clarke and Kennedy posed for pictures. A group photograph was also taken of local Chinese nationals.

History Will Repeat Itself, Hitler Will Go the Way Of Genghis Khan and Napoleon

Mr. Jialin Jowe, China's Consul in Ottawa, Speaking to Belleville Rotary Calls Hitler 'the Eccentric Product of Materialism of West' — China, He Says, Follows Mean or Middle Way, Which Has Enabled Her to Stand for Forty Centuries

"Hitler, like Ghenge's Khan and Napoleon, will be defeated, not in the way history tells us they were defeated, but through the momentum of his own ambitions. That is the miracle which pessimists say must happen if Democracy is to defeat the totalitarian states, and it will happen", predicted Mr. Jialin Jowe, Consul of the Republic of China, Ottawa, in a China Week opening day address to the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday.

"History will repeat itself", Mr. Jowe said. "Ghengis Khan hordes over-ran Asia and parts of Europe while Napoleon, an artillery corporal, was an Emperor at 35 years of age and sat on one of the most glamorous thrones of Europe. History tells us that the Khan's empire dwindled away shortly after his death. Napoleon was defeated at Waterloo."

Napoleon, had he been contented with his throne would have died an emperor, and his throne passed on to his son, the speaker declared. "But he did not know when and where to stop and was carried away by his own ambitions. He stood on the shores of France gazing at the white cliffs of embattled Britain and cursing at his own impotency. Today another stands in the same place doing the same thing".

Hitler Eccentric product of Materialism

"Hitler", Mr. Jowe declared, "is the eccentric product of the material civilization of the West. He is trying to lead his people to world domination by his materialistic desires".

"He is like an impulsive boy playing with a toy balloon" the distinguished speaker remarked. "He keeps on blowing and blowing, fascinated by the expansion caused by his efforts. Finally the balloon bursts. The wiser boy stops blowing and enjoys his play with satisfaction at what he has achieved."

The essential part of the Chinese Doctrine is known as the Mean doctrine, the speaker said. This urges people not to do anything in excess, not to enjoy prosperity to its fullest extent. The downfall, or depression invariably follows prosperity. He who rides forward the fastest generally retreats the fastest.

"This doctrine has enabled the Chinese Empire to stand for forty centuries while the Roman, Assyrian, Babylonic, and other empires have crumbled away". The Japanese learned this doctrine from the Chinese years ago, but the new generation forget to absorb its true meaning".

Hitler Will Be Carried to Destruction By Momentum

"By this token, Hitler, who rushes along recklessly, will invariably be carried to destruction by his own momentum".

Consul Jowe recalled the fact that the Sino-Japanese conflict entered upon its fifth year on Sunday. "For four years the Chinese have offered a stiff resistance against the Japanese aggressor, a member of the Axis Powers. Because of this resistance" he said, "one million Japanese troops are bogged down in China. And because of this stiffened resistance, American, British and Dutch possessions have been safe from the Japanese aggressor".

Sino-Japanese War is Far East Front

"China", he said, "is convinced that Britain and the United States are beginning to realize that the Sino-Japanese war is the Far East front of the war of the democracies against the totalitarian states".

"Win or lose", he continued, "our destinies are bound together. After four years of war Japan has not conquered China, and I sincerely believe that Japan can no more conquer China than Germany can conquer Britain".

China Needs Material Aid

In the Far East, the war is at a stalemate, he pointed out. "The Japanese cannot amass sufficient troops to force the issue with China, and China needs the material to drive the invader to the sea. We need help and appreciate what Britain and the United States are doing for us".

"I believe now", Mr. Jowe said in conclusion, "that with American aid going to Great Britain and China, and our ability to fight and take it, the day is not far off when the totalitarian states will see their balloon of world domination bursting right in front of their eyes".

PASSIVE PUNCH

LONDON — (CP) — A former Punch and Judy showman appearing at a Conscientious Objectors' Tribunal said he believed in passive resistance. The court registered him as an objector but suggested he rewrite Punch's script for his next show.

Stalin Line Combined Maginot-Siegfried Wall

Few facts have leaked out about Soviet Russia's Stalin Line, which the German advance is approaching, and there is no reliable basis on which to judge its strength.

Here is the best available picture:—

In general, it is a 1,100-mile man-made barrier running along the dire old Russian western frontier from the Black Sea to the Gulf of Finland, and it was built principally to guard against invasion from Germany.

It combines the features of France's Maginot Line, including great, full-equipped concrete fortresses built underground, with the advantages of Germany's West Wall, which is built in greater depth. Whether or not it can be flanked, as was the Maginot, is a matter of speculation.

The bulk of the Stalin system was completed in 1933, but the Red Army's leaders have added to it and strengthened it continually ever since, and are reported to have installed the most modern machinery available to keep the fortifications impregnable as new weapons of attack have been developed.

Work Speeded Up

Work was speeded up particularly during the last few weeks preceding the German invasion, June 22.

The line begins at the Black Sea and runs east of the Dniester River, boundary between Russia's Ukraine and Bessarabia, which she acquired from Bulgaria last year, about 200 miles to Megilev Podolski.

Here the line turns north and runs for approximately 250 miles to the River Dnieper, going through the vicinity of Zhitomir. The fortifications then follow roughly the Dnieper northward, going beyond for a total of about 350 miles to Vitebsk, then on farther north and slightly eastward for 200 miles to Pskov. From Pskov the line runs approximately 100 miles along the eastern shore of Lake Peipus to the Gulf of Finland.

The Soviet Union has been in general much more secretive about the Stalin line than, for instance, the French were about the Maginot Line. Details, obviously, are military secrets, but the Kremlin has not permitted even general descriptions as much as the French did.

One exception was an article published April 11 in the Soviet army newspaper Red Star — the first mention in the Soviet press of the Red fortifications in several years.

A special correspondent told of entering a great steel and concrete underground fortress through a door concealed in a hillside. Inside he found a warm, well-lighted labyrinth of defence machinery, complete with power plant, dormitory and fire stations.

The guns and machine guns were said to be a unit in a completely fortified zone of fire.

Reserve Stores

These underground fortresses are provisioned with reserve stores for long sieges.

An invader must do more than conquer these Maginot-type fortifications, however, for the Stalin Line runs in depth for distances varying up to about 75 miles in some places. The depth is said to average 25 miles.

The Germans, who built this type of barrier themselves along their French frontier, know that conquering it will not be easy, as attested now by the German press, which admits that stiff resistance is to be expected along the entire line.

This wide Siegfried-type belt is spotted with minor fortifications so placed as to take utmost advantage of the terrain, with hills and rivers and swamps all used in concert with the man-made barriers.

In addition, the Russians are believed to have employed additional strengthening devices, including deforestation of a belt ranging from a few to as much as 100 miles in width along much of the frontier.

Much of the Stalin line zone has been depopulated, and in some cases evacuated regions have been resettled, according to reports, by trusted Red Army men and women posing as peasants.

The Red Army's fortress garrisons are a part of the field troops, experienced and especially trained in their defence work.— Montreal Star.

MAORI BAYONETS GOOD MEDICINE

Germans Broke Before New Zealand Natives in Greece and Crete

By J. C. GRAHAM

Canadian Press Correspondent

Auckland, N. Z., July 8 (CP) — The Maori troops New Zealand has sent overseas have always earned an enviable reputation, more particularly in hand-to-hand fighting which appeals to the warrior tradition of the race. Reports reaching New Zealand of the fighting in the Middle East show that the Maori Battalion of the New Zealand Expeditionary Force was in its element in the desperate fighting in Greece and Crete.

Time and time again they proved to the Germans that the bayonet, far from being archaic, is as effective as ever in the hands of a soldier who fully understands its use, even against modern methods of war. To the Maori the bayonet is a natural weapon and though he quickly masters modern means of warfare, he fairly revels in a bayonet charge.

Many stories have been received of how the Germans broke and ran before Maori bayonets. On one occasion the enemy had penetrated the protective wire in front of a Maori position. They advanced boldly and in one sector were almost through.

Chanted Tribal Song

There was no hesitation. A decision was made. While some were singing their famous Maori battalion song, a detachment of Maoris fixed bayonets. They began to chant an ancient tribal haka and then charged, led by a prominent "All Black" rugby footballer.

They rushed into blazing tommy gun fire, never for a moment hesitating. At the bayonet point the forward elements met their death, while mortars cleared others out of the wire.

Another detachment bringing up ammunition found the way blocked by Germans who had penetrated the lines. The party charged into the enemy tommy guns and the Germans turned and ran.

An artillery officer told how he passed a Maori unit going forward carrying rifles and machine-guns. "Going duck shooting Hori?" he called to one of them. "No py korry, we no shoot," replied Hori with a grin. "The bayonet plurry good medicine."

SHOES BIG ITEM IN COUPON COUNT

Parents to Make Sacrifices Under British Clothes Rationing Plan

London, July 8—(CP)—Capt. Oliver Lyttelton didn't even tell his wife that clothes would be rationed in Britain, she disclosed, and like thousands of other British mothers Lady Moria Lyttelton spent the first few days after the "blow" planning how to pool the precious coupons for her family of three sons and a daughter. Capt. Lyttelton was president of the Board of Trade before his recent appointment as War Cabinet representative in the Middle East.

Lady Moira, sister of the Duke of Leeds, decided the first necessity was shoes for her four-year-old son, Nicholas, who is "most heavy on them" and the next was to buy wool for knitting.

"Mothers and fathers will have to sacrifice some of their coupons for the children for I can see that a good portion of the children's ration will go in shoes," she said. Lady Moira predicted a great many of her 66 coupons would go for wool because she uses a great deal "not only for knitting for the family but also for making clothes for bombed-out people."

Acknowledging new spring outfits were "a thing of the past," Lady Moira urged mothers to save as many coupons as possible for the winter "when we are going to feel the pinch."

'Battle of Bums' Turns Into Fiasco

Abilene, Tex., July 8 (AP)—"The battle of bums" turned into a fiasco last night.

Refusing to enter the ring for fighting purposes, Tony Galento and King Levinsky shot back at each other with a few cracks but made not a single fighting gesture.

Galento flatly refused to fight and shouted that Levinsky was "a poor bum who doesn't know where his next meal is coming from."

The affair between the Orange, N.J., bartender who once put up a battle against the heavyweight champion Joe Louis, and Levinsky, the erstwhile fish peddler of Chicago, was scheduled as a four-round bout.

Babe Hunt, 196, of Lubbock, retained his Texas heavyweight boxing title by taking a 10-round decision over Joe Vandiver, 192, of Fort Worth.

Three Marmora Boys In Recent Troops To Arrive Overseas

Marmora—Three local families were interested in hearing of the safe arrival in England of Canadian troops last week, for three local lads, incidentally all former employees of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, had their embarkation leave not so long ago and are now in the land where their fathers once resided—Merrie England. The lads are Ronald Regan, Richard (Porky) Smith and Leslie Gazley. Corporal Ronald Regan is the son of Bill Regan, clever third baseman of the Deloro Baseball Club for several years before and after the year his team won the Intermediate championship of Ontario. Bill is well remembered in Central Ontario ball circles yet for his contribution to his favorite pastime. Bill saw service in the first World War and he does not wonder at his son also calmly determining to have a part in this struggle. Ronald enlisted in September, 1940. Following a course in telephone work and a full course in signalling, he also completed a course in wireless at Danforth Technical School, Toronto and a course in radio at Central Technical School, Toronto. He is in England as a non commissioned officer.

Lance Corporal Richard C. Smith, second of the trio is a son of the late Harry Smith of Deloro and Mrs. Smith who has moved to Kingston within the past week. "Porky" is a former husky player of the Deloro Football Club. Described as L. Corpl. R. C. Smith of Belleville, his picture appeared in the Star Weekly this past week showing him in the act of operating a Bren gun.

Trooper Leslie Gazley is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gazley of Marmora Township and is also of good physique. He has played baseball for Deloro since the team dropped from the Intermediate status. Marmora and district has sufficient representatives in His Majesty's forces overseas now to have a big reunion over there if such should be practical.

Government Assumes Care of Youngsters

London, July 8 — (CP) — The Health Ministry and Board of Education announced the Government is taking over financial responsibility for all wartime nurseries and, under a scheme to speed up provision of nurseries for all children under five, new ones will be opened all over Britain so that mothers who go out to work will be able to leave their children in safe hands.

Hitherto, nurseries giving full daytime care have been mainly for children of women in munition factories. Now all mothers who go out to work for the whole day will get these facilities. The centres will be set up in any type of area—evacuation, neutral or reception.

The changes were announced in a circular to local authorities which said that war has disturbed family life more and more as the range of evacuation and the employment of women have increased.

The volume of long distance calling is especially heavy just now. We want to keep the standard of service at its accustomed high level.

Note the diagram above. It shows that our peak load comes around 10 in the morning, again at 3 in the afternoon and in the evening around 7 o'clock. Perhaps you could place at least some of your long distance calls at other than peak hour periods?

We would appreciate it if you would try this. It would help us to safeguard the service — perhaps enable us to give you even speedier connections. This is just a suggestion in the interests of everybody's long distance telephone service.

ITALIAN REVERSES

More blows have fallen on Italy.

Again the heavy hand of war has been felt on the Italian navy, supply ships and on Palmero harbor. East Africa is gone.

So much has Italy lost because of the insensate pride and love of glory of Mussolini.

Never did a leader of a nation so soon find his level as Hitler's "jackal" as he has been called. No dictator has so deluded himself and Italy as Mussolini.

In fact today Italy scarcely can claim the right to breathe except by the consent of Adolf Hitler as Axis "partner."

CHINA'S FLAG

Over Belleville has floated the flag of a nation old and yet young, the flag of China, which was raised on the flag staff at the city hall below the Union Jack to mark the opening of Chinese week in this city. The entire Chinese population of Belleville attended the function and the people of Belleville are proud to do honor to the great nation whose roots are far in antiquity and have spread down the centuries. When other nations were not, China was and today she still is. After four years of war she stands under the great Chiang Kai-Shek facing her enemy Japan. Still crescent in her prime China may begin an offensive against Japan.

Her flag with the sun in white representing light set in a field of blue representing the blue sky and reflecting on the good earth (red) is held in honor by a great part of the world for the heroism of her people.

Her Consul, Mr. Jialin Jowe, in a brief address spoke of the necessity of material aid for the Chinese.

TWO REPORTS FROM RUSSIAN FRONT

Out of the vagueness of the situation in the East come two stories of striking character. In one there is an estimate of the losses in men killed and wounded suffered by the Germans at nearly one million and the other that the Huns are using tanks of timber and canvas, being self-propelling and carrying machine guns. Months ago when Italy was stronger than she is today and when the blows were beginning to fall upon Mussolini's head it was said by a British cabinet minister that Italy's strength was canvas and camouflage. Events show what tinsel was in the performance of the Fascists at war, so that today their empire is less than tatters.

How much there is in this story of the German tanks and how far this camouflage is being worked by the Nazis to magnify their strength is not certain as yet.

Such wooden and canvas tanks mounted on caterpillar treads could be of little use except for impressing the Russians with the numbers of the tanks which Hitler is supposed to send against them.

Whatever the losses on the eastern front they must undoubtedly be heavy as the two combattants fight in a different manner to that in which Britain fights. Both Germans and Russians use mass formations and throw the vast weight of men into action. It is consequently more likely that the losses in such a style of fighting will be heavy. In the nature of things, it might be expected that Russian losses as defenders are less than the Germans, though Russia, with her vast resources of men, could stand heavy depletion of men more easily than Germany which already has spread its manpower so widely over Europe. At least it can be said that Hitler in throwing his armies in action against Russia has entered upon a struggle of which time is the very essence. Hitler cannot do anything slowly. He works in the neurotic key of the blitzkrieg and with the thrust of great forces. Russia has the men and planes and also a vast space in which to manoeuvre her armies to secure an advantage over Hitler or possibly spring a trap for him. Hitler's lightning speed is lagging.

These two stories of the great masses of men and the camouflaging of the fake tanks reveal something of the character of the war raging in East Europe.

IN TIME OF INVASION

Do you remember, England......
The tall galleys sliding through the mist—
The white galleys trailing whiter foam—
And a low sun kindling on the polished shields
—And bright helmets of the men of Rome?
Do you remember the lean carved faces
Like eagles sure of their prey?
And your own men massed along the cliffs, silent
And proud and calm as they?

Do you remember, England......
Dusk, and the landward-stealing dragon-ships
Painted with bice and vermillion, oar by oar
Cleaving the clear water soundlessly,
Heading up the inlet to the shore?
Do you remember the horned Vikings riding
The swell of the sea's crest—
And your own men ranked beside the rocks, waiting
To meet them breast to breast?

Do you remember, England.......
The dark Armada with its oaken hulls—
The half-moon of the caravels of Spain
Beating up the Channel, and Francis Drake
Laughing as he stooped to his bowls again?
That bearded berry-brown man, he knew the spirit
Of an English ship and its crew;
"Time enough to finish our game," said Francis,
"And beat the Spaniards, too!"

Do you remember, England......
That Summer of suspense when roses wound
The piled beacons ready for the flame.
And sentries kept your coast, their aching eyes
Strained for the sails of the fleet that never came?
The French fleet, that sailed to destruction, sailing
Over the harbor-bar—
And Nelson, frail and invincible—Nelson dying
In his scarlet coat and his star?

Do you remember, England......
In this your darkest and most glorious hour,
You, the small island, you, the citadel
Whose like is not, whose like shall never be
Though men build high as heaven and deep as hell—
England, England, standing alone, remember
The numberless who bled
—Ah, and were proud to bleed for you, England! Truly
Your bulwarks are your dead.

They that stood sentinel once stand sentinel still—
You are alone, yet never less alone;
For live flesh may fail, but not the dust
That long ago was body and blood and bone.
Drake, Nelson, Marlborough—great and little,
Cry on God for aid.
They'll rise again to raise again for England
The white untarnished blade!

"WINSTON" HUMOR:

Bulwark of Britain's effort in her dark hours, the indomitable Winston Churchill does not forget to take time out for a little fun. His quick wit and repartee are bywords in England and many is the humorous story told about the great man. "Winston Stories" they are called and here are some by Chalmers Roberts in a current periodical.

WELL!

A self-seeking civil servant on meeting the Prime Minister said: "Mr. Churchill. I neither drink nor smoke so I am 100 per cent efficient." "Well," drawled Winston, "I both drink and smoke and I am 200 per cent efficient."

LOOKING IN!

Some religious old lady in the Midlands on meeting him said: "Well, Mr. Prime Minister, in your present position I suppose you are now a pillar of the church." "Well not quite, Madam, rather say a buttress, supporting the church from the outside."

Expect Battle Crisis in War In Ten Days

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 8.—(AP)— If Nazi propagandists are correct in stating that the German schedule calls for smashing Russian defenses in the West within six weeks, it is obvious that the next week or ten days must see a crisis in the vast battle.

More than a third of the supposed Hitler time allotment to his armies has served only to bring the antagonists to grips in the centre of the Stalin Line. Vague Nazi statements say line has been "pierced" at several undisclosed points; and Nazi propaganda agencies have promptly translated word "pierced" into "broken". Presumably it is on the road to Moscow and possibly also south of the Pripet Marshes in the Novograd Volinsk area on the direct route to Kiev that the claimed German penetrations of the Stalin Line have taken place.

There is no indication in either German or Russian accounts that Russia's major defense system from the Baltic to the Black Sea has been reached elsewhere, except in the extreme north in the Pskov-Ostrov sector. That thrust at Leningrad from Estonia is dangerous, but far less critical for the Red Army than the Moscow and Kiev drives in the centre.

Protected by Lakes

Russian defenses on the Baltic flank are strongly bolstered by the lake system, through which the Estonian-Russian border runs. Perhaps two-thirds of the 200 miles from Pskov to the shores of the Gulf of Finland west of Leningrad is water-guarded limiting the prossibilities of panzer-edged turning movements.

The Nazi attack in the Pskov-Ostrov sector is aimed at turning the lake line from the south. It seems unquestionable that Russian defenses are extra strong there, and probably developed in great depth. Nor is there any intimation of German-Finnish progress of consequences on the other exposed flank of Leningrad, the Karelian Isthmus. It was primarily to close that door to Leningrad that Moscow made war on Finland.

Lacking any intimation either of the location or depth of the claimed Nazi penetrations of the Stalin Line in the centre toward Moscow or Kiev, it is impossible as yet to gauge the significance of such developments. Presumably the Russians have labored over the years to build especially deep defenses there.

The huge western bulge of the Dnieper River from north of Kiev in the south to Orscha in the north, a distance of some 400 miles, buttresses the whole Russian centre east of the Pripet Marshes. The Stalin Line, with the marshlands as a vast outwork in front, was laid out to conform to that north-south river barrier in the centre.

While the Germans seem approaching it just north of the marshes in the vicinity of Bobruisk on the Berezina River front, it seems clear that their main attacks are focused on turning the Dnieper line at Orscha in the north and from Novograd Volinsk in the south. Those are obviously the most vulnerable points.

No Major Rupture

The Dnieper bends sharply east in the vicinity of Orscha. There is a wide salient between the Dnieper and the Dvina unprotected by a river line. It lies between Orscha and Vitebsk and it seems probable Nazi forces are trying to break through the Stalin Line there if their effort to cross the Dnieper at Orscha or south of that town is held up, as Moscow claims.

Presumably the same situation prevails south of the junction of the Pripet and Dnieper Rivers, northwest of Kiev. The indicated position of the Stalin Line in that region is well west of the Dnieper which runs through Kiev itself. Only minor streams support it as it bulges westward until it reaches the Dniester River that forms the Russian-Bessarabian frontier to the Black Sea.

That makes the Nazi onslaughts in the Orscha and Novograd Volinsk areas still the major dangers. A break through the Stalin Line on either front would threaten huge Russian forces with encirclement and mean the loss of Moscow or Kiev. It is clear as this is written however, that no decisive Nazi rupture of the Stalin Line has yet been achieve and that the Red Army despite losses in Poland, is far from broken.

Apparently it has managed to fall back all along the front to the Stalin Line. By holding up the Germans for two weeks it has permitted heavy reinforcements to come up for defense of that system in the vital centre. Thus, the Soviet "buffer" defense has proved effective to an extent as yet beyond estimation.

Conserve Gasoline Duty of Drivers

About gasoline:

Britain is using in her war effort prodigious quantities of this fuel, for aircraft and for naval ships. All of it has to reach the United Kingdom by tankers through the zone of sea warfare, subject to attack by U-boats and enemy aircraft. Many tankers have been lost.

To maintain the supply of gasoline, without which Britain cannot win the war, many tankers have been diverted from the Canadian and United States trade routes. This means that the supply of crude oil and gasoline coming to Canadian refineries and distributing points is being sharply curtailed until pipe-lines and tank cars are available to replace the tank ships.

Thus there is less gasoline in the country, and this means Canadians must cut down its use. There are sound objections to a ration system, but it will be inevitable if the people will not co-operate voluntarily to achieve the imperative end. Common sense and patriotism should make compulsion unnecessary.

Recent increases in gasoline prices, through the new Federal tax, were expected to reduce consumption as well as provide revenue, but seem not to have had that effect. Any casual survey of the streets and roads shows what looks like much reckless waste of gasoline in aimless driving, driving "for the air", driving with no more definite objective than swift motion and a cool breeze. That sort of driving could well be materially reduced as a contribution to the war, and no hardship caused.

The gasoline situation is neither vague nor academic. We are faced with a very definite shortage, a war emergency, and certainly gasoline in a British bomber is of more value than gasoline burned on a run to a hot-dog stand of a dancing place.—Ottawa Journal.

DECREASE IN BIRTH RATE AND IMMIGRATION GIVING U. S. AN OLDER POPULATION WITH CONSEQUENT HEALTH PROBLEMS.

Since 1900 the birth rate in the United States has dropped over one-third and immigration has been drastically reduced. The result in a gradual aging of our population. In 1900 there were a little over 3,000,000 people in the United States, about four per cent, who were over 65 years of age. Today there are about 8,500,000 people in the United States, more than six per cent of our population, who are over 65 years of age. The experts estimate that by 1980, 22,000,000 million of our population will be over 65 years and will constitute more than fourteen per cent of the population.

Naturally, an older population is more troubled with illness than is a young body of people. For this reason the medical profession is giving much more attention to the problems of the aged than used to be required. Old people with disturbances affecting the heart, the blood vessels, and the kidneys, now constitute a large part of medical practice.

Cancer, essentially a disease of older people, also demands much medical attention. Some measure of success is visible in controlling cancer and the death rates are not now increasing. However, simply because there are more older people in the community, there are likely to be more deaths from cancer. Experts estimate that the total number of deaths from this source will nearly double in the next twenty-five years.

Inasmuch as tuberculosis has constantly decreased and is continuing to decrease, Dr. Louis I. Dublin has suggested that we should gradually change the hospitals for the tuberculous into institutions for the care of cancer.

Another disease which occurs most frequently in the aged is diabetes. For this reason the death rates from diabetes have risen, notwithstanding the excellent effects of insulin. Fortunately, with insulin, the majority of people with diabetes can lead useful lives.

Dr. O. H. Perry Pepper has pointed out that progress in the care of diseases of the aged has been delayed by the mistaken emphasis that we place on merely living long. Our chief goal should not be just living long but health in old age. He does not feel that old age must of necessity be a period of ill health.

There are certain conditions that affect the aged which need some emphasis. Pneumonia is exceedingly serious in old people and in very young ones. Sometimes old people die rather suddenly of pneumonia, not having had any conspicuous cough, or coughing of blood, or pain in the chest, or even fever. It is important for the doctor to determine such symptoms at the earliest possible moment if he is going to save the life of his older patient. People who are old simply do not have the same resistance to infection as do the young because their tissues are not able to function as efficiently. However, amazing recoveries also occur in the very old and there are instances in which pneumonia has failed to be fatal even in people past the age of 100.

New York, July 8 —(AP)— For the first time since the first Great War, women are being offered jobs as taxi cab drivers in New York. The Cornelia Taxi Service advertised for women drivers and an official of the concern said there is a shortage of male drivers as a result of expansion in defence industries and men called for military training.

HAILSTONES

This is the time of year when hailstorms are most frequent throughout the larger part of North America.

As a rule hail generally falls most often over a small area during very hot weather at the beginning of violent thunderstorms.

Human beings have a weakness for exaggerating the sizes of the hailstones they see as well as of the fish they catch.

The old Teutonic root of the word "hail" means pebble and the name is descriptive of most of the hailstones that fall.

Still hailstones larger than one's fist and weighing more than a pound have been reported several times on good authority.

The maximum size of hailstones is not known positively because trained observers are seldom present to measure them when they fall.

During a storm in Natal in South Africa in 1874 hailstones fell that weighed a pound and a half. They went through a corrugated iron roof as if it had been made of paper.

At Cazoria, Spain, in 1829 houses were crushed under blocks of ice, some of which were said to have weighed four and a half pounds.

But these reports, like all accounts dating back many years, should be taken with a grain of salt.

Possibly some of the reports refer to cases where masses of ice resulted from the coalescense of a number of smaller hailstones lying closely packed together on the ground.

Hailstones three inches in diameter were reported during a storm at Dallas, Texas, May 8, 1926; four inches in diameter at Tullulah, Louisiana, April 21, 1920; and five inches at Potter, Nebraska, July 6, 1928

Hailstorms occur occasionally during the night and morning but more frequently during the afternoon.

Years ago French farmers put up "hail rods," similar to lightning rods, to "de-energize" the atmosphere and prevent hailstorms. Perhaps they were not so far wrong. Some authorities have suspected that electrical attraction and repulsion have something to do with the formation of hail, since hailstorms are closely associated with thunderstorms.

One of the ten plagues of Egypt was a rain of fire and hail.

Very rarely are human beings killed by hailstones.

MACHINES

How are the battles being lost
By lack of ships and gear,
For though they have a vessel's cost
To build requires a year.

And why from Dunkirk did they go
Amid those dreadful scenes?
'Twas not because they feared the foe,
But lacked enough machines.

'Tis not the heart that lacks the will
'Tis not the men who fail
The tides of war are turning still
Upon a horseshoe nail.

Let us not fail for lack of stuff!
Let not that fault be ours!
Until we have machines enough,
Let no one count the hours.

Two Barns Destroyed by Fire During Heavy Electrical Storm

Four Horses, Veal Calf and Bull Lost in One Blaze

SEPARATOR BURNED

Picton, July 8 — Two fine barns were totally destroyed by fire during an electrical storm Monday afternoon about five o'clock. They were owned by Clayton Anderson of Greenbush and Bert Wilson of the Ridge Road. Both burned very rapidly and heat forced fire fighters back.

The barn owned by Mr. Anderson was full of newly harvested hay and it was a mass of flames when seen by the family. The four horses, a veal calf and a bull were lost as was a quantity of machinery and grain. A drive house nearby caught fire but was saved by the neighbors.

Separator Burned

A threshing separator was burned along with Mr. Wilson's barn, also some machinery, hay and four pigs. The cattle were in the fields at the time and the house was not endangered as the wind was blowing in the opposite direction.

Both buildings and contents were partially covered by insurance.

The storm which swept many parts of the county was of short duration but very severe. There was a short, heavy downpour of rain which will do untold good but there is need for a steady rain in order to really benefit crops. Several trees were blown down by the strong wind in some sections.

Former Rector Heard

Dean W. L. Armitage, a former rector of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, and now of Cobourg was preacher at the Old Church of St. Mary Magdalene Sunday morning. It was the annual service and was well attended. The rector of the parish, Rev. J. B Creeggan assisted. The flowers decorating the altar were in memory of Canon and Mrs. Edwin Loucks and Canon Walter Loucks. Flowers on the lectern were in memory of Mr. and Mrs. James Sayers. This church was built in 1823 and is not now used for services but kept in a good state of repair.

Rev. Armitage spoke on Paul's message: "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." He urged the congregation to submit to the value and power of God's plan in their lives and to pass the message on to others.

In the entrance examination results announced Monday, Bobby Walmsley was declared the highest ranking pupil in the county and will receive the first Old Boys' medal as well as the Martha McGowan scholarship for the highest pupil in the Picton Public School. Lois Pair and Margaret Grothier were second and third high and receive Old Boys' medals.

Marian Bailey was the highest ranking pupil in the Separate School trying entrance examinations and receives the Redmond Scholarship.

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Gullet spent the week-end and Monday in town with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Roderick of Detroit are holidaying at their summer home at Cherry Valley.

LAC. Fenlon and Mrs. Fenlon are spending a week in Montreal.

Members of the L.O.B.A. and L.O.L. paraded to the Baptist Church Sunday morning and heard a fine sermon by Rev. J. Dick.

Members of the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary are holding a "roll out the barrel" day on Saturday. Canned goods donated will be shipped overseas through the Salvation Army.

J. B. Falconer has purchased the Perry Clarke block on Main street and plans to convert it into a modern store.

Rodger Wright, who graduated from Albert College, has secured a position in Belleville.

The anniversary of the Sunday School at Cherry Valley was marked Sunday by the promotion of pupils.

Miss Kathleen Creeggan of Gananoque is a guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Walmsley.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Carter are holidaying in a cottage at Salmon Point.

Miss Gussie Palmer of Detroit is visiting Miss G. Bigg and other friends here.

Mrs. John Grindrod and son Jack of Napanee, are guests for ten days of her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Branscomb, while Mr. Grindrod is at Connaught camp.

A large congregation attended the yearly service in old St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Sunday morning, when morning prayer was led by the Rector, Rev. J. B. Creeggan. There was a full choir with Mr. Frank Bronskill at the organ and a violin obligato. The beautiful flowers arranged on the altar were in memory of Cannon Loucks, a former rector for thirty years, and deceased members of his family, and throughout the church in memory of Mr. J. H. Sayers, caretaker of the old church for many years.

Very Rev. Dean W. L. Armitage, a former pastor here, thirty-seven years ago, delivered a very inspiring sermon from St. Paul's message to the Romans. He exhorted those present to keep the glow of faith in their hearts, to tell others of the wonder of this faith, to work for God and to return to God in prayer. He entreated the young people, who could not decide what line of work to enter, to put themselves in the hands of God, and He would open the way for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Holmes and three children of Toronto, are spending a vacation at Rockaway Beach, Salmon Point.

Major Jas. Inrig and son, Lieut. Jas. Inrig, of Kingston, spent the week-end at their home here.

A very welcome rain, accompanied by some thunder, fell on Picton for an hour Monday afternoon and not only cooled the air greatly, but benefited gardens and small fruit.

An American yacht lay at P. E. Yacht Club on Sunday morning. In the afternoon the owners set out for the fishing grounds at Hay Bay. Great excitement prevailed among local fishermen, when the visitors returned with three lunge weighing 40, 40 and 13 lbs. and a 7-lb. pickerel.

Two barns were struck by lightning in a severe storm that broke over parts of Prince Edward County Monday afternoon.

The barn of Bert Wilson on the Ridge Road was a total loss, together with a threshing machine outfit, a number of pigs and the season's crop of hay and a quantity of grain.

In Greenbush the barn of Clayton Anderson was burned to the ground so quickly that it was impossible to save four horses and a bull that were trapped in the building.

$2,290.49 to British War Victims' Fund

Prince Edward County once again rallied magnificently to an appeal to support the British War Victims' Fund. On Sunday donations made through Jim Hunter of The Toronto Telegram, sponsoring the fund, at Lakeshore summer resort, the Sandbanks, totalled $2,290.49—an unusually fine sum as the time to arrange presentations was very short and despite the fact that between two and three thousand dollars had been sent to the fund during the previous two months and a great deal previous to that.

Individuals and organizations from all parts of the county contributed to the success of this, a feature of the grand program given at the Sandbanks Sunday afternoon by Peterboro Salvation Army Band at which Jim Hunter presided as chairman.

Not only were all facilities of the Sandbanks resort given free of charge by proprietor Walter Hyatt but he entertained members of the band and guests, numbering sixty-four, at supper. His generosity is sincerely appreciated. The total proceeds of all events at the Sandbanks were $2,290.49.

The presentations were in charge of Phil Dodds, news editor of The Gazette, they being received by Mr. Hunter who shook hands with each making a presentation and at the close the chairman expressed sincere thanks to all as did Mr. Dodds, for the response to the appeal.

Mr. Hunter made a popular chairman as more than 3,000 who paid admission enjoyed the fine music of the Peterboro Band. He assured the crowd that every cent goes to help the bomb sufferers.

Says Stamp Hobby Helps in Wartime

London, July 8 (CP)—(CP)—War has caused a small boom in stamp collecting, a hobby that has been found to provide relief from the strains of war.

H. R. Harmer, philatelic expert who conducts an auction of rare stamps in London every week, said doctors are among the most enthusiastic philatelists and many recommend the hobby to nervous patients for the blackout.

"Once a person is infected with the collecting germ, the hobby involves deep concentration, which means forgetfulness of outside influence," he said.

Prices are higher than before the war and some persons are investing their money in stamps, "which are a better investment than diamonds."

"The number of rare stamps in existence is known and the price internationally is the same," Harmer said. "Thus the owner of a rare stamp can get its value in London, New York, Sydney, Cape Town, and, in peacetime, at any Continental city.

MAROONED ON CANADIAN SIDE

Fort Erie, Ont., July 7—(CP)—Mrs. Anthony Sposho, 36-year-old resident of Buffalo, N.Y., is marooned on the Canadian side of the International border because she failed to obtain an alien identification card before she crossed the border on a holiday visit July fourth.

Under existing regulations, Mrs. Sposho, admitted to the U.S. legally six years ago, will be unable to return to her home until the United States acts on her request to enter the country as a new immigrant in the normal way. This procedure may take from three months to a year.

8 PER CENT. SENT TO BOTTOM

New York, July 8,—(AP)—William V. C. Ruxton, president of the British American Ambulance Corp? said yesterday that eight per cent. of the ambulances, medical supplies and other war relief equipment it sent to Britain, Africa and Greece has been lost at sea.

Of $737,191 of such goods sent by the corps, $59.180 worth went to the bottom. The supplies included 35 ambulances, 21 of which were sunk on the Egyptian Liner Zamzam in April.

Iceland, Defence Outpost, Will Claim One of Largest Garrisons of U. S.

Washington, July 8 (AP)—Iceland the nation's newest defence outpost, appeared likely today to claim one of the largest United States garrisons overseas—if not the largest.

Latest army figures fix the total of present overseas garrisons at 118,700 troops. The disposition of these forces was not revealed, but Hawaii, presumably the most strongly-manned post, had 40,000 soldiers in May for manoeuvres.

Official information on the size of the British force now occupying Iceland comes under the head of a military secret, but seamen who touched recently at the island estimated it at 80,000 men—a figure which some military sources believe is not excessive, considering the fact that the occupying force would have to be large enough to discourage a Nazi attempt to capture the island.

Informed opinion was that the American garrison would be at least equal to the strength of the British force it will eventually relieve. In requesting American occupation, Prime Minister Hermann Jonasson of Iceland specifically asked that the garrison "be strong enough to meet every eventuality." President Roosevelt, on his part, promised that it would be.

U. S. Marines

Composition of the landing force was unknown, but general assumption here was that U. S. marines formed its bulk. However, President Roosevelt, in his exchange of communications with Prime Minister Jonasson, spoke of sending "troops"—language which some interpreted as meaning that army units would prove the eventual garrison—or most of it.

In this connection, it was recalled that Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, disclosed June 23 that a special force of soldiers and marines had been created for "task" missions—special operations of a specific nature outside the continental United States.

Special Force Created For "Task"

In this connection, it was recalled that Gen. George C. Marshall, U.S. Army Chief of Staff, disclosed June 23 that a special force of soldiers and marines had been created for "task" missions—special operations of a specific nature outside the Continental United States.

Highly-placed administration officials said recently the hemisphere's eastern boundary included Greenland but excluded Iceland, 400 miles to the east.

On the other hand, the National Geographic Society said yesterday the generally-accepted boundary was the 20th Meridian, slicing through Iceland east of Reykjavik.

If this line were established as the official boundary for American purpose it would mean that not only Iceland but also the Azores, off Portugal, and the Cape Verde Islands, off the French West African Port of Dakar, would lie within this hemisphere. Some strategists hold the view that occupation of those islands eventually may be necessary to defence policy. President Roosevelt has said that if any of those bases fell under Nazi control, the security and safety of the hemisphere would be jeopardized.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

CANADA

Your Government desires to avoid the vicious spiral of inflation. To do so it is curbing price increases; rents are controlled; profits are restricted and highly taxed. But this is not enough.

The effect of these controls would be offset if no control were placed on basic wages. The unregulated race between wages and cost of living would produce an inflation harmful to all Canadians—except the profiteer—while it lasted, and disastrous in its aftermath.

In place of any increase in basic wage rates, which would thereby increase prices and which workers are asked to forego, your Government has provided by Order in Council 7440 that a cost of living bonus be paid to protect the workers against price increases in basic necessities.

This bonus is not a wage increase. It rises and falls automatically with living costs. It provides 25 cents per week for each rise of one point in the cost of living except where juvenile or female workers earn less than 50 cents per hour in which event they receive 1 per cent. of their basic wage rate.

This order has the following advantages:

1—In relating bonuses to cost of living it checks the race between wages and prices.

2—Being on a flat rate basis it favours the lower paid workers.

3—It enables both employer and employee to determine the amount of the bonus payable. It so removes one cause of labour friction. It makes for industrial stability in this time of war.

4—It is the fairest possible plan for the worker, the employer and the taxpayer that has yet been devised.

As this order is applied and both employers and employees observe it in the spirit and in the letter its beneficial effects will become increasingly apparent. It will, too, contribute to an ever increasing production of the tools of war.

U.S. OCCUPATION

sion in Congress. Specifically, much interest attached to President Roosevelt's order to the navy to keep the sea lanes between Iceland and the United States "free of all hostile activity or threat thereof."

Inasmuch as part of this vast area has been a hunting ground for Nazi surface and sub-surface raiders, the question arose whether the order meant "you may fire" where hostile sea action was encountered.

Another moot point was whether positive action of the Iceland variety might be expected in the future from the "substantial forces" which Mr. Roosevelt announced had been dispatched to the bases acquired from Britain in Trinidad and British Guiana.

These forces, the President indicated in his special message yesterday, were a precaution against the southern arm of the pincers. However, one informed source pointed out that it was hardly unusual for a nation to garrison its bases and he recalled that Mr. Roosevelt in his last fireside chat declared that "we in the Americas will decide for ourselves whether, and when, and where, our American interests are attacked or our security threatened."

Blockade Zone Not Recognized by U.S.

This much was clear—the United States was taking over an outpost deep in the intensified counter-blockade zone Germany has established around the British Isles. This zone however, has never been recognized by the United States.

The American forces will relieve British troops who have been on the island since May, 1940. It was said that until departure of the British forces for other fields they will be under command of the U.S. officers.

Canadian troops also went to Iceland in mid-1940 to aid British troops. The Canadians left this spring.

One source close to the War Department was of the opinion that the Iceland outpost would complicate any Nazi attempt to invade Britain, unless Germany wished to involve the United States. He said an invasion was unlikely until the Nazis had completed the encirclement of Britain by occupying both Iceland and Ireland—and occupation of Iceland now involves dislodgement of U.S. troops.

Report Squeeze Blockade Plan

Describing immediate objective of the occupation, persons who discussed the Iceland move with State Department and other high federal officials said the United States Government had been advised that just before Germany's attack on Russia, Hitler planned a two-pronged blockade squeeze.

One would extend at least to Iceland, to war at close quarters on North Atlantic shipping. Another would run through Portugal—and presumably Gibraltar—south to Dakar on the westernmost point of Africa, to deal wtih Britain's shipments through that sector.

Apropos of Iceland, one official recalled that prior to the German invasion of Russia- a heavy reinforcement of Nazi divisions in Norway was reported and there was speculation in some quarters here that Iceland figured in the general strategy the Reich had under consideration.

'Safety From Overseas Attack'

In his message, the President stressed "considerations of safety from overseas attack."

Without disclosing any information as to possible German intentions, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "the occupation of Iceland by Germany would constitute a serious threat in three dimensions.... against Greenland and the northern portion of the North American continent....against all shipping in the North Atlantic.... against the steady flow of munitions to Britain."

"It is therefore imperative," he said, "that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts, the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open and free from all hostile activity or threat thereof.

Recognition of Independence of Iceland

"This government will insure the adequate defence of Iceland with full recognition of the independence of Iceland as a sovereign state."

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat, Florida), a member of the Foreign Relations Commitee, coupled his approval with the hope "we will hold ourselves in a position to seize the Cape Verde Islands and the Azores if there is any indication that the hideous Hitler may take them."

Senator Burton Wheeler, Montana Democrat and administration opponent who predicted the Iceland move a week ago, said the occupation justified speculation that the administration might be planning to take over the Azores, Cape Verde Islands and Dakar, French West Africa.

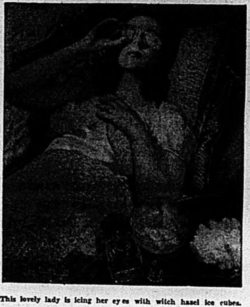
Get Rid of Pouches Under Eyes



This lovely lady is icing her eyes with witch hazel ice cubes.

By HELEN FOLLETT

POUCHES under the eyes are enough to make a woman crazy. She hates them; feels that she looks dissipated. Well, there are other reasons besides late hours and wild parties for those horrid little hammocks that appear beneath the soul windows.

Sometimes they are an inheritance and it is a pretty mean foremother or forefather that will hand them down along the family line. Now and then they are the result of intestinal disturbances. Some doctors say that they may be due to allergy. One eats something that the tummy doesn't like, so it produces the disfiguring swellings. Fatigue is a common cause.

Discover the Cause

What's to be done? Discover the cause if possible and do away with it. Twice a day wring a thick wash cloth out of fairly hot water, place over the eyes for a few minutes, holding it there with flattened palms. Follow with ice cold compresses, keeping them on for at least five minutes. Dry the skin surface gently, apply a heavy cream, sweeping the first finger around the eye.

Drink plenty of water. Few women take as much water as they need for well being. Get to bed early before being worn with fatigue. Look after the diet. If you are a lover of rich sauces and hearty food, slow up a bit, eating more cottage cheese, green salads, vegetables and fruits.

Pouches under the eyes usually come and go, showing that fatigue or some physical disturbance is responsible for them. By being observing a woman may be able to determine why she is tormented with the wretched blemishes.

The remedy, then: more rest, lighter diet, more water taken each day, exercise out of doors. And twice a day the hot and cold compresses to coax the bumps to go away.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EVENTFUL and memorable day is forecast by the interesting chain of benefic planetary aspects. Romance is likely to be paramount in the day's adventures, with sudden and dramatic visitations of warming and probably sentimental culmination with the emotions on the qui vive. It may be legacy, gift or other valuable windfall, promising future security and sound foothold.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the threshold of a year of great and surprising adventure and achievement, with the business, emotional and intellectual faculties under high tension and surprising if not dramatic denouements. There may be sudden wealth, enhanced investments, bequest or other unexpected gain, to put the future and its gratifications under enduring and stable bases. Romance looms large.

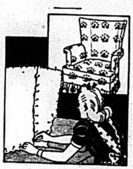
Year-Round Slip Cover Revives an Old Chair



Simple to Fit Any Chair or Sofa

What a blessing slip covers are for worn, shabby chairs! Like new upholstery. And you can so easily and inexpensively make attractive year-round styles.

Smart now are covers of colorful cotton crash like the one we've shown—a rich beige with a green and rust all-over motif. Seams are bound in beige and the flounce is smartly pleated.

The secret of making a well-fitting cover is that you smooth the fabric over the old upholstery, pin where seams will be and cut, leaving 1½-inch seam allowance. Work a section at a time—first inside back and seat, then arms, sides, back. The flounce you add last to finished cover.

To fit a barrel chair like the one pictured, smooth fabric down inside back and cut at bottom. Piece as the diagram shows or, if fabric is wide, make two long darts in place of seams. Then sew up seams and attach a 4-inch bias band along the bottom to tuck in. In our 32-page booklet you find directions for making slip covers for all types of chairs and sofas, including barrel and channel-back styles. Explains every step: estimating material, cutting, fitting, finishing. Suggests fabrics, colors, trimmings.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

OTTAWA HOSTESS LAUDS COURAGE OF LONDON FOLK

Sheila MacDonald Keeps House for British High Commissioner; Was Social Worker in England

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 8 (CP) — Sheila MacDonald, youngest daughter of the late Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, was born in London "within the sound of Bow Bells" and today she takes pride in calling herself a "cockney."

They are among the pluckiest of Britain's heroic people in facing the dangerous days of this war," she told The Canadian Press.

It is hard to credit the 30 years she claims for she has an out-of-doors, streamlined look which, with her hair hanging loosely to her shoulders, makes her look many years younger.

"Being the youngest of five children hasn't helped because it's always difficult to convince older brothers and sisters that you've really grown up," she said in an interview at Earnscliffe where she is hostess for her brother, Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner to Canada.

The other four children of the late Ramsay MacDonald are Alistair, a London architect, Malcolm, Ishbel, now Mrs. N. Ridgley and Joan, a doctor whose married name is Mrs. A. MacKinnon.

"One would gather from our names that we might be Scots," she laughed. "The others were born at Lossiemouth, our place in north-east Scotland."

Miss MacDonald firmly believes that environment rather than heredity plays the most important part in formation of a child's character and is herself an example of her theories and the politico-social background which was her home.

As a child she went to the North London Collegiate, a large school for girls which is "public" in the same sense as a Canadian "public" school. From there she went to Oxford where she studied economics, politics, philosophy and international affairs. She travelled on the continent where she interest led her to some investigation of social welfare and political problems.

"But there is no doubt that I was greatly influenced by my father and his interest in social questions," said Miss MacDonald. "Our house was one in which we all discussed and debated and had our own opinions."

Was Social Worker

Having finished school, Miss MacDonald became deeply interested in prison reform and the fate of boys and girls who were brought into the juvenile courts upon charges of delinquency. As a "probation officer" she found the work of advising these boys and girls a "fascinating" occupation.

"I visited their schools and homes and I am convinced that boys and girls who get into scrapes are in the vast majority of cases the victims of poverty, bad environment and unhappy homes," she said, "Their response to a little friendliness and confidence is wonderful."

Miss MacDonald plays tennis and golf and "was a fiend for field hockey" at college. Most of all, she enjoys walking and cycling.

While she plays the piano she prefers pictures to any other expression of art and her favorites are the works of the old Dutch masters and modern water colors. In Canada she hopes to acquaint herself with Candaian art.

"I was thrilled by the exhibition of Canadian pictures shown in London a year or two ago," she said. "I was struck by the virility and qualities of originality."

After the outbreak of war Miss MacDonald worked for some months in a hospital supply depot in Hampstead. The problem created by evacuated children returning home to London after the vacated schools had been used for other purposes led her to open a school in Cambden Town and soon she had three other teachers and more than 75 children.

In June 1940 the influx of refugees from the continent and the solving of the school situation led her to devote herself to the organization of the Hampstead War Refugee Centre where people from the Nazi-overrun European countries were welcomed.

Until she left for Canada in May, 1941, she was occupied in obtaining hostels and homes for refugees, organizing classes to teach them English, book-keeping, first aid and many other subjects and in placing people in industry and clerical positions.

Wooler

Wooler—Mrs. Robert Redcliffe met with a painful accident on Thursday, July 3rd when she was in the village making a call at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bowen. As Mrs. Redcliffe was walking along the roadside, a large dog came bounding in front of her and she became frightened and backed into a deep ditch. The tumble partially stunned her for a few moments and when she made efforts to rise, found it was impossible.

When assistance came she was helped into a car and taken to Dr. McMullen, Frankford. The examination showed torn ligaments of the limb above the knee. Mrs. Redcliffe has to remain quietly in bed for six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill and Miss Gwena Elford spent the week end with relatives at Lindsay.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gainsforth entertained Mrs. Dan McKim of Selby, Mrs. Arnley Master, Mrs. S. Sharpe and Mr. A. Sharpe for noon dinner and at the tea hour on Wednesday.

Etiquette the Secret of a Poised Social Manner

Popular Women Know the Rules

A confession of no background—those little slips in etiquette!

The woman who hurriedly stoops to pick up her dropped purse shows her fellow-guests she isn't used to courteous attentions from men, hasn't learned to let them perform such small services for her.

A woman of breeding always allows a man to wait on her—open doors, pull out her chair at table, help her out of cars.

And, knowing etiquette, she's never at a loss in little social emergencies. When someone whose name and face she can't remember says, "We've met before," she replies graciously, "I really can't recall the occasion. Won't you please tell me your name?"

A delightful hostess—she always rises to greet a guest, man or woman. Giving a large party, she won't create confusion by attempting to introduce a newcomer to everyone present. Instead, she introduces him to a congenial group.

For charming social poise, learn the etiquette rules in our 32-page booklet. Tells what is correct when dating, motoring, travelling; at parties, games, the country club, the theatre, on the street. Explains introductions, invitations, telephone etiquette.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of ETIQUETTE: THE CORRECT THING TO DO to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Don't Be a Nutty Brown Maid!

This smart girl avoids squint lines by wearing dark glasses outdoors.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GREATER interest in outdoor life has changed the character of the average complexion. Time was when the marshmallow nose prevailed, and pretty dreadful it was too. A pale skin is a poor background for complexion batik, the synthetic blush and rosy-posy lips. A golden skin is becoming because it suggests health, vitality and flirtations with Mister Al Fresco. If a girl can't swim, drive a motor car, or dash over the tennis court now and then, she is out of the modern picture.

Toasting the feminine phiz to the right shade requires care and technique. You can get a coat of golden tan if you go about the business properly, or you can acquire a complexion as flakey as a baking powder biscuit and with it a splotchy tan.

Get Gradual Tan

Exposure to sunlight must be gradual; the skin should be kept oiled. Oil protects the epidermal surface from burning just as butter in the frying pan keeps the food cooking properly. Take along your sun tan oil whenever you are out for a day in the open. Use it freely. During the swimming season oil neck, chest, arms and legs as well as your celestial face.

Unless a cream is used there will be a certain amount of desquamation, a fluffing away of skin scales, a condition which makes for roughness. Powder shows up, rouge looks dreadful.

Repeated tanning, year after year, tanning to a Hottentot brown, will cause the skin to become leathery and coarse of texture. Over-indulgence in sunlight will produce a skin like the hide of an old salt who has sailed the seas for many a year. Who wants that to happen? No member of this beauty class; teacher is sure of that.

If you do not desire to be a nutty brown maid, put your face to bed every night in a light blanket of cream. By morning the emollient will have disappeared; the flesh has feasted upon it. It is an insurance against any number of beauty griefs.

HOW TO BE AN IDEAL WEDDING GUEST

The wedding invitation offers you hospitality, friendliness, courtesy, and the appealing beauty of as lovely a wedding as your hosts can afford.

Now what is your personal responsibility as a guest?

If you are a kind-hearted friend, you will bow to this invitation by doing everything that will show your friendliness and appreciation. You will respect the feelings of everyone concerned with the wedding plans. You will do your best to cooperate with these plans. You'll be understanding, never critical or hurt. You'll be considerate of the bride and bridegroom and their families, not selfishly absorbed in your own reaction and in your own convenience. You'll contribute graciousness and thoughtfulness to the Happy Day.

Here are some suggestions that will help to make you an ideal wedding guest:

First, answer the invitation promptly, whether the invitation is formal or informal. This will help your hostess to know how many guests to plan for.

Send your wedding present as soon as you can. The bride-elect will appreciate this, for it will give her time to write a note of thanks to you before the last busy days before the wedding.

Arrive at the church reasonably early. This will make the ushers' task easier.

The ideal guest bows to the usher who meets her, and talks graciously and naturally with him as he escorts her up the aisle. She will accept without question the seat he assigns to her.

Rise the very first moment that you hear the wedding march, and remain standing during the ceremony.

When you are a guest at a church wedding, do not leave your place after the recessional until the bride's family, the bridegroom's family, and the guests who are seated in the reserved seats have been escorted down the aisle by the ushers. This is a fundamental and significant courtesy that wedding guests should bestow on the bride's family, who are the hosts of the wedding, and on the bridegroom's family, who are the guests of honor. There is a practical reason too — this interim gives the wedding party, the bride's mother and father and the groom's mother and father, time to arrive at the reception place and to form the receiving line.

In a house wedding or any wedding where there is not to be a recessional, guests wait until the mother and father of the bride, the mother and father of the groom and then the other relatives of the bride and groom greet the bride and groom, before they go forward to greet them.

In the receiving-line, the guest greets the bride's mother and father, as she would first greet the hosts of any party, and makes some gracious comment of appreciation about the lovely bride, the beauty and charm of the wedding. With equal graciousness she greets the groom's mother and father, remembering to say something charmingly appreciative about the "hero" of the day.

After the guests have greeted the members of the receiving line, they should take care of themselves, chatting with old friends and being introduced to other guests. Groups are formed for having refreshments, either for the small tables at a sit-down service or for the buffet service.

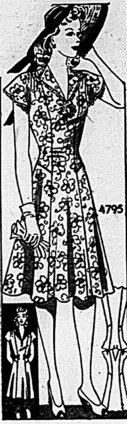
The Golden Rule is the best of all guides for the guest as well as for the hostess. Guests too often forget this!

Frock Has That "Sleeveless" Look

Pattern 4795



By ANNE ADAMS

"Lady . . . be feminine!" says Summer Fashion. And Anne Adams smartly responds with Pattern 4795. Those long front and back panels will do lovely things for your figure. Low-placed, slanting side seams give the long-waisted effect so desirable this season and make a belt unnecessary. You'll like the cool, gay, "sleeveless" look of those tiny caps that just cover your shoulders — another new and popular feature! Either shirring or darts hold the shoulder lines nicely in place. Make one sheer afternoon style with lace edging and then stitch up another frock in sport version, perhaps adding a dashing touch with revers, a belt and a wide hem-band in spirited contrast!

Pattern 4795 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1-8 yards 39-inch fabric and 2 1-4 yards lace edging.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

A Look in Time Will Save Itch Of Poison Ivy

Holiday Wrecker Lurks in Woods and Fields; Childre Are More Susceptible Than Older People

Ottawa, July 8 (CP)—Bugaboo of many a Canadian holiday is poison ivy. While there are cures for the little three-leaf plant's poison, the national health department suggests in its advice to vacationists that better than a cure is prevention. In other words learn to recognize the plant and give it a wide berth.

Poison ivy may appear as a low shrubby patch, bordering fences or as a climber like the Virginia creeper. But a little observation shows that it looks like no other plant.

The leaves are borne alternately on the stem and consist of three similar leaflets as in the strawberry. They are firm and quite smooth, even glossy. In the early part of the summer clusters of whitish flowers arise from the axils of the leaves and these are succeeded by round, dull white fruits about the size of a pea.

"No other plant has at the same time trifoliate leaves and white fruits," is the information obtained at the department.

Poison ivy grows under a variety of conditions but is most commonly found in woods and fields. The slightest contact with the leaves, stem, flower, fruit or even the tiny hairs on the stem causes it to give off a volatile oil which produces an itchy rash on the human skin. Children are found to be more susceptible than adults.

Neutralizes Poison

Protection may be provided by washing hands and face and wiping legs with a five per cent solution of ferric chloride in a mixture of water and glycerine in equal parts. It neutralizes the poison. If applied immediately after exposure it will still be effective, but it is not useful as a cure later.

Physicians can give desensitization treatment in case where people are particularly sensitive to the poison. The most immediate treatment when the ivy poisoning infection is suspected is to scrub the skin with a strong laundry soap in tepid water—changing the water after each lathering—or preferably under running water to carry away the poison.

If this is done before the poison has a chance to penetrate the skin no other treatment is necessary. Washing with alcohol, kerosene or gasoline also helps to keep the poison from spreading.

Most widely recommended treatment is potassium permanganate. Once blisters have formed rubbing should be avoided. Baking soda, boracic acid solution are soothing. In the case of open sores no application should be made but such soothing lotions as calamine or lead acetate may be employed. Oily substances should never be used because they dissolve the volatile oil and spread the infection.

"Eradication of the plant is only possible by removing the pest bodily," an official said. All roots should be pulled up.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Marriage Without Love Always a Mistake

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I first met the young lady she was engaged to another man. We went out together several times and she fell in love with me and I with her. She wanted to break up with her fiance, but he threatened to do away with himself.

There was nothing for me to do but slip out of the picture, which I did, leaving no forwarding address. When I returned after an absence of five years, she had married the man. She now has a three-year old daughter, who is very dear to her.

However, she doesn't love the child's father, and told me she married him only because I had deserted her, because her parents died and she was lonely. I still love her.

She is very miserable with this man, and wants to leave him and marry me. What do you think I ought to do about it?

Samuel

It's too late to say that it's always a mistake to marry without love. The woman you've cared for so long did this mistaken thing and is paying the penalty. The thing to consider now is the welfare of your old sweetheart's little child, and the little girl's need for her own father's protection.

You haven't told me anything to this man's discredit — evidently he's doing his best with the wife who doesn't love him.

Your letter makes me think you're a decent sort of chap and not the type of man who would want to be the cause of breaking up a home where a little child is growing up with her own father and mother. Please consider most carefully any step you take.

Esquire Kids Score Surprise Win Over Corbys—Point Anne Take Sacos in Two Softball Fixtures

Connie Harris Wild and Walks Seven Batsmen in Game at Flats

JUNIORS HIT HARD

While the Esquire Juniors were staging a surprise 9 to 6 win over the league leading Corby A. C. at Coleman Flats last evening, Bubby Gaulin's merry "Cementmen" were fattening their batting averages at Point Anne, where the homesters won 19 to 2 over the courageous SACO entry in the City Senior Softball League. It was the final double bill prior to the termination of the schedule this week, with a strong race still being waged between Reliance and the scrappy Esquire kids for the third-place slot in the City League play-offs.

Although Corby's out-hit the Juniors 16 to 13, they could not bunch their hits off Ralph Campbell, Red Townsend's newly acquired mound discovery from Foxboro. Campbell laboured cautiously off the hilltop and left nine of Skipper Bawden's league-leaders stranded on the runways, and allowed only six runs on 16 hits, four of which were for extra bases, including Kiser's sixth inning circuit blow with one aboard. Campbell's control was good, as he only walked two, while Connie Harris, labouring for the Corby's developed a wild streak and walked seven Esquire batters, several of which crossed the plate for valued runs.

Kids Score Six

The Juniors blossomed out with a six run attack in the fourth, when eleven of their batsmen faced Harris before the side was retired. Len Cook opened the frame with a home run to deep right-centre. Callaghan walked and was forced at second by Bradden, Tomaso singled scoring Bradden and Campbell walked. Whiting was safe on Ronsky's bobble at third, Guay struck out, but Reid, Mansfield and Cook singled, the latter getting his second hit of the inning and six runs score. Corby's rallied in the sixth when they gave Campbell his only trouble. Ronsky opened with a double. Hamilton followed suit and Kiser drove out a round-tripper. Cy Barriage singled, but was forced by John Bawden, who later scored on Lunberg's hard one-base blow. The first three men for Corby's singled in the ninth, but Hamilton was out trying to stretch it and they only scored once.

Kingston Play Here

Ronsky and Hamilton had three hits each for Corby's, as Kiser had a home run and single; while Cook with a circuit blow and two singles paced the Juniors, Mansfield and Tomaso coming through with timely hits also. The Esquire kids played stronger defensive ball and gave Campbell sterling support in the clutches, as they came up with two fast double plays, as against one completed by Corby's. Manager Barriage announced last night that the Corby A. C. would play an exhibition game versus the "B.A." team, league-leaders in the Kingston League at the Flats on Thursday night.

Cementmen Win Easily

It wasn't much of a trick for Bubby Gaulin's Point Anne charges to beat the lowly SACO nine 19 to 2 on their home diamond, as "Ding" Luffman pitched steady ball for the winners and was given fine support by the second placed club in the league.

LONGEST LOSING STREAK HELD BY TORONTO LEAFS

Entry From Queen City Going From Bad to Worse as Weeks Roll by

BEARS ON TOP

(By The Associated Press)

It seems that they don't believe in halfway measures in the International Baseball League.

Take their winning and losing streaks for example. As of today the longest strings were seven straight victories by the second-place Bisons and ten successive losses by the cellar-dwelling Toronto Leafs. Those couldn't be extended yesterday, as Buffalo and Toronto both had open dates while the only two games scheduled, Newark at Rochester and Jersey City at Montreal, were rained out last night.

But those two streaks are only part of the story. Newark's league leaders had run up a string of 11 straight triumphs before they were stopped Sunday and that just equalled the season record previously established by Syracuse. Earlier in the campaign the Bears had hung up a couple of streaks of five straight and one of six. Buffalo hit the seven victories mark twice before starting the current string. Jersey City has boasted strings of seven and six victories and Montreal, Rochester and Baltimore have hit the five mark at least once.

Perhaps the most amazing team of all, Syracuse turned around after their 11 victories and lost 14 straight, the season's longest losing streak, before they came out of it Sunday. Earlier losing strings include nine by Syracuse, eight by Toronto and a couple of seven-gamers by Baltimore.

Yesterday in Toronto, an exhibition game between New York Yankees and a combined team of Baltimore and Toronto was postponed because of rain. Proceeds were to have gone to the Red Cross British War Victims' Fund.

BRIGGS STADIUM, DETROIT, SCENE OF ALL-STAR GAME

Feller and Wyatt Will be Opposing Hurlers in the Opening Lineup

STUDDED WITH STARS

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit, July 8 (AP)—The two finest talented teams in baseball tear into each other at Briggs Stadium today in the ninth annual all-star game between hand-picked specialists of the National and the American Leagues.

The American League is supposed to have the more terrific hitters, the National League the more clever pitchers.

The weather promised to be cool for this time of year, and clear. Briggs Stadium figured to be comfortably filled with more than 50,000 fans.

Del Baker, manager-for-a-day of the American League "supers," chose Bobby Feller of Cleveland to lead off. Feller, with 16 victories and only four losses for the season, is baseball's greatest current pitcher.

For the National Leaguers the leadoff pitcher promised to be Whit Wyatt, with a record of 13 won and four lost for Brooklyn. Rumors last night said that Wyatt did not feel well but Manager Bill McKechnie of the Nationals was counting on him nevertheless.

The score, up to today, was five victories for the American League against three for the Nationals in the all-star series.

After Feller either had breezed through the first three innings of today's game, or had got his bumps, Baker intended to use Thornton Lee of the Chicago White Sox, a talented left hander. Beyond that, Baker refused to go.

McKechnie intended to use Bucky Walters as his second thrower and then trust to Providence.

Both managers had some tough choices to make in their lineups, besides their pitchers. They found themselves glutted with riches, so to speak, and last night the best either would give out was a "tentative" line-up.

'DARK HORSES' SHARE LEAD IN P.G.A. TOURNEY

Harry Bassler and 'Dutch' Harrison Shoot 68's in First Medal Round

SNEAD IS SECOND

By LOUDON KELLY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Denver, July 8—(AP) — Cherry Hills, rolling out against a backdrop of the Rockies, still is daring most of the professional golfing clan to give it a licking in tournament play.

A field of 97 professionals teed off yesterday. Just five cracked the stubborn par 71 in the first leg of the P.G.A. tournament's 36-hole qualifying rounds for the Alex Smith Diamond Medal and a foothold in tomorrow's match play rounds for the 63 low scorers and defending champion Byron Nelson of Toledo.

None could break it in the U.S. open at Cherry Hills in 1938, won by Texas Ralph Guldahl in even par.

Harry Bassler, blackhaired member of a California baseball playing family and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, an Arkansan built like a No. 1 iron, guided the caravan in today's second trek over the lake-trapped course with 68's.

Snead Stroke Behind

A stroke back was Sam Snead, the sweet swinger from Hot Springs, Va., his ailing back apparently forgotten, whose sizzling iron play earned him the starting 69.

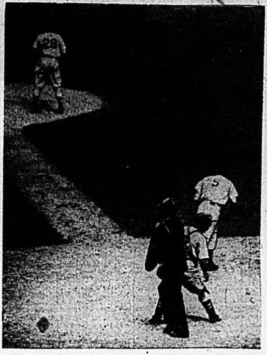
Braced at 70 were two unknowns to most golf galleries—27-year-old George Fazio of Philadelphia and Bill Francis, a redhead from Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Little Ben Hogan, leading money earner of the year from Hershey, Pa., was tied at par 71 with tall Henry Ransom of Fort Worth, Texas.

National Open Champion Craig Wood said "I couldn't seem to get going after taking a six and a five on the first two holes," but he seemed confident of bettering his first day 76.

Title Owner Nelson, who automatically qualifies but was eligible to compete with his brethren for the medal, later told newspapermen "I'm just going out there for practice." Only 15 holes of his round were posted on the scoreboard and showed him seven over par.

JOE STARTS RECORD-BREAKING HOMER



Joe DiMaggio (5), New York Yankee centrefielder, starts a trip around the bases after hitting a homerun in the fifth inning of the Boston-Yankee game in New York city. Joe's clout set a new major league record as he hit safely in his 45th consecutive game. On the mound is Boston Pitcher Heber Newsome (28), and the catcher is Frank Pytlak (2). The umpire is Ed Rommel.

CAPTURES ONTARIO AMATEUR CROWN

Bruce Bradley, of Oshawa, posted a one-up victory over Jack Chinery to capture the Ontario amateur golf crown. Bradley had a medal score of 78 and Chinery a 79.

CANADIAN COMPETING IN U.S.

SEATTLE FANS FOLLOW CAREER OF HUTCHINSON

Pitching for Bisons, Freddy, Property of Tigers, Has Won 15 and Lost 3

ALSO HITTING BALL

By GAIL FOWLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Seattle, July 8 (AP)—Seattle hates to give up one of its home-grown sports heroes, and right now the citizens are gloating over the performance of Freddie Hutchinson in the far-off International Baseball League.

Hutch, you will remember, is the 21-year-old right-handed pitcher who journeyed from a Seattle high school into a Seattle Pacific Coast League uniform, won 25 games against seven losses in 1938 and was sold to Detroit for cash and players estimated at anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000.

Freddie with reams of publicity, flopped with Detroit in 1939, then shuffled off to Toledo and did so well that he was recalled by the Tigers at the end of the season. He got two big league trials in 1940, starting the season with Detroit, being shipped to Buffalo and then brought back to Detroit shortly before the world's series. This year, he went to the Detroit training camp but wound up on the Buffalo roster a second time as the season opened.

To Stay All Season

The understanding here is that he will remain with the Bisons all of this season. With three Detroit trials behind him, he cannot be called up by the big league club and sent to the minors again unless traded or sold to some other major league club.

The disappointed Seattle fans now note with satisfaction that Hutch is burning the league as a pitcher with something like 15 victories against three defeats; and that he also is slugging the ball so well he's been used as an outfielder and pinch hitter.

Now the fans out here pay more attention to the accounts of Hutchinson's performances with Buffalo than they do to the major league doings. Even Joe DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting streak has to share honors with Freddie.

TENNIS TOURNEY IN FULL SWING

Junior Men's Singles and Ladies' Single Matches Postponed by Rain

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—Forced by rain to postpone the Junior's Men's Singles and Ladies' Singles matches yesterday, officials in charge of the Ontario Tennis championship tournament were expected to have the tournament swinging in full stride today with a little help from the weatherman.

Although rain caused postponement of the play in these two divisions, the men's singles and junior boy's matches scheduled for yesterday were run off after the downpour had stopped and favorite players advanced as expected into the second round.

Last year's finalists in the men's singles, champion Ross Wilson of Toronto, and runner-up Bobby Murray, also of Toronto, pushed their way past the first round with convincing victories. Wilson batted out a 6-2, 6-4 win over M. Cohen of Toronto and Murray lost only two games in defeating D. Evans of Toronto 6-1, 6-1.

B. Macken of Montreal pulled out a victory over L. Percival of Toronto after losing the first set 4-6. Finding the range after that set, he swept on to take the match with victories in the next two sets, 6-3, 6-1.

The tournament continues throughout the week with finals scheduled for Saturday afternoon. One-third of the proceeds will be donated to the Canadian Red Cross.

Letters to the Sports Editor

To the Sporting Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.
Dear Sir:-

Please allow me a few suggestions re the manner of soliciting collections at the ladies' ball games each week. While the game is in progress the audience so enraptured with it all that their attention is simply riveted completely on its continuance. Now the young lady who solicits funds passes rapidly along with the container elevated to receive, the result that very few of the audience can reach down into their pocket or into their purse in time to produce. I would suggest the young lady that she solicit individually from the men, young and old, also the ladies. They then would either decline to give and she could pass on to the next or else they would proceed immediately to go down for their subscription. In other words let her solicitation be individual each and every one would then be requested quietly and slowly to contribute. If this method is followed out the amount received will be larger in proportion and further I might say I believe at least 90 per cent of the audience would give freely and gladly to support such a worthy cause such a wonderful entertainment lasting neary 2 hours. In conclusion let me say the ladies' ball game should be liberally encouraged.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill V.S.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Perhaps the most spectacular feat in the history of the all-star Major League classic was Carl Hubbell's pitching effort during the 1934 game at the Polo Grounds despite the fact the National League entry lost. Hubbell has never been credited with winning an all-star game, but his 1934 mound exploit was undoubtedly the greatest in the history of the classic. That year the Giant's screwball pitcher started for the National League entry. In the first inning, with two on base, "Hubb" struck out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx in succession, which was no mean pitching feat. But wait—King Carl wasn't through yet. In the second inning he fanned Al Simmons, Joe Cronin and Lefty Gomez making six strike-outs in succession, five of them against the heaviest hitters in the game. Hubbell had a 4 to 0 lead over the junior circuit batters as he completed his three innings on the mound. However, the American League batters later ganged up on other senior league hurlers and won that day 9 to 7, but Hubbell's record is still tops.

Every one of these all - star games has had its super-star. Five times the standout honors have gone to twirlers, three times to hitters. Max West was the first comparatively lesser-known star to grab top acclaim. He banged out a homer with two on base off Red Ruffing in the first inning last year to pace the Nationals to a 4-0 win, the first shutout of the series.

Who'll be the star of this year's all-star game at Detroit today? No one can tell but Bob Feller, the American league's ace pitcher, may be the first player to stand out in two all-star games.

Bob stole the show in the 1939 game with bases loaded in the sixth inning, he got the Nationals out and held them to one hit in his 3 2-3 innings. However, Tommy Bridges got credit for the 3-1 win.

Do you remember when John L. Sullivan fought his last bare knuckle fight half a century ago today? He stopped Jake Kilrain at Richburg, Mass., in 75 rounds. "John L." was the last recognized bare knuckle champion and his Richburg fight was the last ungloved tourney of consequence in the United States. Sullivan died Feb. 2, 1918, at Abington, Mass.

Failure of Joe Medwick to regain his old-batting form lends little encouragement to Dodger supporters. Unless the big slugger begins hitting, the task of Larry MacPhail's men will be more difficult than Brooklynites anticipated.

With Ralph Campbell, their newly acquired moundsman from Foxboro, scattering hits well, the Esquire kids staged a surprise 9 to 6 win over the league leading Corby's last night. Campbell was touched for a total of 16 base blows, but steadied off in the clutches to leave nine of Skipper Bawden's crowd stranded when hits might have changed the picture. On the other hand the Esquire kids capitalized on Connie Harris' wildness as he walked seven and punched out run-producing hits when they really counted. Incidentally the Corby's have lost two of their last three league starts with the City League play-offs looming up on next week's softball horizon. Of course they had Johnnie Bawden at shortstop and Cy Barriage out of position in left, but Bawden handled six chances without a bobble in the inner works. By winning the Esquire kids took over second place, forcing Reliance to win their remaining two games to finish a tie for third. Point Anne cinched second place last night by trouncing the SACO nine 19 to 2. Incidentally the Corby's are playing Bang Jordan's "B. A." softballers from Kingston an exhibition game at the Flats on Thursday.

Cliff Argue, games chairman at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is quite optimistic regarding the entry list for the annual men's doubles bowling district tournament here on Wednesday. "Unless I'm badly mistaken we'll have the largest entry of teams in the history of the new club," predicted Cliff as he pointed out that men's teams from the entire No. 15 district of the Ontario Bowling Federation have been notified of the tourney. Play will consist of four 12-end games with the Robertson Cup going to the winning team and the H. A. Fish Trophy to the second high. Prizes for all four-game winners and also those with high scores in the lesser brackets. Mr. Argue also announced a new trophy had been donated by Mrs. Zita Ryan, proprietress of the New Queen's Hotel, this trophy to be competed for in the forthcoming Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's mixed doubles next month.

It was most unfortunate that the New York Yankee at Toronto war charity game, scheduled for Monday, had to be called off on account of wet grounds. However, President Ed Barrow assured the Toronto baseball moguls that the Yankees would return to the Queen City for a charity game, if at all possible. Several local baseball-minded fans including Ed. Thomas, Cy Barrage and "Gates" Farnham, were present and say Joe DiMaggio was literally swamped with kids and autograph-hunters. He proved a willing victim, however.

WORLD'S RECORD TIED

Toledo, O., July 8—(AP) — The world's trotting record of 2:11 for a mile and a sixteenth was equalled by Harold Wilson, a brown horse, in the 17 class trot last night, opening Fort Miami track's second week of grand circuit racing.

The record was previously shared by Bill McKinney and Earl's Moody Guy. The latter horse joined the charmed circle here last week.

Harold Wilson took both heats of the event under the capable driving of Ernie Smith. Harold Wilson, by Joe Wilson-Charlotte Todd, is owned by A. J. Stambaugh of Ada, O.

Dr. Wellington Koo, newly-arrived Chinese ambassador, said at the dinner that if China had submitted to Japanese aggression "the mighty war machine of the island empire in the Far East would have been turned long ago upon the rich far eastern possessions of Europe and America."

Representatives of the British and Allied forces attended the dinner. Soviet Ambassador Maisky was greeted with applause.

Guide Council Visits Camp At Hillcrest

Yesterday was a gala day at the Girl Guides' Camp at Hillcrest, Lake Consecon, the occasion being the annual visit of the Guide Council to the camp. About twenty-five members motored to Hillcrest in the afternoon and were royally entertained by the campers, a masquerade and campfire program concluding the interesting ceremonies of the day.

The guests were welcomed by the Camp Commandant, Mrs. MacLean Haig. After touring the camp, the visitors assembled on the beach where the future Guides and Scouts with the party had a thrilling time swimming and wading until the arrival of the Guides for their daily swim, under the supervision of expert seniors. At the end of the swim period the Guides disappeared to camp quarters and when the visitors caught up with them again they were at work on their sewing and knitting. The Guides are doing knitting for the Red Cross and are also piecing a patchwork quilt for the Red Cross refugee work.

Visitors had the pleasure of having their supper out doors with the Guides, and had brought a treat of ice cream for the campers. At the conclusion of supper, Phyllis Trusdale expressed the appreciation of the Guides to the Council for their visit and for the treats they had provided.

Masquerade Held

In honour of the occasion a masquerade had been planned by the girls and the seventy-six original and wonderful costumes which materialized through the resource of the campers dazzled the visitors. Following the grand parade, awards for costumes were made at the campfire on the beach. The judges were Mrs. A. E. May and Mrs. J. W. Imlah, and the results of the judging were announced by Jean Dickens, second in command at the camp, and the awards made by Mrs. W. H. Finkle. The winners were: most original costume, 1st Barbara Bews as Neptune; second, Marjorie Hewson as the Funny Paper Man; Best Pair, Betty Snare and Betty Jeffs as the Organ Grinder and his Monkey; the Funniest Costumes, Shirley Marina, Eileen Jeffs and Lois Flindall as the Three Humps.

An informal program was given by the Guides with community singing, Betty Snare acting as accompanist on the accordian, charades, and individual acts by the girls, such as a tap dance by Barbara Donavon, Comedy skits by Consetti Scotti, and by Edna Howe and Clara Way, reading by Elinor Finkle, song by Jean Pedder.

Presentation of Gold Cord

Climaxing the interesting program was the presentation to Joyce Watson of the Gold Cord which she had merited by successfully completing the exacting requirements for this honour. The presentation was made by the Divisional Commissioner, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, who conveyed the congratulation of all the Guides to Miss Watson and said she was proud to present to her the first Gold Cord ever won in Belleville. Mrs. Branscombe explained the qualifications necessary for the conferring of the Gold Cord. One other Guide Miss Jean Dickens, had almost qualified for it, before being made an officer, but Miss Watson is the only one in Belleville with the distinction of wearing this important insignia.

Greetings Read

The Guides of Belleville had the great pleasure of receiving a personal acknowledgment to their Thinking Day greetings to Miss Agnes Baden-Powell and her card was heard at campfire. In her message to them, Miss Baden-Powell referred to herself as "the First Girl Guide" and she said: "My dear Guides of Belleville: Whilst we see in the Front Line, with fighting and bombs falling, our houses burning, you are generously working at our arms and necessaries. I want to send my love to each of you and to warmly thank you for your kind thought of me, for the lovely greeting card you so kindly sent me". The card was signed "Always your affectionate grandmother, Agnes Baden-Powell". This card will always be treasured by the Guides of Belleville, a momento of their leader.

The singing of a hymn and Taps brought to a close a very happy day in camp life and in the memories of the Guides and their visitors.

AT THE CAPITOL

Double Horror Show

Now playing at the Capitol Theatre two chiller-dillers are combined on the same program to make one of the most terrifying shows ever concocted. They are "Man Made Monster" and "Horror Island."

Asserting once again its leadership in the field of dramatic screen shockers, Universal comes through with another spine-tingling triumph in 'Man Made Monster."

Relating the strange events which follow a mad scientist's transformation of a normal human being into a super-charged monster by means of electrical shocks, the film is a succession of high tension thrills.

Lionel Atwill, as the scientist, offers an outstanding portrayal, while Lon Chaney, Jr., reveals in brilliant fashion the heritage of his late great father, Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson and Samuel S. Hinds are excellent in other prominent roles.

One of the current popular pastimes, the treasure hunt, becomes serious business in Universal's "Horror Island," mystery thriller now at the Capitol Theatre.

With Dick Foran heading the expedition, a varied and colorful group of characters, played by Leo Carrillo, Peggy Moran, Fuzzy Knight, Lewis Howard, Walter Catlett, Ralf Harolde, John Eldredge, and others, sets out on a week-end excursion in search of thrills and a buried treasure. The party spends a night of terror in a deserted, gloomy castle on a fog-bound island.

The same program includes an interesting travelogue.

"The Wagons Roll at Night"

Humphrey Bogart, Joan Leslie, Eddie Albert and Sylvia Sidney head the cast of "The Wagons Roll at Night," which will make its local debut next at the Capitol Theatre. Adventure, romance, drama and thrills combine to make this one of the year's most exciting pictures, according to advance reports.

The picture, produced at the Warner Bros. studios, was directed by Ray Enright, from the screen play by Fred Niblo, Jr., and Barry Trivers, suggested by a story by Francis Wallace. Besides the four stars, the cast includes Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Clara Blandick, Charley Foy and Aldrich Bowker, as well as hundreds of extra players.

Along with "The Wagons Roll at Night" will be shown the first chapter of the thrilling new serial "The Mysterious Doctor Satan."

CHECK RENTS

BARNSTAPLE, England — (CP) —The town council has appointed a committee to deal with rents and take proceedings where warranted, following complaints that some landlords were charging prices 400 to 500 per cent above normal.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Firefly"

Probably one of the foremost musical pictures in screen history, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaption of Rudolf Frimy's operetta, "The Firefly", starring silver-voiced Jeanette MacDonald, with Allan Jones and Warren William in featured roles, opened on Monday at the McCarthy theatre.

Here is screen artistry at its height. The dramatic story of Spain in the era when Napoleon was conquered at Vittoria by Wellington, provides a moving plot as vast and impressive as any that could be filmed.

Jeanette MacDonald scores a personal triumph in the title role as the colorful dancing girl of Madrid who acts as an alluring espionage agent for her country in gay Paris. Engrossed in her appointment duty of securing information to save her King from falling into the hands of hated Napoleon, Jeannette falls in love with Allan Jones, who, unknown to her, is one of the enemy secret service.

Almost trapped as she is about to send information by carrier pigeon, Jeanette is forced to flee the country, but continues her work behind the French lines as Napoleon overrides Spain. Again discovered in her work as a spy for the Spanish and English forces as she is recognized by Warren William, playing the part of a French officer, Jeanette is proven guilty by her French lover and condemned to death.

Throughout the picture Miss MacDonald dances with rare grace and sings "Love is like a Firefly," "He Who Loves and Runs Away," and "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart." Jones sings "A Woman's Kiss" and "The Donkey Serenade," while they join in duet in "Giannina Mia" and "Sympathy."

The whole score is gay with brilliant Spanish melody and the film is staged on a scale of unrestricted beauty that could be possible only in Hollywood.

A second feature attraction, "Under Age", together with latest Fox News events, rounds out the program.

AT THE BELLE

"One Night in Lisbon"

"One Night in Lisbon" is the first big laugh to be smuggled out of war-torn Europe.

For today Lisbon has become the most exciting, most romantic city in all the world. With its crowded refugees who range from kings to beggars all seeking this last port of escape, "One Night in Lisbon," which opens next at the Belle Theatre has caught all of the European capital's magical spell and colorful background.

But that's not all. For Edward H. Griffith, veteran producer-director, managed to capture the lighter side of the war, an accomplishment that is nothing short of genius. In an intriguing story filled with spies, espionage and sabotage agents, mystery and thrilling suspense, Griffith masterfully has turned drama into rollicking comedy with the aid of talented Madeleine Carroll and fun-loving Fred MacMurray.

Setting a fast pace, the film opens with air raid warnings in blacked-out London. Fred MacMurray, Yankee pilot who ferries bombers across the Atlantic to the R.A.F., ducks into a nearby air-raid shelter, sees beautiful Madeleine Carroll and it's love at first sight — for him. This starts his mad chase after the blonde eyeful which finally winds up in Lisbon where the girl of his dreams is kidnapped by German agents before his very eyes.

Through a series of melodramatic episodes, highlighted by gay comedy, the hero, with the aid of British Navy officer John Loder who also loves the evasive Madeleine, crashes an underground spy chamber in Lisbon and saves the girl. When the proud beauty glides into the waiting arms of the "wild American," Loder supplies the film's classical punch line, "nothing is more important than that England and America hold fast to each other." That Fred and Madeleine do can be attested to by any referee—that is, if he can keep from looking into the soulful eyes of filmland's most gorgeous blonde while she's engaged in a clinch.

A Mr. Popopopopoulos played by sneezy Billy Gilbert, sabotages romance and war with bombastic laughter. Patricia Morison, Billie Burke, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Reginald Denny and Marcel Dalio complete a brilliant cast of players in support of Madeleine Carrol, Fred MacMurray.

The same program includes a musical comedy, "Dipsy Gypsy," and the latest in the popular "Canada Carries On" series. This short subject entitled 'Churchill's Island" is reported to be one of the finest pictures yet to come out of the war zone.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

Tom spoke for the first time. "If you fellows will come up to the Hacienda, I'll see what can be done about rustling up some drinks while Heath and Mrs. Marchbanks prepare her statement."

The reporters eyed Tom as though aware of his presence for the first time. Patterson jerked a thumb at him over his shoulder as he asked Donald, "Who's he?"

"Only the guy that owns the joint—speaking likely to understand," Donald answered. "Tom Forman, to whom Old Man Markham left Halcyon Island on condition that it be maintained as a honeymoon retreat for at least five years, or — and get this, my fine-feathered friend—until such time as the United States is no longer in danger of invasion by any alien power."

Patterson's eyebrows went up a little. One of the other men whistled, and somebody said, "Smells like a yarn, at that."

"It would," Patterson agreed gently. "It would, indeed—if anybody but this lug had mentioned it."

"Meaning, of course, that I have already squeezed the story dry," said Donald cheerfully. "Well, of course, you couldn't possibly understand sentiment, could you, my hearties? But anyway, try to get this: I came here on my honeymoon, not in search of a story. And I haven't sent back one single word about the island to my paper. It's all yours, sweetheart — every little scrap! And—er—I do mean scrap."

"I'll bet you do," Patterson agreed with vigor and suspicion.

Donald grinned at him and, with a hand beneath Natalie's elbow, he said to her, "Now, shall we go over to your cottage, Natalie, and figure out just how much of the truth we can trust to these bums?" Over his shoulder he said cheerfully, "See you at the Hacienda later."

He and Natalie walked away. He had not once looked toward June nor spoken to her. She stood very still in her pink linen shorts and halter, watching him go away with Natalie, a tragic whiteness about her face.

One of the other men glanced at her curiously. And then, startled, as though some faint memory had clicked far back in a mind that had been concerned with Natalie until this moment, he said sharply, "Sa-a-ay — you're June Jacobi, aren't you?"

The others whirled and stared at her. June drew herself up to her full height and said quietly, "Yes, I'm June Jacobi."

"Well, this is a pleasure, Miss Jacobi," the man chattered eagerly. "What the heck are you doing here —if I may ask?"

"Will you listen to him —"If I may ask?" Patterson muttered to a colleague.

June's eyes followed Donald for a moment. Then she lifted her head, squared her shoulders, and said evenly, "I'm here on a visit. I am leaving for Hollywood the last of the week—to do a radio broadcast and a six-month stretch in the movies. Yes, of course you may print that if you like."

Patterson said quietly, "Aren't you honeymooning here? Seems to me I read about you getting married and giving up your career to go domestic or something."

June gave him a bright smile that somehow hurt the watching Betsy. "You must admit it was good publicity. It got quite a bit of space — that announcement," said June coolly, and walked away.

"Quite a gal," said Patterson. "Wonder what became of the screwball she married?"

Tom and Betsy exchanged significant glances and Tom said cheerfully, "And now if you gentlemen will follow me, we'll see about that drink."

"Music to my ears, mister—music to my ears," said Patterson, as he fell into step beside him.

"Shall I take it on the lam?" asked Brooks, as June rounded the shoulder of a dune and came upon him where he sprawled looking out at the sea.

"No — of course not," said June swiftly. "You were here first. I mean —isn't there something about possession being some points of the law — or something?"

"I believe there is," Brooks agreed, his keen eyes noting that she was on the verge of a break of some kind. "Then park yourself, lady, and share my view of the ocean. I was just thinking that it's a terrific mess of water. Then I realized that what we see out there is only the top—and I was further awed by its immensity—"

"You needn't go on talking," said June, and though her voice shook a little he saw that she had herself well in hand. "Could a lady maybe have a cigaret?"

"Of course." Brooks offered her one, took one himself, lit it, and waited while she breathed deeply and let the smoke drift from her lips.

She drew up her sunburned knees, encircled them with her arms, and rested her chin on them, her blue eyes on the ocean that broke in lacy white foam against the yellow beach.

"Here endeth the first lesson," she said at last, and gave a littl sound that might have been a cynical chuckle or a sob.

Cautiously Brooks said, "Well maybe—of course I couldn't be expected to know what the lesson was about—"

"Oh, yes you do," said June bitterly. "You and I are in the same boat, my lad. We've both made marriages that everybody tried to tell us wouldn't work — including the two people we married."

"It was I who tried to tell Natalie it wouldn't work," said Brook, a trifle stiffly.

June nodded. "And I who tried to convince Don that it would," she acknowledged. "Well, anyway, you have the satisfaction of knowing you were right."

"And quite a lot of satisfaction it is, I suppose," said Brooks in a tone that plainly said it was nothing of the kind.

'You see, where I made my mistake was in thinking that Donald loved me," said June.

"But of course he does. He's mad about you," Brooks cut in swiftly.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, Willyum, my faith in human nature has been vindicated.

I couldn't ask for a more cheery bit of news, pop said, and ma said, You've heard me speak of Mrs. Shallop, haven't you.

Well, yes and no, I mean if I have I cant remember it at the moment, pop said, and ma said, Well, she's one of the bridge crowd, and she's just as notorious a borrower as she is a flagrant example of failing to pay back. Anyway, she happened to owe me 50 cents, wich she borrowed several weeks ago on some weak pretext, and I had just about given it a prominent place in my list of bad detts, because you cant very well lower yourself in your own estimation by reminding somebody of a 50 cent dett any more than you can refuse to make such a trifling loan in the first place. In fact that's the main disadvantage of small loans. I mean if it had been several dollers I could have called it to her attention without any loss of dignity. Anyway, without a word or a hint on my part she handed it over to me today, ma said.

Maybe she's had a great moral reawakening, pop said, and ma said, I cant say about that, but I had scarcely put the 50 cents in my bag when Mrs. Shallop remarked that it was really a most inconvenient time for her to pay it back because she just happened to be short of cash, and would I lend her 5 dollers till the next game? Well now as it happened, my bag was quite stuffed with bills, and Mrs. Shallop couldn't help seeing them, especially since she was peering right in, so I just had to let her have the 5. But as I say, it's easy to remind anybody of 5 dollers, and I had given up the 50 cents for lost, so somehow that makes me feel 4 dollers and 50 cents ahead, you see what I mean, dont you, Willyum? she said.

O yes, your logic hits me like a descending fog, pop said.

Being sourcastic.

Prices Firm On Produce Markets

Toronto, July 8—Butter and eggs both strengthened their positions with price advances of from 1-2 to 1 cent in trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. No sales or quotations were reported for white cheese.

With extremely light receipts proving insufficient to meet the good demand, prices on top-grade eggs were increased 1 cent a dozen in rather quiet trading. At the close prices to country dealers on grades A-large and A-medium rested at 30 and 29 cents a dozen, respectively, while wholesale to retail prices on the same two grades were 33 and 32 cents a dozen.

Creamery butter solids registered an increase of 1-2 cent a pound in light trading caused by continued lack of offerings. Dealers reported that it was easy to sell good lots of first-grade at the advanced price of 34 cents a pound, but that smaller ordinary lots were slower to move.

HITLER TACKLES BEAR—AND LION TACKLES HITLER

Britain was master of the air over England and the European coastline; a situation that developed when the Luftwaffe turned every plane toward the east to battle the Red army of the Soviet Union. Taking advantage of the situation, British bombers showered destructive "return gifts" upon important military objectives. As the photos show, the raids were conducted in broad daylight. At the LEFT a stick of bombs bursts on the newly built hangars on the airdrome at Desevres, near Boulogne. At the RIGHT the bombs burst on the Hazebrouck yard, an important railway junction in northern France. Common name for R.A.F. fliers by the German citizenry is, "the dumb gentlemen," because they bomb only military objectives while German fliers bomb cities indiscriminately.

PREMIER VISITS FORMER U. S. CHIEF JUSTICE IN ROCKIES

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King took time off as he passed through the Rockies to visit former United States Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who is staying at Jasper Park Lodge. Mr. King and Mr. Hughes enjoyed a good chat during the short stop-over of the eastbound train.

Boldest Step Taken by U. S. Says U. K. Paper

London, July 8 —(CP)—Occupation of Iceland by United States forces was greeted jubilantly by the British Press today and one paper said the move made the Atlantic Ocean "an Anglo-American Lake".

"In Britain we can breathe more freely", the Daily Mail said. But added: "There are other Atlantic islands equally dangerous to America—The Azores and Cape Verde Islands. There is also Dakar (French North African Port.)"

Government officials informally expressed opinion the United States action was the inevitable result of her foreign policy and that it probably was the forerunner of other measures.

There was no immediate official statement concerning the occupation, but qualified observers attached importance to the fact that Iceland is well within the Atlantic blockade zone set up by Germany.

Boldest Step Taken Says Daily Express

"It is for America the boldest step she has taken in her determination to aid us", said the Daily Express, Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper.

"This master stroke by the greatest friend of democracy has given us supreme aid, not only in the battle of the Atlantic, but it permits Britain to bring home to other spheres of action vitally needed men and equipment".

"In effect, the President has extended his country's frontier across 4,000 miles of ocean," The Daily Mail said. "He has established a startling and courageous precedent in the history of the United States."

The Daily Sketch said: "Here is no formal declaration of war, but the closest form of collaboration between the democracies from which the great American statesman has never shrunk".

Most Important Event

A foreign office spokesman described the United States entry into Iceland as "one of the most important and significant events of recent months from our standpoint".

He said British forces in Iceland would be withdrawn by stages. He said the agreement under which the United States sent to the forces was strictly between Iceland and the United States and Britain was not a party to it.

Fascists Call It "Intervention"

Rome, July 8.—(AP) — Rome political circles today asserted that the arrival of United States forces in Iceland "constitutes real and true intervention in European waters".

Berlin, July 8—(AP)—Nazi officialdom declined to comment today on the arrival of United States armed forces in Iceland, but said a statement might be issued within the next 24 hours.

Tokyo Paper Claims Action 'Decisive'

Tokyo, July 8.—(AP)—United States occupation of Iceland "is de facto participation in the war", the Nationalist newspaper Okumin said today.

Domei, Japanese News Agency, said "this action is decisive and must have been taken with strong determination". It means, Domei said, that the United States finally has entered the zone of hostilities as defined by Germany

'Churchill's Island' Dynamic In Appeal to Heroic Spirit; Don't Miss Powerful Film Short

"Churchill's Island," the most recent release of the "Canada Carries On" series of motion picture shorts, is a dynamic story of embattled Britain; a fortress of freedom which has beaten off all attempts at invasion. 'Churchill's Island" will be shown at the Belle Theatre Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

The film gives a brilliant picture of the battle in the skies. Shots of Nazi bombers, from anti-aircraft guns, of planes zooming and twisting high in the air. These pictures were taken from the cockpits of Spitfires and Hurricanes. Nazi bombers are ripped to bits before your eyes and you see them plummet smoking to earth.

The grim story of the Battle of the Atlantic is also shown. Lean subs surfacing in mid-ocean; you hear Germans singing their battle song, "We're Sailing Against England."

Then there is the great people's army which has grown out of England's stress of war. Firemen, factory workers, home guards patrolling the moors; village bells ready to ring at a moment's notice in case of invasion; the sandy beaches where grim dusky figures patrol ceaselessly.

Because of these men and their indomitable courage, the convoys go on and lifelines hold even though they are battered and bent. To keep those lifelines alive is the job of every Canadian. Britain must have the tools. That is the message of the film, one which should be seen by every resident of this city. It is direct. It tells the truth and it is a powerful instrument of public information. Don't miss "Churchill's Island."

FORESEES

Canada's last line of defence.

People Over There Real Defenders

Those people over there are our real defenders," he declared. "Last year by a display long sustained of gallantry still and daring such as the history of war never saw excelled they gave us our only chance of life.

"Our one defence is around the British citadel and there we have to go. There is no roundabout route to victory by pacts and committees and cables. There is nothing but a hard, rough, agonizing bloody road between us and the precipice and the time is short.

"We ought to be sending many times what we are sending," said Mr. Meighen, "and even if we thus multiply our help we cannot call ourselves generous or anything more than just."

Everybody In War Over There

The Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald called for the combined efforts of fighting men and civilians in Britain and the lands overseas to bring defeat to the Germans.

"It is everybody's war in England," he said. "King, Lords and Commoners, all are in it fighting, and it is everybody's war here."

He told of what the British War Victims Fund meant to those in Britain, and spoke from first hand experience in doing so for when in England, he had been one of those who administered the fund.

He told of the suffering in bombed London and Glasgow, Cardiff, Coventry, Plymouth, Liverpool and Sheffield and the other towns and cities which had felt the hate of Hitler's air hordes.

"Give in the same spirit in which they are giving," he urged. "Give in a measure which means sacrifice. You will hold your heads higher if you know that you have done all that you can to defeat the enemy of mankind." Mr. MacDonald saw no fear that Hitler would not be defeated. Even if his latest treachery, his campaign in Russia, should be successful, still defeat would follow. Even if Britain's blockade failed and a frontal attack on the Nazi military machine failed, victory would still be won by Britain, he said.

Smash German People's Will

"We can smash the will of the German people to continue the war." He declared, "they will not stand up to the bombing with the fortitude that the citizens of Britain have shown. They and Hitler will crumple under our bombs if we can build and man an air force so great that it conquers the skies over his central fortress of Germany."

Provincial Press Praised

Warm tribute was paid by Mr. C. O. Knowles to his brother editors in the provincial press of the Province of Ontario. "There was no petty jealousy on their part because this fund was launched by a Toronto newspaper," he said. "No less than 61 newspapers in Ontario have fostered this British War Victims' Fund and in many cases have sent in tens of thousands of dollars. In the majority of cases the large contributions received were due to the unselfish zeal of the local publisher."

Britain's gratitude was expressed by London's Lord Mayor, Sir George Wilkinson, whose voice was brought to the gathering by CBC. Of the great and generous help given by the citizens of Ontario he declared "We will never forget it."

Recipe For Fortitude

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—A gathering of nearly 1,000 people paying tribute at a testimonial dinner to C. O. Knowles last night received a recipe through Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald for British fortitude.

The British High Commissioner told the dinner in honor of The Toronto Evening Telegram editor of a letter he received the other day from an old Sottish lady who is a veteran of many air raids."

Mr. MacDonald quoted the letter as follows:

"When the air raid warning sounds I take the Bible from the shelf and read the 23rd Psalm where it says: 'Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of Death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me.' Then I put up a wee bit of prayer. Then I take a wee drop of whisky to steady my nerves. Then I get into bed and pull up the covers, and then I tell Hitler to go to Hell."

SIX GERMAN SHIPS

important railway junctions were struck repeatedly by large bombs.

Also attacked were Den Helder and oil stores at Amsterdam in The Netherlands, besides other points in the Ruhr and Rhineland districts.

Nazi sources in Berlin admitted R.A.F. raids last night on west and northwest Germany and said property damage and casualties were caused by explosive and incendiary bombs.

Nazi raiders, after a long layoff, came over England in force last night and caused substantial damage and many casualties at the Port of Southampton. The raid lasted several hours and was the biggest attack since many historic structures of London were destroyed the night of May 10.

Gigantic Explosion Heard

British night fighters and a strong anti-aircraft barrage accounted for four of five Nazi planes destroyed over the British Isles during the night. A few bombs also were dropped in south and southeast England.

Watchers on the English coast early today said a raid on Boulogne in occupied France caused a "gigantic explosion, which lasted fully two minutes." It was believed that a munitions dump or factory was blown up.

German shipping off the French and Netherland coasts also was attacked early today and Monday.

In summing up yesterday's activities, the Air Ministry said the R.A.F. lost seven planes. Seven Nazi fighters were destroyed.

Six German ships in a convoy of eight were hit off The Netherlands coast and a German speedboat off Calais was sunk.

Nazi Communications Tangled

An informed observer said last night that the ever-increasing and relentless air offensive has tangled Nazi communications in a great swath from the Nazi submarine base of Kiel to the German-occupied port of Brest on the French coast.

The observer said the crushing blows are softening Nazi defences which would aid greatly should Britain decide to send an expeditionary force to the continent, and are destroying facilities the Axis would depend on to aid in any invasion attempt on the British Isles.

He added that British bombers are expecting to extend their scope deeper into Nazi territory as the nights lengthen. He noted that the "fringe of combat" already had been forced back from the French coast, compelling the enemy to move some fighter bases inland.

The latest sustained air offensive, continuous since June 11, has been implemented by hundreds of planes daily and by new super 4,000-pound bombs of tremendous destructive power.

POLICE BLOTTER

Belleville police were asked to keep a sharp lookout for seven teenaged lads who escaped from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School early Monday. As one of the lads was committed to the institution from a County Juvenile Court, Bowmanville authorities immediately notified city and Provincial Police of the institution break. Three of the lads had been returned from farms, where they had been placed, as incorrigibles.

Chief Kidd today issued a warning to motorists regarding the practice of double parking along Front Street. The new system of parallel parking on the west side of the street was introduced in order to create better driving facilities in the downtown area, but if shoppers continue to double park their motor vehicles the congestion will be even worse than before, pointed out Chief Kidd today as summonses were issued to three offenders to appear in Friday's court charged with double parking on Front Street.

Constables along the main thoroughfare beats were instructed to enforce this city ordinance to the limit and motorists are warned accordingly. Aside from traffic violations no arrests were necessary in Belleville thus far this week.

U.S. MARINES IN LONDON

A detachment of United States marines lines up for inspection as they stand guard in front of the United States embassy in London, Eng., for the first time, July 5. attack in a continuing struggle.

The communique spoke specifically of the destruction of German units which normally would total about 5,000 men.

Two infantry regiments were annihilated in a Novograd Volynski counter-attack, the communique said, and two infantry battalions and 35 heavy tanks were destroyed in fighting in the Bobruisk sector.

All Efforts Repulsed

In the Bobruisk sector, near the confluence of the Berezina and the fortified Dnieper, the communique said "all enemy attempts in this direction to force the River Dnieper were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy."

Also in the Ukraine, the Red army was reported in another fierce struggle with German and Rumanian troops thrusting toward the Dniester River. The Russians said of this sector that "owing to the operations of our troops the enemy is being wiped out part by part."

Fifty-eight German airplanes were reported destroyed in air fights and bomb raids on airdromes yesterday to a loss of five Russian planes.

In Bessarabia, a province Russia took from Rumania last year, the Russian communique declared a part of the Germna-Rumanian troops were destroyed "and thrown back from Soviet territory" by a Red Army counter-attack.

Pouring Out Life's Blood

On the central front of the slowly-straightening battle line the Soviet said German troops were pouring their life's blood into the upper Dvina, the Berezina and the fortified Dnieper in futile efforts to cross the rivers toward Moscow.

A Moscow communique said heavy losses were inflicted on forces thrusting into Soviet territory in the vicinity of Kakisalmi, on the Karelian Isthmus 75 miles north of Leningrad, and toward Kandalaksha, 150 miles south of Murmansk and Ukhta, 150 miles farther south.

It reported Soviet forces fighting "fierce engagements against strong units of mechanized enemy troops, holding up their advance towards the northeast" from the Ostrov area. The Nazi spearhead there has been thrust through the Baltic States within 175 miles of Leningrad.

Soviet Troops Holding Firm

Soviet troops were said to be holding firm against repeated Nazi attempts to cross the upper reaches of the Dvina near Polotsk in Northern White Russia.

"Great battles," the communique reported, "have developed in the Lepel region" on the canal between the Dvinsk and the fiercely-defended Berezina River.

Accounts of the fighting in the communique and by Tass, Soviet News Agency, told repeatedly of heavy German losses which one Russian spokesman estimated had averaged 60,000 a day in dead and wounded, making a total of 1,000,000 up to last Sunday.

Tass said 1,300 Germans were killed and wounded in a five-hour fight for a village whose location was not disclosed.

Seven thousand Germans were killed and wounded and 1,500 others surrendered when Red Army tanks smashed a column of German infantry separated from its tank support in a penetration of Russian lines, Tass reported.

CLAIM COMPLETE BLOCKADE

Hong Kong, July 8—(AP)—Complete blockade of the South China coast was claimed today by the Japanese army as it announced the capture of Wongkong seaport on the border of Kwangtung and Fukien provinces, 200 miles north of Hong Kong.

The Japanese army described Wongkong as the last loophole on the China coast through which war materials could be sent to the Chinese Capital at Chungking.

DAMAGE NULLIFIES STORM'S BENEFITS OVER PROVINCE

Two Killed by Lightning And Power Communications Disrupted at Many Points

MANY BARNS BURNED

(By The Canadian Press)

A widespread rain in Ontario brought relief to drought-stricken farmlands yesterday but in some areas left a trail of crop damage, loss of property and disruption of power and communication lines. Two deaths were reported as a result of the storm.

William Hass, 26, was killed by lightning while at work on his father's farm at Adamston, in eastern Ontario, and the second fatality occurred near Milton when Burdge Butts, 52, was struck by lightning while returning from work in the fields.

Farmers in the Niagara fruit belt looked to a change in the weather to save the cherry crop. If the temperature is high today, the bulk of cherries may split, resulting in considerable loss. No damage is expected if the weather turns cool.

Arthur Walker of North Grimsby township suffered severe property loss when his house and barn were struck by lightning. The farm building and contents—400 bushels of grain, a crop of hay, machinery and livestock—were destroyed.

More than half a dozen trees fell in Smith's Falls, one of them striking the home of V. G. Clarke. Field crops were flattened by hailstones as big as marbles but farmers generally were pleased with the precipitation.

Communication lines in Smith's Falls area all were restored by early evening.

At Arnprior, Ont., two barns on the farm of Patrick and John Moran were destroyed by lightning Two horses were killed in the blaze which followed.

Storm Strikes Twice

The storm struck twice in Merrickville region. The gale ripped the roof off the home of Howard O'Neil, a farmer living three miles north of the town, and broke a number of windows. His brother, Morgan O'Neil, who lives nearby saw the roof torn from his barn, and two chimneys on his house wrecked.

Although crop prospects were strengthened by the rain, government experts stressed that spring grains are too far advanced to be benefited greatly. The outlook for hay and clover production was estimated at 66 per cent of normal over a long-time average, alfalfa was placed at 77 per cent of normal and pasture conditions are estimated at 67 per cent of average conditions.

Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, and other officials believe, however, that unless rains immediately strengthen pastures, cheese production will fall in July. Adequate rainfall would relieve pasture conditions and go far toward guaranteeing the cheese production required by Great Britain and would offer hopes for late growth fodder.

Butter production in June totalled 10,842,656 pounds, compared with 11,680,331 pounds in the same month of 1940. Cheese production showed a slight increase of 160,000 pounds, from 16,982,167 in June, 1940, to 17,143,899 in June this year.

R.A.F. SETS AFIRE AXIS AIRCRAFT

Cairo, July 8. —(AP)—The Royal Air Force Middle East Command announced today that fighter aircraft inflicted considerable damage and casualties on Axis material and troops in operations over Libya yesterday.

"At Gambut", said a communique "six enemy aircraft were set on fire on the ground and enemy camps in the vicinity were heavily machine-gunned. During the operation one G-50 was shot down and several other German and Italian aircraft were severely damaged".

Merchant vessels moored at Tripoli, the Axis West Libyan base, were bombed, "direct hits on engine sheds causing large fires and violent explosions".

Twenty fires were started at Bengasi. Also raided were Derna, Martuba, Gazala and Bardia.

FOOD MINISTER MAKES COMMENT

London, July 8 —(CP)— Food Minister Lord Woolton indicated today that a complaint that London retailers charged seven shillings ($1.52) a pound for raspberries was no concern of his.

"I am trying to distribute food, not deal with mental deficiency," said the Minister.

"I have something else to do than deal with folly of a person who charges that price for raspberries—and the foolishness of the person who pays it."

NO RELIEF FOR ANYONE OWNING OR HARBORING DOG

Lawrence, Kas., July 8 —(AP)— Douglas County commissioners ordered relief assistance withheld from anyone owning or harboring a dog. They acted after paying a $16 bill to a veterinarian for making a rabies test on a relief client's dog.

Attack Shipping Of Foe Anywhere

London, July 8—(CP) — Great Britain said in a note to the Turkish government today that Britain reserves the right to attack enemy shipping wherever it may be, authoritative sources said.

The note was in reply to a Turkish protest over the sinking by British torpedo planes July 4 of the French ship St. Didier, which went down in the Turkish harbor of Adalia with the loss of 25 persons.

Turkey protested to London that the sinking violated her territorial waters.

Authoritative quarters compared the attack with those made on German shipping in Norwegian waters early in the war.

The St. Didier was carrying 280 persons, most of them soldiers. In a statement after the sinking the British authorities said "The Vichy French fleet auxiliary steamship St. Didier was detected abusing Turkish territorial waters with distinguishing marks painted out and flying the Turkish flag."

Ankara, Turkey, July 8—(AP)— The French embassy sent an investigator today to Andalia (Antalya), site of the torpedo sinking of the Vichy freighter St. Didier.

The British authorities are known to be concerned over the reported presence of Vichy troops at Axis-held Salonika, Greece and have expressed determination to hamper all efforts to reinforce the levant army of Gen. Henri Dentz.

Antalya is a short distance from the Italian-held Island of Rhodes, which is a port of call for most Syrian traffic since the disclosure of French-Axis collaboration.

'Sticky Bomb' Anti-Tank Weapon Used by British

New York, July 8 —(AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation heard here today said Britain is using a new anti-tank weapon known as the "sticky bomb" against Vichy armored units in Syria.

"This bomb, which is about the size of a pineapple, sticks to the sides of tanks and armored cars and explodes with terrific impact," said the BBC.

Police on Trail Of Young Bandits

Windsor, Ont., July 8 (CP)— Police here said they are on the trail of a gang of young bandits, believed responsible for a series of hold-ups in the district within the past 10 days.

Watches and jewelry stolen from the home of Hon. James H. Clark, speaker in the Provincial Legislature, last June 29, were found today in an abandoned car here, police said. The bandits carried off a 300-pound safe in the raid on Mr. Clark's home, and it contained $1,300 in currency, which has not yet been located, beside the jewelry.

Police have linked the raid on Mr. Clark's home with another here last Saturday, which netted $300 cash, and the holdup of a Simcoe taxi driver for $20 last Friday.

Cordova Mines Man Member of Guard On Churchill Estate

Havelock, Ont., July 8 —(CP)— Pte. Crother Wilson, Cordova Mines, Ont., has written to friends telling them of his latest experience while on active duty in England—being a member of a unit picked to guard the estate of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

He wrote that Winston Churchill looked the guard over and said it was a "smart looking bunch of soldiers."

"He has a very pleasant looking wife. She is always smiling," Wilson said. "He (Churchill) is very nice himself."

'Economic Drought' If Hitler Wins Prime Minister King Warns

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prince Albert, Sask., July 8—(CP) — A Hitler victory, even if confined to Europe alone, would bring an "economic drought" to Western Canada beside which natural droughts of recent years would "pale into insignificance," Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared at a recruiting rally here.

Mr. King addressed the rally last night before entraining for Regina where a busy program awaits him today.

He told his Prince Albert audience loss of continental European markets had made Canadian agriculture the "first casualty of the war."

While measures were being adopted to meet this situation "there could be only one real solution—the defeat of the aggressors, the destruction of the totalitarian order and the restoration of freedom to Europe and other parts of the world."

Appeals to Westerners

Mr. King made an appeal to westerners of foreign nationalities "to seize this opportunity of showing their devotion to the land of their adoption of fighting for it in this hour of crisis."

He scouted the idea of some that young men would not come forward in sufficient numbers as volunteers to meet the need for manpower.

If the issues were clearly understood, the men would volunteer and a responsibility rested upon those who "stood in the way of others who are seeking to make it clear."

But those who could serve and who do not answer the call, he said, "will bear through life the stamp of that failure."

John Diefenbaker, Conservative member of Parliament for Lake Centre and a resident of Prince Albert, drew a round of cheers when, following the Prime Minister, he spoke "a world of welcome on the part of those of us who are not his supporters."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Prime Minister had "placed before us something of what the challenge of Hitlerism means to each of us, and we need messages such as he has given us."

THE WAR TODAY

BY DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The direction of President Roosevelt's policy is marked in clearer outline by his decision that Iceland as long as the war lasts will enjoy the protection of the United States. American power is moving eastward step by step, and will not turn back.

The essence of the President's message to Congress is to be found in his disclosure that orders have been issued to the United States navy "that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts".

This clearly means the British navy is going to be relieved of much of its responsibility in the Western Atlantic. There can be no "safety of communications" if German warships can said through Denmark Strait hunting British convoys, as the Bismarck did, or if German submarines are allowed to continue to prey on shipping south of Greenland.

Whether this means United States warships will fire on German vessels interfering with British shipping will be determined by events. The President's order to the navy is to keep "free of all hostile activity or threat thereof" the waters between Iceland and North America. That is a warning to German naval vessels to stay away, and perhaps it will be heeded.

Further Action Hinted

A hint that further action on the Iceland pattern may be in prospect can be read into the President's words: "....As well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts." One London newspaper declared "there are other Atlantic islands equally dangerous to America—the Azores and Cape Verde Islands."

Assumption by the United States of responsibility for the western part of the North Atlantic will free British ships for the task of clearing the approaches to Britain. The northwestern approaches—the 600 miles stretching between Iceland and Scotland—have already become extremely unhealthy for German U-boats.

This success has forced the Germans to shift the weigh tof their attack to the southwestern approaches. German submarines are now operating in larger numbers south of Ireland and west of France and Portugal.

Active Off Africa

They are active also off the coast of West Africa, attempting to interrupt the flow of United States supplies to the Middle East. The volume of this traffic was disclosed in Washington over the week-end, when it was stated that an average of one ship loaded with United States-manufactured aircraft, tanks or other war equipment reaches the Middle East every day.

NAZI BANKERS BUY FRENCH AND BELGIAN HOLDINGS

Are in Turkey Apparently Using Funds Extracted From Occupied Countries

NAZIS NEED EXCHANGE

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Istanbul, July 8 (AP)—German bankers, pursuing the financial conquest of Europe in the wake and sometimes in advance of the Nazi armies, have begun buying out French and Belgian holdings in Turkey.

For money they apparently are using funds extracted from the occupied countries.

Using both financial and political pressure, the Germans are ferreting out the vast network of French investments in Europe to supply their increasing demands for Foreign Exchange.

Alhough French and Belgian investments in Turkey are comparatively small, Germany needs their credits in Turkey to pay for increased purchases here. A score of German bankers arrived in a group a few weeks ago.

400 Millions Daily From France

Germany gets 400,000,000 francs daily from France under the Armistice agreement to pay costs of the Nazi occupation. But since the actual cost is reported to be much less than that, a surplus is left over with which to buy out French holdings in France and abroad. (The franc has a nominal value of about 2.3 cents.)

The Germans therefore can afford to make enticing offers for French Foreign investments.

For example, they are offering the French 35 to 37 francs per Turkish lira, while the present rate of exchange is 33 francs for the lira.

Even the Germans make a good thing of it. It takes two German marks to buy a lira, but the Germans have arbitrarily declared two marks worth 40 francs.

How Bor Mines Were Bought

So with two marks they get 40 francs, and use only 33 to 37 of the francs to buy the lira. They bought control last winter of the Bor Mines in Yugoslavia, richest copper mines in Europe. The principal holders were summoned to Vichy and told they must sell as part of the 3 "collaboration" with Germany.

High Nazi authorities are reported making an investigation of that deal, however. The stock then was selling for 1,300 francs a share. Terms of sale leaked out in advance to a few French investors who, the informant said, bought in shares for 2,000 francs and sold them to the Germans for 3,500 francs.

2 Indian Soldiers Killed in Skirmish With Tribesmen

Simla, India, July 8—(AP)—Two Indian soldiers have been killed and seven wounded in skirmishes with hostile tribesmen in the Waziristan area on India's northwest frontier, it was announced today.

The tribesmen, induced by the Fakir of Ipi to interfere "with communications in Datta Khel territory" and commit other sabotage, suffered 30 or more casualties.

Authorities said the situation in tribal territory was "gratifyingly steady, despite the Fakir's repeated efforts to stir up hostility."

Earlier it was reported in New Delhi that the Fakir was "making contacts with enemy influences in Afghanistan."

A number of German leaflets have been filtering from Afghanistan into the northwest area, where the Fakir has a considerable following, reports said.

Petain Opposes Universal Male Suffrage in France

Vichy, France, July 8.— (AP) — Marshal Petain indicated today he wants Vichy's new constitution to abolish universal male suffrage and instructed the constitution drafting committee that "a state born of national revolution must be authoritarian and hierarchic".

In an opening address to the committee, Petain declared that in the past authority came from sheer numbers but that today it must come from "natural groups without which a people is neither a state nor a nation".

"It is no longer sufficient to count votes", Petain asserted. "It will be necessary to weigh their value and to determine the responsible factions in community life".

He described the organic laws to be adopted upon completion of the constitution as the "communal or provincial laws, the charter of cooperations and statutes of functionaries", thus indicating the corporative character of the new French State.

The main problem of the constitution makers, he said, was to replace a "sovereign people exercising absolute rights in total irresponsibility" with a "people whose rights derive from their duties".

He defined a people as a "hierarchy of families, professions and communities which must produce a hierarchy of men . . . of whom a small number shall advise and a few command. At the top will be the chiefs, who will govern".

LANDSLIDE BOWLS OVER SIX HOUSES THREATENS FIFTY

Earth Moves Lava-Like Down Mountain Side at St. Charles, Virginia

RAINS THREATEN

St. Charles, Va., July 8.—(AP)— A ponderous earthslide moved lava like today down Little Black Mountain in this coal mining community, crushed or bowled over at least six houses and endangered fifty more homes in its path.

Heavy cloud formations threatened additional rain as engineers of the Bonny Blue Mines sought to check the relentless slate-weighted pressure of the earth and miner families hastily removed their belongings from buildings in the path of the slide.

Somewhere in England, July 8—(CP)—In recent mimic tank battles on the South Downs near the English Channel, officers and non-commissioned officers of the Canadian army tank brigade used rugged methods to deal with "enemy" paratroops who attacked their tanks at night.

British Tommies, representing paratroops in the manoeuvre, climbed on the tanks to try to drive the tank men out, but the Canucks clamped down the hatches and started the steel monsters rolling. Through tall, prickly gorse and bramble bushes they cruised the tanks, brushing the attackers from the turrets.

The Canadians were a vanguard of the tank brigade and were training with British armored units.

(A crack British Guards Brigade had finished its job acting as "enemy" against Canadian Corps in the attack to the channel. Army umpires had ruled the guards were defeated, so they started to move through the Canadian areas to a bivouac area to rest.

On every mile of that trip they were harassed and attacked by zealous Canucks who didn't know the Guards were out of action. Officers and men were captured, trucks commandeered, and columns thrown into confusion by the Dominion's troops. It took several hours to straighten out the situation.

A group of Canadian hutted comps and named Algonquin, Laurentide, Jasper, Tweedsmuir, Ontario, Superior and Erie.

One of the busiest units in England in a road construction company of the Royal Canadian Engineers commanded by Maj. E. J. Young of North Bay, Ont. Emphasizing the Canadian army's confidence in the future of England, it has built several permanent civilian roads.

Seven miles of new roads have been constructed, taking 262,000 man-hours exclusive of administration, servicing of equipment and other overhead. Repair to existing roads totals five miles and took 7,500 man-hours. Beside this the company has filled in bomb craters, dug trenches, levelled emergency air fields and hauled tanks out of mud holes.

It's compulsory now for corps headquarters officers to "dig for victory in the headquarters' own vegetable garden. An order signed by the Brigadier General Staff says:-

"In view of the fact that officers as well as other ranks of the headquarters will benefit from the growing of vegetables in the corps garden, it has been decided that every officer below the rank of General Staff officer (first grade) will work for one hour a week in the garden."

L. Cpl. Charlie Niman of Ottawa made it practically a one-man field day when the 1st division engineers held their sports meet. He won the shot put, the 880-yard and half-mile events and finished high up in the three-mile, one-mile-relay, 220-yard and 440-yard events. The Colonel and the company commanders—Maj. R. J. Cassidy of Ottawa, Maj. A. L. Tregillus of Calgary and Maj. Geoffrey Walsh of St. Catharines, Ont.—were judges along with Capt. Gerald Smith of Toronto.

But these key towns are in the path of advancing invading columns and both had been raided also the previous night. Advances on three fronts and successful mopping up operations behind Australian lines south of Damour, near Beirut, had been announced by the British High Command.

"A low flying attack was made on Vichy flying boats off the Syrian coast yesterday," the R.A.F. reported, "and a number of them were seriously damaged."

Other Vichy planes also were damaged by bombs or machine-gun fire on the ground at Baalbakand and Talia.

RED ARMY DEFENCE STALLS GERMAN DRIVES

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

VICHY GOV'T IN SYRIA ASKS ARMISTICE TERMS

In Many Sectors Nazi Army Thrown Back in Confusion

Russians Force German-Rumanian Retreat on Southern Flank of Front at Prut River

GUERILLA WARFARE

Moscow, July 9 (AP)—The Red army reported today it had routed German troops and wiped out two motorized regiments in northern White Russia and stalled Nazi drives at most points on the huge front.

It acknowledged, however, that German armored spearheads were striking at new points in an attempt to find soft spots. "Large enemy tank and motorized units" attempted to break through in new fighting at Sebezh, near the Latvian frontier, the communique said, adding: "Fighting is in progress."

Centres of fighting, in which the Soviet troops were supported by Red Air Fleet bombing attacks, were listed as Polotsk, in the northern tip of White Russia; Lepel, 40 miles south, and Novograd Volynski in the sun-scorched western Ukraine.

In the Polotsk area, the Moscow war bulletin said fierce fighting continued around Borkovichi and Pulma with Soviet counter-attacks inflicting heavy losses on the Germans.

"In the Lepel direction," the communique added "our troops routed the enemy, wiping out two motorized regiments and destroying four heavy batteries and a great number of anti-tank weapons. The enemy left hundreds killed on the field and retreated to the west."

Incessant Fighting

Incessant fighting continued in the Western Ukraine, the Russians declared. They said strong German tank units and motorized troops had been unable to break through the Red Army defence in this or other sectors.

To the north, where a Nazi drive through the Baltic states toward Leningrad was reported bogged down, the Germans were under heavy artillery fire, the Moscow communique said.

It declared the Red Air Fleet shot down 102 Nazi planes yesterday and downed 62 more in fights in the vicinity of Lepel, Borisov and Bobruisk along the central front, last night.

A previous communique reported the Russians had forced a German-Rumanian retreat at the southern flank of the front,

The war bulletin said.

Unable to Cross River

"In the vicinity of Balti our troops made a number of counter-attacks on Rumanian and German troops as the result of which the enemy was driven back in disorder beyond the River Rput."

In the hot, dry fields of the Western Ukraine the Russians were reported repulsing strong attacks by tank-led German troops near Novograd Volynski, where a battle has raged for almost a week.

The Red Army declared that in Northern White Russia "fierce fighting continues with enemy forces which are trying to entrench

MAKE FORCED MARCHES

Berlin, July 9—(AP) — German spokesman made claims of major gains on the northern wing of the Baltic-to-Black Sea front today but the High Command, for the second successive day, gave only one, indefinite sentence to the great battles in Russia.

"The fights continue successful on the entire eastern front," said the communique from Hitler's headquarters, switching without another word to the war against Britain.

D.N.B., German news and propagapda agency, claimed German forces pushing ahead in the Baltic area had captured Parnu and Viljandi, in Southern Estonia, and Ostrav, South of Pskov on the main rail route to Leningrad.

D.N.B. claimed Russian forces in this area are in retreat after having been "frustrated" in an attempt to set up a new defence line on the border between Latvia and Russia proper.

The agency asserted that as a consequence of defeating these Red Army forces, the Germans crossed the border into Estonia to take Parnu and Viljandi and across the frontier of the U.S.S.R. to seize Ostrov.

Subjected to Assault

At some undisclosed points, a German spokesman claimed Hitler's troops have driven almost 250 miles into Russian territory.

"In a general way," he said, "it can be said the Stalin line is being subjected to a severe assault and that our stragey aims not only at defeating but also at destroying the enemy."

On the northernmost front, the news commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland claimed German forces had broken through a fortified Russian height and won command of a strategically important road to Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port.

As for the southernmost front, Nazi spokesmen claimed strong Russian tank formations, counter-attacking in Bessarabia, were destroyed.

It was claimed that German and Rumanian forces, following up the alleged repulse, which occurred yesterday, thrust into the Russian rear-guards and took many prisoners, captured "irreplaceable equipment" and gained considerable territory.

Farther north, German engineers were reported busy the past few days laying out roads across swampy districts to facilitate the advance of German war machinery.

Masses of Germen infantry were pictured by Nazi spokesmen as making forced marches to the front to fill in gaps left by the rapid thrusts of armored divisions and "speed troops" bent on waging a war of movement.

Writer Tells What It Feels Like To Be Caught in a Land Barrage

(Editor's Note: Larry Allen, Associated Press War Correspondent, has been attached to the Mediterranean fleet since the start of the war. An eye-witness of most of the major naval operations in the Mediterranean, he tells in this story what it feels like to be caught in a land barrage.)

By LARRY ALLEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Haifa, Palestine, July 8 (Delayed)—(AP)—Axis planes, swooping over nearby mountains, dived on the harbor of this city today and delivered a two-hour shower of bombs through the fireworks of British coastal batteries.

Although the raid was the heaviest this eastern Mediterranean port has felt, I watched it in comparative safety from a hotel balcony after having just come through one of the most terrifying experiences of my life.

The raid, which caused little damage, started almost immediately after my return from the Lebanese front where Australian and Royal Navy artillery has been pasting the French outpost of Damour, blocking the road to Beirut, capital of Lebanon.

I had left the British Mediterranean fleet temporarily in order to watch the effect on land of bombardments by British cruisers and destroyers against Vichy positions.

When I had made my way to within two miles of the Damour front, big British guns were in the midst of a seven-hour shelling of Vichy positions. The projectiles rained almost continuously into machine-gun nests of French soldiers lying in orange groves and stretching along a sandy beach. Other shells ripped into Vichy artillery positions.

HAMM, MUENSTER AND BIELEFELD TARGETS OF RAF

Wide Area in Central, Western and Northern Germany Blasted in Many Raids

Wilhelmshaven Bombed

London, July 9 (AP)—The Royal Air Force fanned out over the English Channel in three directions today in another mighty assault on occupied France after night bombers kept up the non-stop air attacks on Germany that extended as far east as Leuna, near Leipzig.

Kent Cliff Waters heard a big formation, too high to be seen in a heat haze, roar towards France. One observer said the planes scattered in three directions and it appeared the R.A.F. was attacking potential invasion points and targets deeper inland.

Scores of Britain's largest bombers dropped explosives on Rhineland industrial facilities overnight and one force flew deeper into the eastern Reich to bomb synthetic oil plants near Leipzig, from which carloads of the product go to fuel the Nazi war machine in Russia.

Shipping Attacked

Main industrial objectives were in the cities of Hamm, Muenster and Bielefeld, the Air Ministry said.

Other aircraft attacked shipping off the north and west coasts of France and Coastal Command planes bombed the harbor at Haugesund in Nazi-occupied Norway.

Airliner Forced To Land at Rochester, N. Y.

Right Motor Quit Over Stirling Radio Range Station

Toronto, July 9 (CP)—A 10-passenger TransCanada Air Lines plane on a transcontinental trip from Halifax to Vancouver was forced to land at Rochester, N.Y., early this morning because of motor trouble and strong headwinds.

(At Rochester Capt. James Scouton, Chief Pilot aboard the plane, told customs men that his right motor quit over Stirling, Ont., a radio range station near Belleville and 90 miles northeast of Rochester, the nearest field with runways long enough to receive the ship.)

Dispatched from Toronto, a special plane picked up the passengers at Rochester and brought them to Toronto. The regular plane left Toronto on its trip west with passengers nearly six hours behind schedule.

Members of the disabled plane's crew were: Capt. J. Scouton, chief pilot; 1st Officer D. Siple, co-pilot, and Stewardess Della Murphy.

British and U. S. Navies May Find Advantage in Assisting Each Other 'In Dangerous Waters' off Iceland

—Churchill

LONDON, July 9 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill suggested in the House of Commons today that the United States and British navies may profitably assist each other in guarding the "very dangerous waters" off Iceland.

Mr. Churchill made this statement in welcoming United States occupation of Iceland and his report brought the loudest cheers since the day he dramatically announced the sinking of the German battleship Bismarck.

The Prime Minister informed the House that Britain proposed to retain some of her forces at present in Iceland.

He declared that the arrival "of powerful United States forces will greatly reduce the danger to Iceland" and that "it seems very likely" British and American forces "will co-operate effectively in resistance to any attempt by Hitler to gain a footing."

The Prime Minister pointed out that U. S. policy is not only to send Britain war supplies "but also to make sure we get them."

Mutual Advantage

Since supplies for American forces in Iceland, on duty overseas "for purposes of the United States" will have "to traverse very dangerous waters," he added, "it may, I dare say, be found mutually advantageous . . . that the two navies involved should assist each other as . . may be convenient in that part of the business."

Britain, he said, not only approves but welcomes the United States' step and, as for Germany, "whether similar satisfaction will be felt in Germany is another question and one which hardly concerns us."

"In fact," he said, "it is one of the most important things that has happened since the war began."

He continued:-

"Military occupation of Iceland by forces of the United States of America is of first rate political and strategic importance.

Purely American Policy

"It has been undertaken by the United States in pursuance of the purely American policy of protecting the western hemisphere from the Nazi menace.

"I understand it is the view of American technical authorities that modern conditions of war, especially air war, require forestalling action and especially in this case in order to prevent the acquisition by Hitler of jumping off grounds from which it would be possible, bound by bound, to come to close quarters with the American continent.

(Cntinued on Page Eleven, Col. 7)

No Dividing Line Of Hemispheres In Defence of U.S.

Washington, July 9 — (AP)— President Roosevelt consigned hemispheric dividing lines to the discard today as controlling factors in matters affecting the defence of the United States.

As far as defence considerations were concerned, he took the position it is impossible to draw an imaginary line between the western and eastern hemisphere and put a buoy on it. There were points in one ocean or another, he said, which were not important to defence, but there were others just outside hemispheric boundaries which might be terribly important.

Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncements came in response to questions asked him at his repular Press conference yesterday regarding the protective occupation of Iceland by a vanguard of U.S. naval forces.

Beating to the Punch

Further comments by Mr. Roosevelt tended to support deductions that future defence moves would be based on the strategy of beating the other person to the punch, and that the United States intended to retain the advantage of the initiative.

The President was asked at one point whether he had definite information that German or other forces were preparing a move on Iceland.

LITVINOV ASKS BRITAIN TO STRIKE HARD AT NAZIS

Former Foreign Commissar Makes Direct Appeal to Britain and U.S.

CHAMPIONED LEAGUE

Moscow, July 9.—(AP)—Britain and Russia are fighting for their independence and the liberation of Nazi-occupied countries and will "strain every nerve in an effort to fulfil with honor the historic mission devolving upon them", former Commissar Maxim Litvinov said last night in a broadcast.

In his first public address since his resignation prior to the signing of the Russian-German pact in August, 1939, Litvinov spoke in English, directing his broadcast to Britain and the United States.

He called on Britain to strike at Germany untiringly, declaring that the Red Army now is "bearing the shock of Hitler's powerful war machine" and "the English people are enjoying a certain respite after 12 months of incessant bombardment".

"Each blow struck now will be more effective than ever", he said.

Bitter in his Remarks

Litvinov, a leading champion of the League of Nations who long urged collective security in Europe, spoke bitterly against Nazism and Hitler.

Germany's declaration of war against Russia "has furnished the world with fresh and overwhelming evidence that no country can feel secure so long as Nazism and Hitlerism exist", he said

MIDLANDS BEAR BRUNT OF ATTACK OF NAZI RAIDERS

Damage Not Extensive Although German Aircraft More Numerous Than in Recent Forays

FEW CASUALTIES

London, July 9 (CP) — Night fighters of the Royal Air Force and a persistent anti-aircraft barrage destroyed five Nazi planes over the British Isles last night as German aircraft, flying in larger numbers than in recent forays, dropped incendiary and explosive bombs.

The Midlands bore the brunt of the raids and casualties were reported there and at East Anglia, southwest England and northeast Scotland. Damage was not extensive.

Further proof of Royal Air Force mastery extending over the English channel was seen last night when Nazi gunners on the occupied French coast blasted at a convoy with long-range artillery but no attempt was made to harass the ships with dive bombers.

The usual Nazi practice is to fire at ships with the big guns, then send out dive bombers in attempt to sink them.

The convoy was shot at twice, first from the Calais district and later by batteries at Boulogne.

A daylight raid over Britain yesterday was limited to two planes which approached the Isle of Wight. One was destroyed by a British fighter and the other damaged.

U. S. RED CROSS SAYS 6 NURSES ARE MISSING

Reports British Vessel With U. S. Nurses Aboard Torpedoed About Two Weeks Ago

4 NURSES RESCUED

Washington, July 9 (AP)—The American Red Cross said today a British vessel bearing 10 Red Cross nurses to Great Britain had been torpedoed and that six of the nurses were missing.

A Red Cross official said the vessel, identity of which was held secret, was torpedoed about two weeks ago. Four of the nurses were rescued four days ago and are in good condition, he asserted.

The boat sailed from a gulf coast port June 5.

The six missing nurses are: Miss Phyllis L. Evans, Everett, Mass.; Miss Dorothy C. Morse, Boston; Nancie M. Pett, Detroit; Miss Helen Jureiwcz, South Amboy, N.J.; Margaret I. Somerville, Catskill, N.Y., and Dorothea L. Koehn, Oshkosh, Wis.

The nurses reported saved are: Rachel M. St. Pierre, Amesbury, Mass.; Marion Blissett, Kalkaska, Mich.; Victoria M. Pelc, Auburn, N.Y., and Lillian Pesnicak, Albany, N.Y.

The Red Cross also said there still has been no "conclusive" reports of the safety of two other women of a contingent of 17 Red Cross nurses aboard another vessel, the Dutch steamer Maasdam, which also was torpedoed.

Survivors Drifting 10 Days at Sea

The four nurses rescued after torpedoing of the unnamed vessel had been drifting at sea for about 10 days when they were picked up, the Red Cross said. It was considered possible that the six missing ones may have been picked up by some other ship or still may be adrift in a lifeboat at sea.

These nurses as well as the 17 aboard the Maasdam were en route to help staff an American Red Cross-Harvard hospital "Somewhere in Southern England."

The other two women unreported are Mrs. Ruth B. Breckinridge of Winston, Salem, N.C., and Washington, house mother for her Red Cross group, and Miss Maxine C. Loomis, a nurse, Springfield, Mass.

On Mission of Mercy

Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross issued a statement saying "it is with deepest sorrow that the Red Cross is compelled to announce that these women, en route to Great Britain on a vitally important mission of mercy, hase been subjected to such barbaric treatment."

His Majesty's Gov't Will Be Glad to See Truce in Syria

2,500 British, Australian and Indian Soldiers Killed or Wounded in Syrian Campaign

DETAILS LACKING

London, July 9 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill announced today that Gen. Henri Dentz, Vichy High Commissioner for Syria, had asked "for discussion of terms leading to an armistice" and expressed hope that such negotiations "may reach a speedy conclusion".

The Prime Minister, addressing the House of Commons, said Britain would be glad to see an end to the month-old campaign in the Middle East but added that until a truce could be reached the fighting must go on.

His statement follows:—

"With regard to Syria it is true that we received a formal application from the French High Commissioner, Gen. Dentz, for discussion of terms leading to an armistice.

"I hardly need say how very glad His Majesty's government will be to see an end brought to this very distressing conflict in which 1,000 to 1,500 British, Australian and Indian soldiers who had volunteered in order to defend France have fallen, killed or wounded, under French bullets as a result of the lamentable confusion into which the affairs of so many good people in so many parts of the world have been thrown by the victories of Hitler's army.

"Therefore, we welcome these negotiations and trust they may reach a speedy conclusion.

"Pending any formal arrangements being made, military operations must, of course, continue without abatement".

Duff Cooper' Comment

Outside the House, Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, discussing the French request for an armistice in Syria, told a London audience that Britain holds no "hostility or enmity against those Frenchmen who obeyed orders of the Vichy government although we feel they were mistaken in obeying".

"We only hope that that unfortunate incident and Anglo-French hostility will be forgotten. . . .In order that we may all look forward to the period when we may not only be friends of the French people but at another time with the French government".

Mr. Duff Cooper said he was "astonished and somewhat horrified" to learn that "festivity" funds were being collected in some parts of Britain to "celebrate the victory" in Syria.

"I can assure you it is too early to do that, admirable as the sentiment and confidence which prompted such activity may be", he warned.

$4,000 Theft Investigated

Halifax, July 9 (CP)—A $4,000 theft at the Industrial Acceptance Corporation Office here was under investigation by police last night.

Officials disclosed the loss had been discovered Monday morning when employees found the money, all in small bills, missing from the vault. Police said the thieves apparently had worked at night, carrying out a carefully-prepared plan.

It was not disclosed how the burglars got into the building. The Halifax Daily Star also said police were investigating another large theft—the disappearance of $8,000 from a Halifax north establishment which it did not name. The paper said it was understood the money was taken on different occasions.

Police officials declined to comment on this report.

Many of London's Finest Churches Completely Wrecked by Air War

BY PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 9— (CP)—Empty shells are all that remain of many of London's loveliest churches, including a number of Wren masterpieces, after nearly a year of aerial assaults.

St. Mary le Bow, probably Sir Christopher Wren's best-known church, has been almost destroyed. It may have to be torn down. Bombs in one heavy raid left the front and the steeple leaning at an angle over Cheapside. Its clock, a Cheapside landmark, was charred. The whole interior, the roof and part of the walls were reduced to rubble.

The church dates back to the reign of William the Conqueror. A previous building was destroyed in the great fire of London. Its name is derived from the fact it was the first church in England built on arches or bows of stone.

Only Steeple of One Remains

The famous Bow Bells—legend says a true Londoner must be born within earshot of them—were destroyed.

St. Bride's in Fleet St. is gutted through the graceful round steeple which Henley called "a Madrigal in Stone" remains. Called the newspapermen's church, this fine old building contained the tomb of the novelist Richardson.

St. Andrew's in Holborn, largest of Wren's churches, was another victim of fire. Here William Hazlitt was married with Charles Lamb as best man.

St. Clement Danes, on an island site in the Strand, had many close escapes before it, too, was burned out by incendiaries. Its tower now looms above the blackened shell of the church where Dr. Johnson worshipped. "Oranges and lemons say the bells of St. Clements", went the old nursery rhyme and there used to be an annual distribution of oranges to children of the parish. The statue of Dr. Johnson still stands on its pedestal outside the church.

Survived Great Fire

Another victim is the Dutch church in Austin Friars. It was built in 1250 and survived the People Urged To Make Donations 'Food for Britain'

While the response to the appeal of the Red Cross here for "Food for Britain" in the form of canned vegetables and fruits has been generous, more is still needed, and the public is urged to deposit a can or two of foodstuffs in the barrels which are located in various grocery and provision stores, when doing the family shopping.

Red Cross officials expect to realize a carload of "cans" as shipping facilities are now available for transfer of the food to Britain. But this is subject to change at a moment's notice and haste is required, if Belleville's shipment is to leave on time.

Rains Drench North Section

Rain of inestimable value fell in the northern section of the county during the past three days according to vacationists returning from that part of the district.

Yesterday saw a steady downpour that brought a "million dollar" relief to pastures and grain fields that were almost beyond redemption. Water in rivulets flowed down the roads north of Madoc, the travellers reported, while the district north of Bancroft was deluged with heavy showers that failed to reach the southern sections of the county.

Over 10,000 U.S. Cars Crossed at Ivy Lea Last Weekend

It is estimated that over 10,000 American automobiles passed over the Ivy Lea bridge east of Gananoque during the Fourth of July week-end Bridge officials stated that on the American Independence Day, last Friday, a total of 3,500 American motor cars passed over the Thousand Island Bridge by actual tabulation, which was greater than the combined numbers for the same date in 1939 and 1940 together. Record business was reported in the Leeds County business sections, while the visitor from the greatest distance to visit the Thousand Islands on that holiday was Miss Anjaro Codenas, of Havana, Cuba.

EAST HILL NINE WINS 12 TO 11

The opening softball game in the City Playground series resulted in a 12 to 11 win for the East Hill nine, who came from behind with a five run splurge in the seventh inning to win.

Sword, Ostrom, Reeves and Mills carried the hitting power for the West Hill, while Wilson, McCullen, Croum and Power came through with timely hits for the winning East Hill nine. Bunton hurled for the winners, while B. Sword tossed 'em up for the Westsiders.

The line-ups—West Hill— Smith, c; Sword, p; Ostrom, 3b; Yorke, rf; Rosatte, 1b; Reeves, ss; D. Rosatte, c; Mills, cf; and Philp, lf.

East Hill—B. Wilson, ss; Wardhaugh, 2b; Adams, 1b; McCullen, lf; Bunton, p; Croum, c; Kellett, rf; W. Cooper, 3b; Powers, cf.

POLICE BLOTTER

Five inebriates spent the night in the police station after being apprehended in an alleged drunken condition in Belleville on Tuesday. They were remanded to the custody of the county jail until Friday, when their cases will be heard in open police court.

Four of the accused men were apprehended by Constables Ellis and Evans on Victoria Park, where a wine-drinking session is alleged to have been in session.

Found wandering at large and unable to give police what they considered a good account of his loitering on public streets in the small hours of the morning, a man who gave his name as Jan Smarzyk, no address, was today remanded to the county jail charged with failing to produce his National Registration card. According to police officials Smarzyk said he just did not bother registering under the recent National Registration Act.

Bolt Hits Bethel Church Steeple, Follows Drainpipe to Kitchen Where it Demolishes Cupboard

A freak bolt of lightning played strange pranks at the Bethel United Church near Chapman's Corners this week, before causing damage estimated at approximately fifty dollars.

Ripping earthward shortly after one o'clock on Monday afternoon the bolt struck the steeple of the church, flashed downward to the roof and followed a drainpipe to the kitchen part of the building, smashed an eavetrough and entered the kitchen where it demolished a cupboard before grounding itself in an unknown manner.

Bicyclists Must Not Ride On Sidewalks

P.C. Taylor caught three boys riding bicycles on the footbridge and its approach yesterday. As police have issued stern warnings against this practice of a recent date, police court summonses will be issued against the trio of cyclists who continued to violate this city bylaw.

"Most of our city streets are paved and there is no reason for riding bicycles upon the public sidewalks which are erected for pedestrians," stated Chief Kidd today as he intimated that further charges would be issued against all cyclists found riding their bicycles on city sidewalks and especially in the vicinity of the footbridge.

Boy of Twelve Saves 3-Year-Old From Canal

Only the quick action of 12-year-old Billy Nesbitt, of Campbellford, saved the life of three-year-old Bobby Owens, who fell into the Trent Canal in Campbellford on Monday.

Bobby was playing along the canal abutment wall when he lost his balance and fell into the water. The child was beneath the surface when Billy Nesbitt paddled to his rescue and pulled the little lad from what might have proved a watery grave. A lad named Seaborn sounded the alarm and attracted Nesbitt's attention.

Rotary Doll Drawn for Tonight

Tonight will see the main feature of the Rotary Club Karnival currently running in Victoria Park, reach its climax with the drawing for 'Rotary Ann," the dollar-covered dolly. "Ann," who has been on display in a tent on the park since Saturday last, where she has been the centre of attraction of hundreds of people, will find a permanent home shortly after eleven o'clock.

The dolly with the dress of "dough"—she is garbed entirely in one-dollar bills—will be presented to the holder of the lucky ticket by a prominent official of the Rotary Club.

Prior to the drawing, all the attractions which have made the Karnival an outstanding one in entertainment history of the city, will be in full swing in all its color and attraction.

With the arrival of exceptionally cool breezes that have relieved the humidity of the past few days, a large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the 1941 Rotary Karnival pass into history. The Karnival will operate in its entirety until a late hour in order to give the "last-nighters" an opportunity to enjoy themselves to the limit.

It will be your last chance to avail yourself of the opportunity to enjoy the thrilling rides and games that have been a feature of the show during the past five days. And in so doing you will be aiding the clubmen in a cause that is as worthy as it is humanitarian. Crippled children of the district will be the sole beneficiaries of the proceeds and your patronage. Help the Rotary Club to wind up their Karnival in a blaze of glory and you will be helping to bring much needed treatment and assistance to unfortunate kiddies of the city and district.

Tonight is the last night. Tonight someone will be the proud owner of the dollar-covered dolly. It might be you.

Canning Factory Now in Operation

Approximately 30 women and 20 men are obtaining either full or part time employment at the Albion Street canning factory owned by the Canada Packers, Limited as the season's pea crop is put into cans and extensive preparations made for the canning of tomatoes and other seasonal products.

The canning of peas has been under way for about two weeks with the plant working only at part time capacity and with only four cookers in operation. The canning of raspberries and beets will begin as soon as the crops are ready, the majority of the beets having to be trucked in from other districts as the growing of this crop for commercial canning purposes is not popular in the Quinte area.

A crew of mechanics and other workmen are steadily engaged in making alterations to the canning plant with the view of speeding up cooking operations. In other years it has been the custom to use the cooking tanks for cooling as well, the steam being turned off after cooking and water turned in to cool the cans prior to packing. This year a huge cooling tank over one hundred feet long is being installed, the system making greater cooking capacity possible.

Police Court Sequel To Incident Over Dog

Hamilton, Ont., July 9.—(CP) — Reminding the accused that a husband could not be blamed for the crimes of his wife, Magistrate H. A. Burbridge today convicted Robert Wardrop, 52, of Hamilton, charged with assaulting his neighbor whose wife struck at his dog. Wardrop was ordered to pay $19 costs.

Wardrop testified that Mrs. Aziall Shippman struck his dog with a piece of pie when the dog crawled under the fence which separates their property. He told the court that he went over to speak to her about it, but meeting her husband, Aziall, on the front lawn, threatened him and grabbed him by the coat lapels.

"I do not think that you can make a husband the 'whipping boy' of the crimes of his wife—when a man goes out to redress his wrongs, he must pick on the right person", said the Magistrate.

Sees No Hope of Revolt in Italy, 'Protectorate of Germany'

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 9 —(CP) —A former Italian diplomat asserted today that a British victory in the war would mean immediate collapse of Mussolini's government, but that it was vain to hope for a revolution before such time.

In an address prepared for delivery to the New Education Fellowship Conference, Count Carlo Sforza, former member of Mussolini's cabinet, said Nazi Germany has too strong a hold on Italy to permit a public uprising.

Count Sforza, self-described as one of the original foes of Fascism, said, however, that the Italian navy and part of the army might undertake a "passive strike" in the war against Britain. Navy crews, he said, "dislike to fight on the side of the Germans."

"It is vain to hope for an internal revolution in Italy," he said. "The Italians know that the true master, Hitler, would march at once on Milan, on Venice, on Trieste—that he would march on Rome. Italy has become a German protectorate, thanks to the stupidity or treason of the Fascists."

Peru and Ecuador Asked to Establish A "No Man's Land"

Washington, July 9 (AP)—The United States, Argentina and Brazil have asked Peru and Ecuador to establish a no man's land on both sides of the line known as the status quo line in territory disputed by the two nations.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, announced today that after the Envoys of the three nations had made that recommendation to Peru and Ecuador the three governments had also informed the governments of all other American Republics and asked that they give their support to ending the conflict.

Under the proposal the governments of Peru and Ecuador would withdraw their military forces 15 kilometers from each side of the "line of status quo" establishing a neutral zone 30 kilometers in depth between the two armies.

Both were also requested to prevent their airplanes from passing over the neutral zone.

Churchill Message To White House Expresses Concern

No Mention Made of Senator Wheeler by Name in Referring to July 3rd Announcement of Iceland Move

Washington, July 9—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill has expressed to the White House his and the British Government's concern over an 'announcement made on July 3' —the day Senator Burton Wheeler made such a statement to reporters—that United States forces soon would occupy Iceland.

Receipt of the message was announced by Stephen Early, Press Secretary, who indicated it was directed at Wheeler's statement. Early, however, did not mention Wheeler by name.

He merely said that the President had received a dispatch direct from Mr. Churchill through the State Department which, while "not at all in the nature of a protest, did express his individual concern and that of his government because of the announcement made on July 3 of the Iceland move".

Early said the dispatch declared that "announcements of that kind jeopardize lives".

"Again, he was speaking of British lives", Early added.

Asked whether the communication was being sent to Capital Hill, Early said, "it is being communicated officially to the Press", and he had no doubt it would be known soon in Congress.

Advised of the Churchill communication, Wheeler told reporters that "this is still a democracy and the American people have a right to know about steps which could involve them in war".

"As much as some people would like to adopt the idea that we don't have a democracy any more", Wheeler declared, "I still think that the Congress and the executive branch derive their powers from the people."

Wheeler said his information had been that American forces already had occupied Iceland at the time he made his statement.

The occupation was not officially announced until Monday.

Joe Louis Denies Hitting His Wife

Chicago, July 9 (AP)—Joe Louis has hit a lot of people since he won the world's heavyweight boxing championship, but his wife was not among them, he alleged today in an answer to the divorce suit filed in Circuit Court by Mrs. Marva Trotter Louis a week ago.

The Brown Bomber's answer, in which he asked that his wife's suit be dismissed, was a complete denial of her charges of cruelty.

He denied she had "treated him kindly and affectionately, and conducted herself toward him as a true and virtuous wife," as Mrs. Louis alleged in her complaint.

His wife set forth that he owned $400,000 worth of real estate in Chicago and Detroit and about $400,000 in annuities, stocks, bonds and other property. The answer stated his holdings were considerably less than that.

Louis claimed that his annual earnings were "much less" than the $250,000 alleged in his wife's complaint.

Australia to Spend 5 Million Pounds Weekly on War, Defence

Canberra, July 9—(AP)—A. W. Fadden, Australia's treasurer, today announced that the government will spend at the rate of £5,000,000 ($17,900,000) weekly upon war and defence as part of Australia's accelerated war program.

Plans involve great increases in Air Force strength, greater munitions output, which includes construction of munitions in rural centres and a tank-building program.

The Air Minister also said that Australia's share in the Commonwealth Air Training plan in Canada, originally estimated to cost the Australian government £53,000,000 by the end of March, 1943 would be far in excess of this estimate.

LONDON "INVADED" ! ! !

Amid the ruins left by German bombers, post-office home guards and home guards of the London-Midland-Scottish railway perform during a mock invasion of the city of London. The railway home guards, acting as "invading" parachute troops, are storming the barricades, ABOVE, while the famous square mile of the city of London is being defended by the post-office home guards.

R. A. F. Bombers Start Fires in Greece and Crete

Cairo, Egypt, July 9 —(AP)—The Royal Air Force has sent its bombers over Greece and Crete, now in German hands, and started fires in a series of raids, the R.A.F. Middle East Command announced today.

It said the attack on Greece was aimed at Eleusis, on the southern coast about 11 miles northwest of Athens, and was carried out without any losses.

The communique mentioned only "targets" on Crete without saying where they were.

Working Feverishly To Form New Greek Army

Montreal, July 9—(CP) — King George and Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos of Greece are expected shortly in Britain to organize their countrymen throughout the world to intensify Greece's continuing war against the Axis, according to word reaching the National Executive of the Greek War Relief Fund here today.

One of the biggest aids to Britain at present came through a fleet of motorboats and fishing smacks, manned by Greeks and operating out of Egyptian ports, which do reconnaissance and intelligence work off islands of the Greek archipelago.

On land, Greek soldiers are with the British and Free French in Syria and in Egypt the exiled government is 'working feverishly to form a new Greek army."

Inside Greece, sabotage against the Axis occupation was reported to be widespread. Word reaching Montreal told of several Greek freighters being blown up in port as Italian forces were preparing to take them over.

Another report told of how a group of Greek freighters, being convoyed by Italian warships in the Mediterranean, suddenly scattered and made for Egyptian and other ports. For most of the freighters, the breakaway was reported successful.

Recruiting Drive Will Go Over Top

Ottawa, July 9 (CP)—National Defence Headquarters said today it seemed certain that recruits entering the active army would exceed by July 12 the 32,000 sought during a two-month recruiting drive, which started May 12.

"There seems no doubt we will go over the top," a spokesman said. "The rate of recruiting as accelerated in recent weeks."

Continuation of recruiting in military districts is planned after July 12 with special emphasis on the need of tradesmen and those prepared to take specialized courses.

First News Pictures Of War From Russia

New York, July 9 (AP)—Three news photographs were transmitted to the United States from Moscow yesterday in the Soviet government's first test transmission of radiophotographs to the United States.

New York newspapers today published the first pictures received from Russia by any means during the war.

The photographs—received without descriptive material—showed a group of Russian soldiers surrounding an airplane with German markings, a group of Russian motorcycle troops, and a close-up of what appeared to be three Russian infantrymen.

Russia, Britain Collaborators Against 'The Common Enemy' But Not Allies Says Eden

London, July 9 (CP)—Requests in both Houses of Parliament that the British Broadcasting Corporation play the Internationale on its weekly National Anthems program brought the answer from two ministers today that the Soviet Union is not an ally.

Foreign Secretary Eden reiterated the British stand that Russia and Britain are collaborators against "the common enemy, Germany," but asserted there is as yet no sign of a formal Anglo-Soviet agreement or alliance.

Information Minister Alfred Duff Cooper replied that only the National Anthems of actual allies are played on the program.

The question was raised by Samuel Silverman, Labor, who wanted to know what more Russia was expected to do before being entitled to such a courtesy.

Both sides of the House chimed in with facetious questions.

"Is it possible to make a free issue of Vodka to all teetotallers to drink to the Soviet?" inquired Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative.

"Will the Minister arrange to have the National Anthem of the Soviet sung at prayers in this House?" piped up William Gallacher, Parliament's only Communist member.

In the House of Lords, Lord Strabolki, Labor, also asked why the Internationale was not played on the program last Sunday.

"A few years ago," he said, "it was common for the Internationale to be sung at Labor Party conferences. I have heard Mr. Herbert Morrison (Home Security Minister) singing it with great gusto.

"I have heard Lord Snell (Deputy Leader of the House of Lords) singing it with great efficiency.

"I have seen Lord Addison go through the motions of singing it."

Lord Strabolgi added also that when Foreign Secretary Eden visited Moscow "God Save the King" was ordered played by Stalin.

Lord Snell put the final flourish on the discussion. He said there was great competition for a spot on the program and "this includes 'The Star Spangled Banner' which I imagine all of us would welcome if we heard it."

Portuguese Troops Sent to Azores

Lisbon, Potugal, July 9—(AP)—The liner Carvalho Araujo sailed for the Azores today with the third contingent of Portugese troops to be sent there in as many months.

President Oscar De Fragoso Carmona is to visit the Azores soon.

(Portugal protested to the United Staes in a note made public June 12 against President Roosevelt's statement in his speech May 27 that German control of the Cape Verde and Azores Islands could endanger America. The Portugese note insisted Portugal would defend the islands.)

U.S. Air Force Institutes New Ferry Service To Great Britain

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Government officials said today the United States Army Air Force had instituted a new transatlantic ferry service for carrying U. S. officials and mail between the United States and Great Britain.

Two four-motor bombers, stripped of their armament, have been assigned to make the flights, and indications were that the schedules call for no more than one trip a week each way.

Unlike commercial transports, army planes are not forbidden by the neutrality law from flying into a belligerent country and the ships of the new service thus are able to carry officials directly from Washington to England.

GOVERNORS CALLED IN PARLEY

Washington July 9 (AP) — The Governors of 16 Eastern States were called upon today by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes to lead "a voluntary effort having as its aim a reduction in the consumption of petroleum products by at least 20 per cent."

"Voluntary rationing" is necessary said Ickes the Defence Petroleum Coordinator to avoid or at least delay compulsory rationing in the face of threatened petroleum shortage on the Atlantic seaboard.

GERMANS ADMIT DAMAGE BY R.A.F.

Berlin, July 8—(CP)—The German high command admitted today that "considerable damage" was caused by Royal Air Force attacks last night on Cologne and Muenster. It added the usual claim that the attacks were directed against "residential sections."

It claimed 16 British aircraft

Naval Minister's Son Joins Nelson Sea Cadets

Halifax, July 9—(CP) — Angus Macdonald, 15-year-old son of Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Canada's Minister of Defence for Naval Services and Minister for Kingston in the House of Commons, was among new members inducted into the Halifax Branch of the Nelson Sea Cadets here last night. With other recruits he will begin intensive training which may lead to a naval career.

The Halifax Corps has contributed 106 members to the navy since the outbreak of war.

Nine Miners Wounded Protesting Use of Steam Shovels on New Job

Pottsville, Pa., July 9 — (AP)— Nine miners were wounded by gunfire, one so seriously he may die, in a disturbance today between private detectives and a group of coal workers protesting the use of steam shovels to strip soil from an anthracite vein.

In a subsequent riot, broken up by State Police and sheriff's deputies, eight watchmen were bruised and battered while leaving the scene. They were taken to a hospital.

Deputy Sheriff L. M. Brobst said it had been estimated about 2,000 "bootleg" miners gathered this morning at Donaldson, 16 miles west of Pottsville, where the Correale Construction Company began stripping operations yesterday.

The shots were fired as the miners moved up the mountainside toward two steam shovels, guarded by 22 private detectives hired by the company.

OTHER FRAUD CHARGES LAID AGAINST MAN

Arrested on Tweed on Monday night by Chief J. C. Hayes as he was passing through that village in a taxi cab, 40-year-old George Agnew of Toronto, was remanded to the custody of the Belleville jail on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Today an additional charge of obtaining money with intent to defraud were preferred in this city when L. R. LaRue, Dundas St., Belleville, claimed Agnew was the man to have obtained ten dollars from him to list property for sale. "He said he was a real estate agent," Mr. LaRue told Detective Fred Isard at the Court House, when Agnew was confronted with Mr. LaRue for possible identifica-

BATTLE OF CRETE CITED IN HOUSE

Aviator M.P. Says Defenders of Crete Had to Fight Without Adequate Guns, Tanks or Planes

London, July 9 (CP)—An aviator veteran of the battle of Crete charged in the House of Commons today that the defenders of the island had to fight without adequate planes, guns or tanks.

Making his maiden speech as a member, Lieut. Rupert Brabner, Conservative, wore the uniform of the fleet air arm.

"We who were at Malemi (Crete) were rarely in position to put more than two aircraft in the air for continuous patrol during daylight hours," Lieut. Brabner said.

"Seventy to 80 per cent of our tanks broke down before they ever saw the enemy.

"At Malemi there were no heavy anti-aircraft guns. There is a great shortage of multiple and half-inch machine guns. Is the government satisfied with production of Browning guns and 20 millimetre cannon for aircraft?"

Lieut. Brabner said British tanks performed well against the Italians but failed against the Germans in the Greek campaign because the British models were too slow and there were too few of them.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, suggested that Lord Beaverbrook be made Minister of Production with control over all sources of supply instead of holding merely the Ministry of Supply, his present job.

George Garro-Jones, Labor, charged the ordering of aircraft and parts in the United States was one of the weakest points in the program of the Ministries of Supply and Aircraft Production.

McMillan Speaks for Government

Speaking for the government, Harold McMillan, parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Supply, said that in the second quarter of 1941 production of guns and tanks had shot up more than 100 per cent over the figure for the last quarter of 1940.

During the first quarter this year tank and gun production jumped more than 50 per cent over the previous quarter and the output in the machine-tool industry was six times the normal peacetime level, he said.

He declared Britain had "most understanding assistance" from the United States army and navy authorities on machine tools and said Britain now might be in position to reciprocate.

Between January and June he reported, labor forces in ordnance factories had been doubled.

Opening a debate on war production, Garro-Jones said no fewer than 30 types of planes are being bought in the United States and urged reducing the number so as to increase production along standard lines.

He said orders for spare parts had been neglected and as a result several hundred American-made planes of one type had been immobilized in warehouses for several weeks.

British Oil Depot Heavily Bombed

Jerusalem, uly 8 (Delayed)—(AP) —Haifa, site of a British oil depot on the Palestine Coast, was bombed heavily for two hours early today.

The raiders—it was not clear whether they were Vichy French or German—struck shortly after 1.30 a.m.

Tel-Aviv also had a two-hour air-raid alarm and residents of Jerusalem spent 15 minutes in shelters.

The raids followed a series of sharp R.A.S. attacks on the harbor and oil depots of Beirut, the Lebanese capital.

Reports from the front said that Australian troops, moving up the coast toward Beirut, had begun an encircling movement against Damour, Vichy French stronghold south of the city. The Australians were reported fighting their way east and north through the hills against desperate resistance.

29 GIRLS JOIN SERVICE FORCE

Toronto, July 9.—(CP)—Twenty-nine girls from Toronto, Milton, Coldwater, Galt and Elgin Mills will leave this afternoon to join the twenty-five already established at the 10th Farm Service Force centre which opened at Jordan Monday, Alex Maclaren, director of the Ontario Department of Labor's Farm Service, said today.

Mr. Maclaren reported that 11,500 boys and girls, young men and young women have been placed on farms and orchards under the Farm Service Force plan.

CADI DISMISSES CHARGE

London, Ont., July 9—(CP)— Delivery to a beverage room table of eight bottles of uncapped beer, which are later taken outside the hotel doesn't prove an illegal sale against a waiter, Magistrate D. B. Menzies decided today in dismissing a charge against John Bell, of the St. Regis Hotel.

Bell was charged following the conviction last week of Pte. John Tucker, of the active army, on a charge of illegal possession.

EXECUTED AS SPY

London, July 9 (CP)—George J. Armstrong, 39, a Briton, was executed by hanging today as a spy for Germany.

An announcement said he had been in touch with the Nazi espionage organization through a German Consul in the United States.

Armstrong was convicted of treason May 8. He was an engineer who served at sea in 1939 and 1940.

Roosevelt May Ask Congress To Double Original 7 Billion Lease-Lend Appropriation

By IRVING PERLMETER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 9 —(AP)— Administration sources predicted today that President Roosevelt soon would ask the United States Congress to double the original $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation.

They said all of the first fund would be allocated by the end of August and that a new appropriation of approximately the same size would be needed almost immediately to plan further arms production.

The first $7,000,000,000 they added already has been expanded by administrative action to approximately $8,000,000,000. They explained that the Lease-Lend Act authorized the use of $1,300,000,000 of other appropriations for British aid purposes, but left to the President's discretion whether this supplementary money should be repaid from the lease-lend appropriation. In practice, it was said, little of this "other money" is being reimbursed, so actually it serves to swell the original $7,000,000,000 fund.

Britain has been getting nearly all the lease-lend material, although some has gone to China and there is now a possibility that shipments eventually may go to Russia.

June 11 President Roosevelt reported to Congress that "a little over $75,000,000" worth of material had been transferred to Britain and other beneficiaries in the period between March 11—the date of the lease-lend bill became law—and May 31. How the supplies were divided among the various nations was not disclosed.

Since that time, however, it is believed that the rate of deliveries has increased, particularly to Britain.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Can. Press Staff Writer)

The German drive into Russia, if not altogether halted, is making only the most laborious progress, and London observers say that unless the Germans can score a break through within the next few days the German mechanized divisions will find it necessary to reorganize their lines.

Efficient as the German repair and servicing organization is said to be, it cannot hope to keep the heavy armored units near to standard strength if the Red Army continues for many more days to put up the kind of resistance and counter - attacking ability it has thus far shown.

In the western campaign last year, when decisive break throughs were achieved in the first few days of fighting, the Germans found it necessary to pause at the Somme before the final march on Paris was launched.

It is now ten days since German military spokesmen claimed occupation of Minsk, just inside the frontier of old Russia, but apparently the Soviet garrison in the fortified city still is holding out. At least its capture has not been claimed by the German High Command.

Russians Separate Nazi Forces

While in the past predictions of supply and communications difficulties for the Germans have not been borne out by events, the current situation in Russia appears to differ from various campaigns in that the Soviet army has made real progress toward separating the advanced forces from the main armies in the rear.

Thus the German spearheads, which have hardly begun their attempts to reduce the Stalin line of fortifications, are on dangerous ground as long as the Red Army has enough reserve strength to counter-attack. And today's Soviet communique indicates new successes along this line.

Soviet Air Force Factor

The German claim of mastery in the air also has not been substantiated. Although Soviet claims of enormous destruction of German aircraft, together with trifling Russian losses, appear to be exaggerated there can be no doubt that the Soviet Air Force is still very much a factor, since the Red Army could not have done the job it has without strong air support.

In any case the Russians still have enough planes to "devastate" a square mile of Helsinki, according to dispatches from the Finnish capital today, which said Soviet bombers had operated over Finland in numbers exceeding anything witnessed in the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war.

JAPAN'S WRONG CHOICE

Japan had no notion that four years from the day when her expedition against China began, she would be farther from victory at this time than she was when she started. Yet the fifth year of the conflict has begun and it is reported that the Chinese leader, General Chiang Kai-Shek, may launch an offensive against the Japanese to break the stalemate.

During that period of four years there have been times when the chances of Japan looked far brighter than they do today and China's hopes looked dimmer.

In those days it was pointed out that China had longevity and had always swallowed up invaders of her territory. Events support that view. Many Japanese have fallen and Nippon is being drained white by the cost of the war, which according to Japan is not even a war at all.

On Monday of this week China's Consul to Ottawa, Mr. Jialin Jowe, explained that China in forty centuries had lived by following the mean or middle way. Japan in her attack on China and in the utterances of her statesmen, has not followed a middle way but has demonstrated the way of the dictators—violence.

China can smile as she looks down on buried aggressors of the past. In view of the knowledge and experience of forty centuries which have moulded the character of her people no one wonders when one hears that Chinese are certain that the end of the war will see Japan defeated.

Japan cannot win. She has reached a situation where nothing can give her victory. China can battle on, for she has resources of men untold. With material aid this ancient nation which has been more a nation under its generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek than it has been for a long time will be able to shake off Nippon.

NO PLACE IN WORLD FOR HITLERISM

Commenting on the speech of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, the New York Times says that his "sources of information are undoubtedly extensive" and that therefore when he warns his compatriots that at an opportune moment in the Russian campaign Hitler is likely to return to the role of peace lover, which is one of his favorite theatrical posturings, "Mr. Eden has probably sound reason for the warning."

The newspaper goes on to say that neutral testimony supports Mr. Eden in regard to internal conditions in Germany. The instance is cited of the former U.S. Ambassador in Belgium who has been spending three months in Germany and was impressed there by the lack of interest of the German people to the successes of their armies. He noted that the radio announcement of the capitulation of the Greek army recently was received with indifference that might have been accordetd to a weather report. The same absence of satisfaction was reported by Mr. Cudahy over the fall of the Low Countries and he had been told that a similar negative attitude had been shown over the fall of France.

If Hitler makes a peace offensive, Britain will not treat with him, for the world has seen the fate of those that treat with him and are thereby not only subjected to aggression but also made the catspaw of the Hitlerites in adding to the menace of the rest of the world and the degradation of those which have become subjected.

In the free world of the British and their Allies there is no place for Hitler and his mad cult. They are morbid growths which will be cut out of the international body politic with the sword of justice.

If Hitler tries to make peace with Britain he will find there is no peace for a pledge and treaty-breaker, for the man who openel this war and who must be punished by the sword of retribution and justice. Hitler chose the weapons by which he set about to affect Europe according to his diabolic will and by war's weapons he will be routed out of any place. He will have no rest, as Mr. Churchill recently said, but the pursuit of the forces of justice will corner him in his lair wherever it may be. Europe cannot be so wide nor its caves so deep and mysterious as to hide this outlaw, Hitler.

THE WAY TO HAPPINESS

I met a man the other day
Whose sunny manner seemed to say
That he had found the Happy Way.

I asked the secret of his smile,
He gave a thoughtful look the while
And answered somewhat in this style.

Six things have I that spell content
Six things that mean a life well spent,—
That make for real accomplishment:

A Peaceful Mind,
A Grateful Heart,
A Love for all that's true
A Helpful Hand,
Real Tolerance
And Lots of Things to Do.

I took my way with courage new
With kindlier feelings, broader view,
Trying to think his answer through.

That man had found the secret key
Of how to love and what to be,
And passed it on to you and me.

Then let us try his simple plan
Of Faith in God and Love to man,
And imitate him if we can.

"GENERALLY" SPEAKING

The Russian High Command is reported to be looking for a "general" Nazi retreat. It couldn't be they expect an Italian division to be sent into action soon.

GARBED as a veiled Arab woman, an R.A.F. pilot trekked 100 miles across the desert after landing behind the Nazi lines. Was his slipstream showing? asks the Windsor Star. After skirting the desert for that distance, we imagine he had lost most of his bustle upon arrival.

AMERICANS flock to amusement parks in warm summer evenings, says a news item. A box-office at the entrance to Zwick's Island wouldn't do so bad, these tepid twilightings, either.

THEN there is the story of the sweet young thing who was out with her first airman. "My sister says," she gurgled at the husky air-gunner, "that air-force training makes slow eaters of the boys. Is that right?"

"Could be, sister," retorted the big guy, who had flunked several exams. "It takes me four months to get through a single course."

AND HE BELIEVED HER

They sat alone on the government dock
She soothed his troubled brow,
"Dearest, I know my life's been fast
But I'm on my last lap now."

AND don't forget when you are doing the family shopping to toss a can of vegetables or fruit in one of the barrels marked "Food for Britain." Belleville has been generous to the extreme thus far, but every additional can means additional succor for the heroes of Britain.

Political Aspects of Russian Campaign

New York, July 9. — There are some things about the attack on Russia that are not clear. It raises the question: To what extent was it launched for purely military purposes and to what extent for political purposes?

Probably for both. The Nazis coordinate their military and political strategy in a remarkable way. The attack was presented by Hitler as a military necessity, due to a threatening concentration of Russian troops on the German frontiers. This concentration followed a series of Nazi aggressions in the Balkans, which certainly perturbed the Soviet Union, and was a response to vivid anti-Russian activities going on in Germany, as reported weeks ago in this column.

There is not the slightest indication, however, that the Soviet intended to attack the Reich. On the contrary, there is every indication that Stalin, having assumed for the first time the titular leadership of the Russian State, was putting himself in position to resume negotiations with Germany and drive as good a bargain as he could. Soviet policy is invariaby reflected in the Comintern Party line, and that line was peace until the day after the attack by the Nazis.

No Economic Motive.

Was the attack for economic reasons? Here I should say, certainly not. The Balkan campaigns have not been an economic asset to the Nazis, but an economic liability. Stalin was prepared to make economic concessions to Germany. He wanted to play in with Germany for his political share.

Playing in involved such things as delivering wheat and oil, and these he was willing to concede. Although German occupation or annexation of the Ukraine would be of an immense economic value to the Nazis in the long run, the war in Russia will be destructive and occupation entail immense administrative problems that have not even been successfully solved in Poland after nearly two years.

If, then, the Reich was not threatened militarily and if a war against Russia promised no short-range economic advantages, why was it launched?

I believe because of fear of the military and political consequences of an all-out attack on Great Britain.

Should that attack be made and fail, the Russian Army would be a dreadful threat to the Reich.

Should that attack be made and succeed, it would be a catastrophe to the whole world of unpredictable proportions, setting everything adrift all around the globe.

In that moment, again, the Soviet Union, unexhausted by war and with an international revolutionary organization at its command, would be in a position to produce further chaos and also to pull more territory for itself out of the scramble for spoils.

At the same time, Hitler undoubtedly argued that for a war against the Soviets he could rally all Europe, and that, with it, he could divide Great Britain and hold off the United States.

Hitler's Desperate Hope

First, he tested the United States by a flagrant incident—the sinking of the Robin Moor. Even the administration was pretty phlegmatic. The conclusion could be drawn that the United States was still not prepared for any drastic action in the West, and that he would be safe in moving in the East.

Second, he presumably, through Hess, made a bid for a breathing-space peace with certain English Tories, no doubt on the promise to turn eastward, and well aware that such a peace would bring collapse in England.

Third, he began an enormous offensive directed to world Christianity against the atheism and barbarism of the Soviets.

(The German shortwave broadcasting now pours upon the world fulminations against Soviet godlessness, and, incidentally, the exact phraseology is repeated by Mr. Lindbergh.

(Some of the sudden piety is very funny. Last week I heard an English-speaking broadcaster from Berlin attacking the shocking methods of Russian warfare—dropping parachutists behind lines—and deploring the fact that there is a death penalty in Russia for listening to foreign broadcasts. This according to the speaker, is a "sign of weakness.")

But the political offensive of the Nazis is failing except as a few opponents of the President back it up in this country.

The speeches of Churchill, the Pope, Roosevelt, Willkie, Eden, and Bishop Joseph P. Hurley, who vigorously derided the idea of the holy crusade, indicate a complete collapse of the Nazi diplomatic offensive. The most effective answer to sudden ridiculously hypo-critical pro-Christian campaign of the Nazis is made by the Catholic bishops of Greater Germany against Nazi practices, including the confiscation of cloisters. Significantly, perhaps, the letter was issued from Fulka "at the grave of St. Boniface," a martyred English missionary to the German barbarians in the eighth century!

And Paderewski's death in the midst of the "holy crusade," together with his deeply Christian political testament, again called the attention of the world to the martyrdom of Poland.

"This Is Our Hour."

But there is one thing very significant about the speeches of the President and of Mr. Eden. They are specifically directed against the Hitler regime, its practices and purposes. They leave the possibility wide open for peace with any responsible elements in Germany, except those guilty of the reign of terror that has engulfed the world.

The failure of the Nazi political offensive against the West is Hitler's most serious setback in the Russian campaign. The West, Britain and America must redouble their own political and diplomatic offensive with ardor, and without a moment of respite and direct it toward a confused Germany and a confused Europe.

The defeatism toward democratic institutions should be abandoned. They are the only institutions holding fast today. Output of everything for Britain should be speeded up, and the "wait-and-see" attitude should be stopped. The decision in this war will be in the West, and the West must move now.

For, politically and military speaking, this is our hour, and we should take fullest advantage of it. There is a great deal we can say to the peoples of Russia, and for the first time they will be allowed to listen. For the first time they would welcome journalists, technicians and industrial organizers.

Every one of the German shortwave broadcasts should be answered to Germany and the whole world, for they are full of the most ridiculous holes.

Why haven't we got twenty million dollars at this moment for one of the most effective instruments of modern warfare—propaganda? Why haven't we got a great bureau of psychologists, translators, journalists and artists to fill the air twenty-four hours a day with American ideas of a good life and a decent new order?

The political blitzkrieg should begin at once—while German mothers are getting daily reports of the deaths of their sons in this latest of Hitler's paranoic moves.

There is a political vacuum into which to move.

R.A.F. AWARDED BAR TO D.S.O.

London, July 9 (CP Cable)—Wing Cmdr. A. G. Malan, a leading Royal Air Force pilot, has been awarded the bar to his Distinguished Service Order. He becomes the second airman on record to receive bars to the D.S.O. and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

He is credited with downing at least 35 planes and with damaging a score of others.

The distinction equals the honors held by Wing-Cmdr. W. E. Staton, awarded the D.F.C. and Bar in the first Great War and the D.S.O. and Bar in this war.

The Evening Standard says Prime Minister Churchill has promised to be Godfather to Wing-Cmdr. Malan's one-year-old boy who will be christened Winston.

Gathering Might of The U.S.A.

In the current print of Collier's there is an admirable summary of the war production picture in the United States. It makes heartening reading.

The United States, like Canada, started its defence program from scratch. Also like Canada, it has been beset with "bottlenecks", with lack of tool facilities, with inevitable democratic difficulties.

Yet it has made, and is making, tremendous strides. Thus, according to Colliers, the United States is now producing planes at the rate of 18,000 a year; will be producing them at the rate of more than 40,000 a year by 1942. It was slow in starting its shipbuilding program, but is now ahead of schedule; is building more ships faster than any other country is building, or has ever built them, in the history of the world. It is turning out ten tanks a day; will soon be turning out twenty a day.

Meanwhile — and this is sometimes overlooked—the United States is training a gigantic army, and a big air force. Using the draft, it is welding into efficiency an army of some 2,000,000 men, is presently training air pilots at the rate of 25,000 a year.

It is hard to believe that the Germans can match this vast United States production; match it when it gets into its stride. Nor need we worry much about United States resourcefulness, inventiveness, organizing skill. Some of us are apt to think of the Germans as the great innovators. Actually, they are the greatcopyists. The British invented the tanks; the French developed the flying machine; the Americans invented the machine gun; the French developed the submarine. What the Germans have done — and all they have done — is to adapt those devices to their own deadly uses.

It is when we look at this United States picture, as presented by Collier's, that we begin to realize that Hitler cannot win this war. To argue that he can defeat Russia, with its nearly 200,000,000 people, and then turn and defeat the combined steel and man-power of the British Empire and the United States, is to argue against reason. Assuming, of course, that this steel and man-power are used to their full power.—Ottawa Journal.

ANNOUNCE SHORTLY FINAL LOAN FIGURES

Ottawa, July 8 —(CP)— Final figures on Canada's Victory Loan 1941 may possibly be available "some time tomorrow," officials said today, and in the meantime there can be no comment on a claim that Hamilton may lead Canada in her per capita purchases of Victory Bonds.

Work has been started on three of a number of provincial hospitals which will be built by the Philippine Islands government.

GRANDPA'S OUT SHOPPING

We met at a window where toys were displayed,
And I knew right away from his hair which had grayed
And the way that he lingered the trinkets to see,
That he was a grandpa and stranger like me.

As we jostled each other, I smiled when he told:
"I'm looking for something a suitcase will hold!"
Said I, "Like yourself, I am out on a trip,
And am looking for playthings
to pack in a grip."

He took from his pocket a picture and said:
"Did you ever see such a wonderful head?"
I reached for my wallet and took from inside
A handful of snapshots of grandfather pride.

Two traveling Grandpops — old fools—if you will—
Out shopping for trinkets their cases to fill;
Both seeking some pleasure to hide in a grip.
For children to find at the end of the trip.

You'd Be Surprised!

SUGAR CANDY

The Department of Commerce reports that Americans ate more candy during 1940 than ever before.

Americans now average between 15 and 20 pounds of candy apiece every year.

Chocolate in one form or other is used in more than half of the candy eaten in the United States.

The word "candy" appears to be of Sanskrit origin.

When Alexander the Great invaded India his soldiers found that a favorite sweet among the natives of that country consisted of small cubes of sugarcane, which was indigenous to that part of the world.

The natives of India called a piece of sugarcane "khanda," the Sanskrit word for piece or portion.

Alexander's Macedonian soldiers carried this Sanskrit name for a sweetbit back to Greece with them and from it is derived our word "candy."

The Greek invaders of India were also responsible for the word "sugar."

In its native India sugar from sugarcane was called "sarkara," which was Sanskrit for grit, gravel or small pebbles.

This word, carried back to Europe by the Greek soldiers, became the source of "sugar" as well as "sucrose," "sacharin" and related words now in use.

Although Alexander's soldiers took the words "candy" and "sugar" back to Europe with them, sugarcane itself appears to have been unknown on that continent until the Crusaders brought the "sugar-bearing reed" from the Near East to Europe about the 11th or 12th century.

Even to this day stick or rock candy made of pure sugar is known as sugar candy.

The earliest function of candy in Europe was to disguise the bad taste of drugs in the days when the virtue of a medicine was measured by its unpalatability.

Confections that are called candy in America are generally called sweets or boiled sweets in Britain.

Perhaps the earliest known sweet-meats consisted of fruits candied with honey and made in China since ancient times.

The sugarplum, made of boiled sugar, was the common candy of England until the 17th century.

Confections of the modern type displayed at the London World's Fair in 1851 greatly stimulated candy-making throughout the civilized world.

Britain Warns Nationals Abroad

London, July 9 (CP)—The British government yesterday warned its Nationals abroad against assisting axis propaganda in radio broadcasts, and included "famous writers" in the warning.

Osbert Peake, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs, announced in the House of Commons that the government is recording all foreign broadcasts to bring to justice any Briton who might assist the axis in propaganda.

Asked by a member "if these people are liable to prosecution, whoever they are, whether famous writers or anybody else," Mr. Peake declared: "The situation is perfectly clear."

HOWE DEDICATES OPTICAL PLANT AT LEASIDE

Contribution of Research to War Effort as Great as Any Other Factor

PRODUCTION PROGRESS

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Canada's Munitions and Supply Department will have every type of equipment it has undertaken to make in production by September.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, made that statement yesterday as he dedicated the optical glass division of the government-owned Research Enterprises, Ltd., at suburbabn Leaside. "I think that nowhere in the world will be found a duplicate of this plant," he said.

The minister toured the plant with a group of officials and newspapermen and described it as the culmination of a "series of miracles" worked since last September, when it was decided to establish it.

Aviators, Scientists, Factories

In dedicating the $6,800,000 plant Mr. Howe said that the "defence of England from the air has been a combination of work of aviators, scientists and factories." He said the contribution of science toward winning the war is as great as any other factor.

Production of optical and fire control instruments began June 6 at Research Enterprises — where also is produced Britain's famed radiolocator. Yesterday Mr. Howe was presented with a 200-pound piece of the first optical glass made in Canada.

New Trade for Workmen

Mr. Howe said that $36,000,000 worth of orders have been placed with Research Enterprises and will be filled before the end of 1942. He told employees they were learning a trade few people knew and said those on secret work were making a great contribution to the war effort.

In an interview Mr. Howe said that the radiolocator—the device which warns of approaching planes when they are miles away—is in use on both Canada's east and west coast. He said he was unable to go into detail concerning their use.

OBSERVERS THINK JAPAN PREPARING

Shanghai Report Says Japan's Curtailment of Shipping and Concentrations Obvious Preparation 'For Any Eventualities'

Shanghai, July 9 (AP)—Experienced observers said that Japan's curtailment of shipping routes and concentrations of her merchant marine in the Pacific was obviously preparation "for any eventualities"—in other words for whatever action Tokyo may have decided to take next.

It was suggested that the ships called home would be handed over to the military authorities if Japan attempts a new overseas expedition.

Maj. Kunio Akiyama, Japanese army spokesman, said "the United States Navy did not send its forces to Iceland for a summer outing; the occupation is a long stride toward war by Roosevelt."

Asked about reports of a Japanese move into southern Indo-China, Akiyama said, "just as the United States did not announce the navy was in Iceland until it was occupied, we can not make an announcement about future matters."

Akiyama said Japan was "greatly concerned over the possibility of a spread of the Russian-German war to the Far East" as a result of passage of United States materials to Vladivostok.

Convoy Duty Is Reduced To One-Third

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Herr Hitler, whose prospects of a swift and conclusive victory in Russia are growing less bright, now finds himself confronted with a development in the Atlantic battle theatre which may be of even greater significance to him.

With United States naval forces occupying Iceland by Presidential order, vital factors in the Anglo-Nazi death struggle are destined to undergo drastic changes in Britain's favor. That action emphasizes anew the Anglo-American conception that the war will be lost or won in the Atlantic, regardless of what comes of Hitler's bloody "crusade" against his former Moscow partner.

That the American move increases the possibility of German-American hostilities is unquestionable. British garrisons in Iceland have already been machine-gunned by German planes. United States naval or other units replacing the British troops may be similarly attacked.

That they will shoot back goes without saying. What that might lead to is anybody's guess. The most "effective" air defense of Iceland, to which Washington has specifically pledged itself would be counter air attack on Nazi bases from which the raids on Iceland came.

Triples Effectiveness

That, however, is not the most immediately discernable aspect of the President's action. What does clearly appear is the tremendous potential strengthening of British sea defenses which could result from this far-reaching extension of the American bastions in the North Atlantic.

If the Washington move means what it appears to mean, Britain's defense zone in that sea has been cut to less than a third of its former 3,000-mile span from the Canadian east coast to ports in England. British naval and air forces affording protection to convoys bound for Britain can be very largely concentrated eastward of the southern tip of Iceland. That would mean a potential tripling of the effectiveness of every British battleship, cruiser, destroyer or corvette assigned to North Atlantic convoy duty.

And presumably it does mean substantially that, if United States naval patrols are to "insure safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States," as the President has directed. He has informed Congress—and the world—that as Commander-in-Chief he has ordered the navy to take all necessary steps to that end.

Only 800 Miles to Patrol

It is blunt warning of what Nazi U-boats, surface raiders or aircraft may expect if sighted by American sea patrols west of Iceland. It also implies that the turn-around of the British sea escorts for shipping convoys can be made hereafter far at sea.

It may no longer be necessary for these warships, big or little, to run all the way to Canada with their cargoes, a distance of more than 2,000 miles beyond Iceland's longitude. Effective American policing of the waters west of Iceland would leave Britain free to concentrate on the 800-mile eastern span of the North Atlantic. One warship could do the work it now takes three or more to do on that shortened turn-around.

Based in Iceland, American sea and air patrols also would be more effective for the same reason. They would not have to return to bases in the United States for refueling. The present American patrol forces operating in the crucial area, of which Iceland is the strategic key, would be tripled in effectiveness and scope of action without adding a ship or plane to the force.

Thus American use of the Iceland defensive base may go far to help Britain through to winter and beyond. It could insure her American planes and other war weapons next year on a scale to guarantee her ultimate victory over her Axis foes.

"GIVE US THE TOOLS" said Churchill "AND WE WILL FINISH THE JOB"

Because of the urgent need of metals to speed Canada's war effort, no more Sunlight silverware will be made until after the war.

If the "tools" of victory—ships, planes, guns, tanks—are to be forthcoming in vast quantity and in time—Canada must mobilize immediately all her resources of metals, including a very large proportion of metals which would ordinarily be used for domestic purposes.

And so, until victory is won, no more of the beautiful "Allure" pattern silverware, heretofore available to users of Sunlight Soap, will be made. Orders will be filled from stocks on hand while the supply lasts.

Picton and District

Picton, July 9—The July meeting of the town council was held last night when many matters were discussed. It was decided not to proceed with the numbering of houses in town as the cost is estimated at $700, an amount much greater than expected.

A letter was read from the Rentals Administrator, who stated he had received a letter alleging high rents here and asked council to investigate. Council took no action on the matter. Reeve H. S. Colliver stated rents here were lower than elsewhere. Mayor McKibbon stated he owned considerable property and had raised rents in only two cases and that he would welcome an investigation. Deputy Reeve Jack Welsh stated, that the council had adopted in principle the stand, that no action be taken on letters that were more or less anonymous in nature.

August 4th was declared a civic holiday and on this occasion the local regatta will be held.

The report of the relief administrator showed 55 on relief in June.

Rain Welcomed By Farmers

Rain yesterday was welcomed by farmers and there is need of more as a good deal is needed to relieve parched conditions. The dry weather has cut the flow of milk and consequently reduced the amount of cheese produced.

Plans for a picnic sponsored by the Prince Edward Federation of Agriculture were discussed Tuesday night at a meeting here. It was announced, that Miss Agnes MacPhail would be guest speaker, the event to be at the Sandbanks on July 23.

The funeral of Miss Alice Louise Seth who died in Toronto was held at Glenwood cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. J. B. Creeggan officiated. Many old friends were present. The Seth family resided here some years ago.

Nazi Statement Remarkably Brief

Berlin, July 9 —(AP)— The German army claimed today its attempt to crack the Stalin Line is "proceeding on schedule" and the German air force was reported to have virtually destroyed Zhitomir in an effort to open a road to the Ukraine.

Hitler's headquarters returned to a single-sentence report on the tremendous conflict, saying: "Operations on the eastern front are proceeding on schedule."

Unofficial accounts, however, declared that the German army flinging itself upon Russian barbed defences had to contend with every imaginable form of defence.

Tabernacle United Church Groups Hold Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of the W.A. and W.M.S. of Tabernacle United Church was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. H. Fisher, William Street, with twenty-five ladies present.

Mrs. S. Cherrie, President of the Women's Association presided during the opening exercises and the W.A. business period and program during which two very excellent readings were given: "The Ladies' Aids" by Mrs. M. P. Duff and "The Always Faithful Few" by Mrs. Elliott.

The offering was presented during the singing of a hymn and Mrs. H. W. Froats, president of the W.M.S. took charge. Reports were received from the various secretaries and the treasurer of the W.M.S.

Mrs. Froats introduced a Worship Service on "Prayer" with a short poem "The Place of Power" as The Call to Worship. The service began with Silent Prayer and one verse of the hymn "Sweet Hour of Prayer", which was followed by a responsive service during which Mrs. T. G. Bell and Mrs. W. Emerson assisted Mrs. Froats.

An article entitled "Prayerways" was read by Mrs. W. Harrison from a late number of The Canadian Home Journal. The meeting close with the Mizpah benediction, after which delectable refreshments and cooling drinks were served.

AIKEN'S W. M. S.

The July meeting of the Aiken's Women's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Allan Latta with a good attendance.

The theme for the meeting which was in charge of the First Vice President, was "Demonstrating the way of Christ in Brotherhood."

A temperance reading was given by the Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Bruce Hogle and "More of Mrs. Wang's Diary" by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton. "Candidates are needed—now," a pleas for more workers in the home field and the foreign field was read by Mrs. Perry Hamilton. Many mission fields have been disturbed by war, and the work of the missionaries has been disrupted and reinforcements are badly needed. The call for more missionaries in the home field includes a need for four community workers and three nurses.

A resume of the work accomplished by the medical missions in Canada was given by Mrs. Lee Grills.

Meditation on "Community Fellowship" was given by Mrs. Fred Moon preceding an address by the Presbyterial Secretary of Community Friendship, Mrs. Stanley Spafford. With World conditions as they are today, Mrs. Spafford feels that community friendship is the coming department in our W.M.S. work. As an answer to its problems Mrs. Spafford suggested Matthew 25-40: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Mrs. L. W. Scott expressed appreciation to Mrs. Spafford for this most interesting talk on a timely subject. A general discussion on problems and how best to meet them followed.

Miss Jennie Moon and Mrs. E. K. Hubble were asked to represent the Society at the School for Leaders in Whitby.

Rev. Scott closed the meeting with prayer.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Is Gift Necessary?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it required that I send a gift when I receive a wedding announcement? Would it be in better taste for me to send a congratulatory card or letter? The bridegroom is a son of a very good friend of mine, but I do not know the bride at all.

L. S. P.

I have never completely agreed with those authorities who say that, "A marriage announcement requires no acknowledgment." There are, of course, circumstances when that is true. On the other hand, there are many cases when this advice is certainly not within the bounds of friendliness.

This announcement sends us the news of an important milestone in the life of a friend or acquaintance, and it seems to me the most natural thing in the world to wish to write a few words of best wishes or congratulation. This is a suitable and cordial gesture of friendliness. Moreover, there are many circumstances when we wish to send a gift.

Let's, for example, take the case of Mary Smith and Tom Jones. Mary's family could not afford to give Mary a "real wedding"; she and her Tom had only the families at the ceremony and there was no reception. Announcements are sent out. It seems to me that the most natural and friendly gesture is for the relatives and friends of either the bride or groom to write their happiness about the good news or to send a gift for the new home. If they don't know Mary, they've probably heard much about her charm from Tom, and they want to make both happy.

So, if you really wish to send a gift, by all means send one. It will be entirely in good taste. At least write a letter of best wishes. Don't send a congratulatory card; they will appreciate your words, not the printer's.

Bridesmaids

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. Instead of having bridesmaids in a wedding party, is it proper to have two married sisters and a married sister-in-law? If so, how can this be done, and what would these attendants be called?

2. Is it proper to have three flower girls?

3. Is it proper for the bride's relatives to have showers for her?

Amy

1. It is proper to have either married or unmarried attendants at a wedding. Even if the bridesmaids are matrons they are still called "bridesmaids." If the chief attendant is unmarried she is called the maid of honor; if married, she is referred to as the "matron of honor."

2. There is no reason why there shouldn't be three flower girls, if the bride especially wishes. But usually there is either one, to walk alone before the bride and her father; or two, to walk together.

3. It is not considered in good taste for the relatives of the bride or of the groom to give a bridal shower. This gives the appearance of a definitely-planned promotion for gifts for the new home.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, July 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

JUDGING by the lunar and mutual aspects of major planets this should be a day of excellent opportunity for advancing upon high goals, and with much audacity and bold initiative. While it is propitious for launching new and very ambitious projects, with determination and aggression, yet it would be well to keep to tried and practical methods lest too radical change might challenge unwelcome publicity. Friendships, in both business and romantic aspect, may play a major part in attaining pleasant and profitable climax, but beware extravagance and over-indulgent ways. Courtship and marriage, festivity and popularity are probable.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find good fortune and exceptional opportunity knocking at the door, with insistence and determination. There should be unusual openings for putting over major projects as well as launching all sorts of objectives and ambitions, leading to high goals or heart's desire. The romantic as well as financial prospects may be splendidly stimulated for success and satisfaction; in all contracts friendship, affection and social festivity play major roles. Marital felicity is shown, but shun jealousy and "competition"; also publicity of an unwelcome complexion. Lavish outlay and excess might prove disturbing.

A child born on this day should have great energy and initiative, with exalted aims and ambitions. It should make outstanding success in life but early direction in thrift and financial responsibility would be helpful.

Junior Sewing Class Receive Diplomas, Pins And Prize Awards

Diplomas and pins were presented to members of the National Junior Sewing Class last evening, girls from the ages of twelve to sixteen, who have completed the course of instruction at the Singer Sewing Centre, Front Street, and, entirely of their own work, made a dress for themselves.

The graduation exercises were featured by a fashion parade of the girls wearing the dress they had completed in the four weeks of the course. Mothers and friends of the girls were present last evening and heard with interest, the announcement of the prize winning members of the class, Mary Agnes Wilkinson, first; Cecelia Trudeau, second; Mary Flynn, Marcelle Thomas and Marguerite Garvin, honorable mention. Mr. Tulloch, manager of the Belleville store, introduced Miss M. Munn, who was instructor of the class. Miss Munn spoke of the pleasure it had given her to teach the girls and presented the graduates with their diplomas and pins.

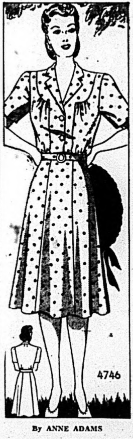
Mrs. C. A. Cameron and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson acted as judges of the girls' handiwork, and in announcing the winners, Mrs. Ketcheson said that the work on all dresses was of such a high standard that the judges had great difficulty in selecting the winners. All the work from cutting out of the garments to the finishing touches was done by the girls themselves under Miss Munn's direction. As they appeared in the fashion parade the girls looked very attractive in their dresses of pretty materials, and smart design.

Mr. J. P. O'Donnell, district manager, congratulating the winners said that the dress awarded first prize would be sent to Toronto to compete in a provincial contest the winner of which would be presented with a portable electric Singer Sewing machine.

At the conclusion of the graduation exercises refreshments were served the visitors, Miss Berna Foley, of the local staff assisting.

Softly Tailored Shirtwaister

PATTERN 4746



By ANNE ADAMS

Even sports clothes go "softie" this summer — with becoming effect! Take, for instance, this striking new Anne Adams shirtwaist frock. Though the simple, casual style of Pattern 4746 makes it perfectly wearable for working days, its unusual softness adds a slight dress-up air and gives wonderful figure flattery. There's smart bodice interest in the rounded yoking that forms one piece with the center panels in a striking effect. The sides of the bodice are left soft and bloused, with the fullness held in by gathering under the yokes and above the waist. That notched collar is a classic shirtwaist feature—so is the buttoning-to-the-waist. Panels go down both the front and back skirt for slim, graceful lines.

Pattern 4746 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Sizes 36 takes 3 3-4 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Cut Down Wedding expenses to Fit Cash on Hand

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am going to be married soon, but my mother doesn't approve of it because she thinks on my small salary I can't have the sort of a wedding I want in such a short time.

I have my wedding dress ready, and have figured out that I would have $68.00 for the wedding and a few personal clothes. I want to be married in church with five bridesmaids in attendance.

My mother doesn't take any interest in my preparations because she thinks we're too young — my fiance is 21 and I'm 18. We love each other so much that we can't wait any longer.

How much would a reception cost and how much shall I allow for announcements? Please tell me anything else you can.

Desperate

I hate to dampen the ardor of a girl of 18 and a boy of 21 who want to have a wedding as high, wide and handsome as their love for each other. But with only $68 to spend, the kind of wedding you want to give would stand no more chance than a snowflake in August. If you have five bridesmaids, I suppose you'll want a wedding march, and the organist will have to be paid.

There is the minister's fee, though that's the bridegroom's problem. It's customary for the bride to give some sort of remembrance to the bridesmaids.

Refreshments for the reception can be managed economically if you make the dainty sandwiches and the fruit punch at home. With the sort of wedding you want, there will have to be a wedding cake and ice-cream. If you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I will forward a copy of my wedding leaflet which will tell you who pays for what. But all said and done, I'd take my mother's suggestion and try and have the wedding cost as little as possible. You love each other and that's the principle thing about a wedding, not the frills and furbelows.

Rival Trying to Get Girl Away

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a girl for some time, and we've talked of marriage. My job doesn't pay very well, but when I get the one I have in mind, I'll be able to support her and we can marry right away. She said she was very happy to know I felt that way about her.

Recently she told me about a friend with whom she corresponds. Although she doesn't see him very often, he has sent her some lovely gifts. She told me she tried to return them but he wouldn't take them back.

He keeps on corresponding with her and is trying to get her away from me. She tells me she has no interest in him because she loves me. What do you make of all this?

A. T. R.

If you and the young lady have only had vague talks about marriage — if you should get a certain job and could support her — that, my dear man, does not constitute an engagement. She is at liberty to correspond with whom she pleases. If she really cares about you, she will find ways and means of getting rid of the other man. Sometimes girls have a way of keeping two men on a string; watch out for that. If you're in earnest, leave no stone unturned to get that job.

Happiness in Store for Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I will soon be 21 years old, and do not smoke, drink, pet or do anything else that they call "smart" these days. I have enjoyed parties, driving, dancing, picnics, football games and movies with various boy friends.

My older brother and sister do all the things I disapprove of. They have often come home intoxicated. As I'm the youngest of the family, they think they have the right to order me around. They call me "antique" until I can hardly stand it. They tell me I ought to enjoy myself when I'm young, because glamour goes when one is old. Do you think they are right? Some of my friends have said similar things to me, and I'm wondering if I'll be left behind.

About two months ago I met an agreeable young man who seemed surprised that I didn't do the things the modern girls do. He said he ishrt rqhw wished all other girls were like me. We've grown to be real pals, and I feel as though I have known him always.

What course shall I follow?

Uncertain

From what you tell me of your friend, he is highly congenial. You're showing very good taste in not trying to force yourself to like the things that amuse your brother and sister, if that is not your idea of a good time.

Keep up your friendship with this agreeable young man, and be pleasantly indifferent to the jibes of the others about your being "antique." You are really very modern if you do what you like best, without concerning yourself with how it pleases others.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D

Getting Off to Sleep

It is now agreed that loss of sleep does not harm the body as much as worrying about having lost sleep. The value of sleep has been taught so long, and so often, and rightly so, that any loss of sleep quite often upsets those who are naturally nervous, and this upsetment of mind causes further loss of sleep.

Getting a good night's sleep is like the recharging of the battery of your motor car. The battery is removed from the car and if switch has been left on or there is any short circuit, the battery cannot be run down. It was meant that when you go to bed that you remove your body and mind away from the work and worries of the day. If you are unable to sleep and have the work and worries of the day on your mind, then, as you lie awake, your body is actually giving out energy instead of storing energy. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that loss of sleep means a tired and irritable individual in the morning.

It is the ability to shift things of the day off the mind as we lie down to sleep that enables us to get off to sleep.

If you have been to an exciting movie, hockey match or boxing bout, even if the hour is late it is better to read for a few minutes to get your mind calmed down before you try to get off to sleep. Thus I find that after an exciting boxing bout or bouts, my pulse and blood pressure are increased even after I reach home, so I read for a while, whereas watching some other games or contests leave my pulse and blood pressure at a normal level and I can get off to sleep without reading.

In most hospitals, warm milk or warm soup is given just before the lights go off so that the blood will be drawn from the head.

When the reading or the taking of warm food does not get you off to sleep, what should be done?

The simplest and usually effective thing to do is to put out the light, get yourself in a relaxed position, knees and arms slightly bent, and breathe slowly and easily as if very tired, saying to yourself, "Well, if I rest like this and don't worry about getting off to sleep, I'll get 80 per cent of the value I'd get if I were asleep; that is, from the standpoint of heart rate, blood pressure and temperature".

The thought that you are getting this much benefit by resting quietly is usually enough to bring on natural sleep.

·Ted Williams of Boston Red Sox Slams Homer in Ninth to Win All-Star Game for Americans

Hit Was Necessary as National Leaguers Were Ahead 5-2 Going Into Ninth

VAUGHAN BRILLIANT

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Detroit, July 9 (AP)—Of all National leaguers, the one with the most legitimate complaint about the way yesterday's All-Star baseball game turned out is Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh's veteran shortstop.

Arky, not anywhere near famous as a distant hitter, rose to the heights in the cause of the Nationa; League and hit two shattering home runs in successive innings, each time with a man on base. It was tremendous and should have been enough to place Vaughan in the All-Star hall of fame with something to spare.

But what happens? A tall California boy named Ted Williams, employed by the Boston Red Sox, comes up with two out and two on in the ninth inning and slams a homer to give the American Leaguers a 7-5 victory and relegate Vaughan's two preceding clouts to the ash can.

Looking around, Vaughan can lay such a tough break as that to a couple of things. In the first place, why wasn't Williams, leading hitter of the American League, given a walk so that the fading Claude Passeau could get at Dominic DiMaggio. Anybody would have been better than Williams.

Would Have Been Poor Strategy

Yet, last night, Manager Del Baker of the victorious Americans said it would have been poor strategy to pass Williams, for that would have put the winning run on second base.

Secondly, with one out in the ninth, Joe DiMaggio slapped a perfect double play ball to shortstop. Eddie Miller grabbed the pill and flipped it to Billy Herman, forcing Cecil Travis at second and setting up the twin-killing that would have closed out the game with the Nationals ahead 5-3.

But Herman hurried his throw, pulling Frank McCormick off first base. A run dented the plate, two were on base and Williams was up there swinging his wagontongue with a crowd of 54,674 on edge.

Almost Hit Jackpot

Such things happen and Vaughan who should have been a hero, was just another unfortunate who "almost hit the jackpot. The American leaguers now hold a lead of 6-3 in the All-Star classics.

Williams knocked in four of his club's runs. In the fourth frame, with Paul Derringer pitching, he slammed a ball to right field ,that Bob Elliott of the Pirates misjudged, allowing a run to count. Ted drove in four and Vaughan drove in four, but they paid off on Ted.

Outside of these big punches, it was a pitcher's battle, especially in the early stages. Many fans wished that Bobby Feller of Cleveland and Whit Wyatt of Brooklyn, leading pitchers in the American and National Leagues, respectively, might have gone on and fought it out. Neither showed any signs of being scored on. But a rule of the All-Star tussle says a pitcher may go only three innings, so the duel was broken up.

NELSON, SNEAD LEAD WAY INTO PGA MATCH PLAY

32 Qualify for Man-to-Man Battles Over Cherry Hills Course

GREAT CONTESTS

BY LOUDON KELLY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Denver, July 9.—(AP)— The boys with bandage-anda-arnica backgrounds are doing all right in this 24th P.G.A. tournament at water-trapped Cherry Hills.

Defending Champion Byron Nelson of Toledo and Medalist Samuel Jackson Snead of Hot Springs, Va., who led the way into today's opening match play bracket of 32 man-to-man battles over 18 holes, both have enlisted medical aid lately.

Nelson has a torn nail on a finger smashed in an automobile door but insists it doesn't bother his grip—"just feels dead".

Snead, the Canadian open titlist, who scorched Cherry Hills in two qualifying rounds of 69-69—138, four under par, to win the diamond-studded Alex Smith Memorial Medal, has been plagued so much by an aching back that he had about decided only recently not to enter the tournament, which he never has won.

Has Chance to Win Both

National Open Champion Craig Wood from Mamaroneck, N.Y., also was troubled with a back ailment that later spread to one leg, but he turned in a smart 69 yesterday after shooting 76 Monday. He might be the first since Gene Sarazen to win the open and P.G.A. the same year.

Harry Bassler, Chunky Los Altos, Calif., pro, tied for the lead at the 18-hole stage, wound up with 68-73—141—and his golf career has been interrupted eleven times by trips to the hospital, mostly for stomach surgery.

Despite impaired vision in one eye, Mark Fry of Oakland, holds the California Open Crown and qualified satisfactorily with 72-76—148.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Arkansas traveller from Chicago, who likes "to see those irons shoot off quail high", was second to Snead for the Medal with 68-71—139. He and Bassler shared the halfway lead. Four players, including Little Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., a hot favorite, were clustered at 140.

The razor-sharp greens were watered before the second 18 was played and as a result 18 players smashed par compared with only five the opening day.

TENNIS TOURNEY WELL UNDERWAY

Defending Champions in Men's Doubles Draw a Bye

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Doubles play as well as singles matches faced several players today in the Ontario Tennis Championships as the five-day tournament swung into its third day with play in the preliminary rounds of the men's and ladies' doubles scheduled to be run off.

Two games of men's doubles were able to be played last night but doubles play among the ladies will not begin until this afternoon. Mixed-doubles matches are expected to get under way Thursday.

The men's doubles games were taken by E. C. Conn of Ottawa and Maurice Margesson of Toronto and H. Ashlin and J. Daneau of Toronto. Conn and Margesson got together to whip J. Bond and Ross Robertson of Toronto 6-3, 6-3 and Ashlin and Daneau combined to defeat R. Robinson and J. Brown of Toronto, 8-6, 6-1.

The defending champions, Ross Wilson and Bobby Murray, have drawn a bye in the opening round but they will see action in the singles play.

Phil Pearson and R N. Watt, Jr., of Montreal, advanced into the quarter-finals. Wilson moved in with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over Norman Kasta of Toronto, Pearson by a 6-4, 1-6, 6-1 win over Bruce Hall of Detroit and Watt joined them by defeating E. Pyne of Toronto 6-2, 6-0.

With them in the quarter-final bracket at the end of the second day's play was H. Rochon of Montreal who eliminated Gordie Shields of Schumacher with a 6-1, 2-6, 6-3 upset victory.

The four top-seeded ladies singles players, Mrs. Frank Fisher, Toronto, and Mrs. Beryl Mordell, Mrs. G. Lewis and Miss Winnifred McConnell of Ottawa got by preliminary rounds and still were the favorites to take the title won last year by Mrs. Peggy Penman of England.

SPECTACULAR CRASH IN SPEED RACE RESULTS IN DEATH

John Lavelle, 28-year-old speed-race rider, was crushed and killed in his car, following a spectacular collision with another car at the Weymouth Fair Grounds race track, before a large audience of thrill-seekers at Weymouth, Mass. It was a holiday for the audience, but the "Grim Reaper" did not take a holiday this day, he was driving Lavelle's car. ABOVE we see a sequence of photos taken from the start of the fatal five-mile auto race until the time of the crash. On TOP, we see John Lavelle, in his auto, picking up speed shortly after the start of the race...in the CENTRE...with less than a mile to go, Lavelle, in second place RIGHT, tries to pass Mike Fiore, of Waterbury, Conn., the leader. With the throttle now wide open, Lavelle cuts on the outside, unaware that death rides with him...on BOTTOM....Lavelle's car, it's left front wheel locked with Fiore's right rear wheel, is thrown and careens crazily hurdling through the air. Overturning twice in flight, the machine crashes upside down in a cloud of smoke and flame, crushing the life out of its driver. The race was halted and attendants pulled Lavelle out of the wreckage and rushed him to Weymouth hospital where doctors pronounced him dead on arrival. The driver of the other speed-auto was uninjured.

HURLER RETIRES FIRST 25 BATTERS BUT LOSES 5-4

Jim Trexler of Bisons Had No-hit, No-run Game in His Lap

LEAFS DEFEATED

(By The Associated Press)

Pitcher Jim Trexler of the International Baseball League's Buffalo Bisons last night was within an ace of scoring one of the greatest achievements in baseball—a no-hit, no-run game, when the knockout punch came.

The Bison hurler had retired in order the first 25 men to face him when the blow fell, giving Syracuse Chiefs a 5-4 victory on four hits. Johnny Bottarini, second man up for the Chiefs in the ninth, started things with a single to left. Trexler walked the next two batters and singles by Vince Sherlock and Ed Longacre followed to tie the score 2-2. Bill Nagel delivered the KO, driving the ball out of the park to score behind Sherlock and Longacre.

The Chiefs had to call on three hurlers in the last half of the ninth as the Bisons strove to save the game for Trexler, pushing across two runs before Ted Kleinhans got Mike Rocco to end the game with the bases loaded.

The loss prevented Buffalo from gaining ground on the league-leading Newark Bears, who went down to defeat 4-1 before Rochester Red Wings.

Hank Gornicki coasted to his seventh victory spacing eight hits. The Wings remained in third place a few percentage points ahead of the Montreal Royals, who split a twin-bill with Jersey City.

The Little Giants banged out 16 hits to take the night cap from the Royals 13-4, after dropping the opener 5-2.

A combination of rookie Russ Miller's three hit pitching and Hal Sieling's homer with the bases loaded sped Baltimore Orioles to a 7-2 triumph over Toronto.

Sports Events For Charity or Sport Exempt

Ottawa, July 9.— (CP) —Sports events, staged for the benefit of sport itself or for charitable purposes, will operate under exemption from the 20 per cent excise tax recently. Imposed on tickets of admission to spectator entertainment, officials of the National Revenue Department said today.

"It is difficult to say that any one sport is exempt and another not," said one official "But there is this reasonably clear line of demarcation—any league operating in any sport for profit must pay the tax on admissions and any league operating for the good of the game or for charitable purposes is exempt".

This means, it was added, that any team eligible to compete for Canadian amateur sports championship trophies, such as the Allan Cup or the Memorial Cup, may be considered exempt from the tax.

"All known professional sports events are taxable", said the official.

ZELLERS OCCUPY SECOND PLACE BY BEATING DEACONS

Bessie Doolittle Hurls Entire Game for Winners and Given Good Margin to Work On

SCORE IS 25-12

Pounding the offerings of two Deacon hurlers to all corners of the Armouries diamond, Chuck Barnett's Big-Z downed "Stub" Barrett's Deacon gals 25 to 12 in a Girls' Softball League fixture last evening. In winning the Big-Z lassies advanced into sole possession of second place, one-half game behind the league leading SWACO nine.

A seventeen-run splurge in the first three innings saw the winners assume an advantage they held with comparative ease, as the Big-Z infield tightened behind their veteran moundsman, Bessie Doolittle, who chalked up her first win of the year, as shortstop Helen Garrow came up wtih several sparkling defensive plays to help the winners' cause.

Home Runs Featured

Home runs featured the contest, however, as Zellers counted four and Deacons three. Wilma Clarke had two home runs ,a double and a single, while Molly Douglas hit for the circuit and added a double and two singles, with Helen Garrow getting one round-tripper, two doubles and a single. Jean Corneal paced the losers on the attack with two circuit blows a double and a single in five tries; Nora Weeks hit the other round-tripper credited to Deacon's.

Bessie Doolittle hurled the entire game for the winners and once given a substantial lead coasted in to victory. "Toots" Sharpe, making her initial appearance in the league, ascended the hilltop for Deacon's, but was removed in favour of Jean Muir after Zellers had scored nine in the second and were continuing their attack in the third. Errors and throwing the ball around the infield at random took its usual toll upon the losers.

The line-ups:

Deacon's—Ridley, 2b, Samani, ss, Sharpe, lf, Corneal, rf, Dolder, 3b, Hansen, cf, Woodhouse, c, T. Sharp and J. Muir, p, and Weeks, 1b.

Big Z—Bennett, 3b, Stewart, 2b, Garrow, ss, Douglas, lf, Donovan, 1b, Clarke, rf, Hunter, cf, Thompson c, and Doolittle, p.

Score by innings: R.H.E.
Deacon's 0 1 0 1 4 2 4 0 0—12 15 9
Big-Z... 0 9 8 2 2 0 4 0 x—25 20 2

Younger Comiskey Leaves for 'Bushes'

Chicago, July 9.—(AP)—A Comiskey has left the Chicago White Sox for the "Bushes".

Charles A. Comiskey 11, future owner-president of the American League Club, has left for his mother's summer home at Eagle River, Wis., hopeful he'll land a regular job with the Eagle River town team. And the chance of playing regularly outweighs, with Charles, the prospect of travelling with the White Sox and watching Big League games from the dugout.

"It looks like I'll get to play first base", said the 15-year-old youngster who stands six feet tall, weighs 160 pounds and has the powerful build of his grandfather, Charles A. (Old Roman) Comiskey, founder of the White Sox and one of the great first sackers of early baseball.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

When the New York Yankees hit home runs in 25 consecutive games recently, they established seven Major League marks, tied two and broke one American League record for home runs by one club. Now the Yankees hold all records in hitting home runs for 25 consecutive games.

Here is what the Yankee round-trippers did in chronological order:

June 16—Broke American League record of 21 homers in 12 consecutive games, set by Detroit in 1938, with a 21 total.

June 17—Tied league mark of 22 round-trippers in 13 consecutive games, established by Detroit in 1938.

June 18—Tied league record of 23 round-trippers in 14 straight games, made by Detroit in 1928.

June 19—Broke major league mark of 22 in 15 consecutive contests, made by Detroit in 1938, with two circuit clouts to raise total to 25.

June 20—Making two home runs, established Major League record for 16 straight games at 27, previously set by Detroit at 24, in 1940.

June 21—Broke big league record of 26 in 17 consecutive contests, made by Detroit in 1940, by getting one home run to raise total to 28, and tied mark for circuit clouts in successive games..

Established two major marks of 30 round-trippers in 18 consecutive games, for number of home runs and for successive contests.

Fame is fleeting—just when Arky Vaughan, of the Pirates, would be heralded as the hero of the 1941 "All-Star" Major League baseball classic at Detroit yesterday, Dame Fortune turned her back for a fleeting second and Vaughan became the forgotten man. Ted Williams became the hero of the ninth All-Star game with a mighty ninth-inning run that gave the American-League a 7 to 5 win over the National League. It was a true Merriwell finish for the junior circuit team, that lost two "All-Star" games in 1940 and the world series to add insult to injury. With the score standing at 5 to 2 for the National League team, thanks to some good pitching and Vaughan's two home runs with one aboard on each occasion, the junior circuit team was forced to come from behind. They scored a run when the National Leaguers elected for a double play of DiMaggio's drive for a force-out. With two on and two out and the score 5 to 3 against his team-mates, big Ted Williams of the Red Sox, realized a ball player's dream. He hit a home run with two on base to win an All-Star game, and such is fame. Incidentally DiMaggio continued his consecutive game hitting by getting one hit yesterday, but it does not count in the league averages.

Do you remember when Howie Morenz of Stratford, Ont., who later became one of hockey's most colorful figures, turned professional with Montreal Canadiens 18 years ago today? He was sold to Chicago Black Hawks in 1934, going to New York Rangers in 1935-36 and back to the Canadiens in the summer of 1936. He died March 8, 1937, from complications following a hockey injury.

There are three more games left to play in the City Softball League, all of which are of paramount importance to the Esquire and Reliance squads, who are battling to stay out of fourth place and thereby avoid meeting Corby's in the league semi-finals. Reliance have two games, one tonight with Corby's and a postponed game with SACO, while the Esquire kids must win Friday over SACO to keep in the race. Incidentally Skippers Bawden and Barriage have arranged to bring "Bang" Jordan's league-leading Kingston "B.A." team to Belleville for an exhibition game on Thursday night. Jordan's charges are leading the Limestone City softball loop and this game should tend to relate the relative strength of the two loops.

Lloyd Hicks, who gave Belleville its one and only American Power Boat Association race meet off Massassaga Point two years ago, was signally honoured by the A.P.B.A. recently when he was named vice-chairman of that organization for Region No. 13, which comprises Ontario and Quebec. It is to men like Lloyd Hicks that such recognition should be given and this corner wishes to add "congrats." To Lloyd Hicks goes all honour and glory for the staging of the A.P.B.A. race meet here and like the 200-mile Canadian Motorcycle Championship organized by George Pepper, the sport fans of the community little appreciated the efforts of these men who did not put their all into the projects for the honour that might be theirs, but rather for the love of their favourite line of sporting activities. Other lines of sport have their champions but here are two examples of men who brought the best respective competitors in the world to our front door and asked no favours.

Chuck Barnett's Zeller lassies returned to their winning ways after dropping a brace of games last week, to pound out a 25 to 12 win over the Deacon gals last night and advance to within a half-game of the league leading SWACOS. Extra base hits told the tale, as the green and yellow clad Big-Z nine hit four home runs, six doubles and a triple, Wilma Clarke getting back her batting eye with two homers, Helen Garrow had another and Molly Douglas the fourth. Jean Corneal hit two round-trippers for Deacons and Nora Weeks one, as seven home runs were chalked up in a free-hitting contest. Skipper Leo Barrett started "Toots" Sharpe for Deacons and in her initial mound appearance Miss Sharpe started well, but showed signs of nervousness. Another game or two and she should prove more effective. The veteran Bessie Doolittle coasted in to pitch Zellers to victory as Helen Garrow turned in her best defensive game of the year. While on the subject of girls' softball, Mike Power's Viking gals are playing the Bata lassies of the Trenton League, an exhibition game at the Armouries on Thursday evening.

New York, July 9. —(AP)—Red Pan Dept.: Ritchie Lemos, who stopped Pete Scalzo for the N.B.A. Featherweight title, wasn't listed even as a contender in the last N.B.A. ratings . . . Paul Derringer has business as well as baseball brains. He built a flock of beach cottages at Sarasota, Fla., within walking distance of the $1,000,000 Lido Casino before the site of the Casino was selected . . Wake Forest College, which has just completed a fine new football stadium, is tied down this year with nine away-from-home contracts. And is Athletic Director Jim Weaver pulling strings . . . getting tougher and tougher to get players into the All Star games and Judge Landis may have to take a hand. One manager reported to have announced Sunday in the club house that if any of his guys wanted to withdraw it would be all right with him.

"One Night in Lisbon"

An up-to-the-minute streamlined comedy of a love blitz that starts in London and wings its way south to Lisbon proved a screen delight to the audience at the Belle Theatre today when Belleville moviegoers viewed Paramount's "One Night in Lisbon."

Here's a fast and funny film that crams all the romance, song and bright lights left in Europe, in the escape-valve city—Lisbon. This last remaining continental playground is a refuge for king and beggar alike. Amid thrilling mystery and spy intrigue, everyone is engaged n a scramble for last-minute laughter and love while there's still a chance to enjoy life.

The team of stars responsible for this smart farcical romance have become a well-traveled couple. Their screen romance started in New York when beautiful Madeleine Carroll and handsome Fred MacMurray met in "Cafe Society." Everyone who saw them together predicted the perfect film couple's success. After their "Honeymoon in Bali," they trekked across the states to "Virginia." Leaving the old south, Hollywood's outstanding romantic team began to look the map over for new fields to conquer. It had to be a place where an American boy and an English girl could indulge in riotous fun and frolic without restrictions.

They looked to their screen pilot and navigator, Director Edward H. Griffith and Writer Virginia Van Upp, for the right answer. These two were the ones responsible for Madeleine's and Fred's previous three successful ventures.

Sparkling with witty lines against a background of exciting adventure and mysterious spies, the stellar Carroll-MacMurray combination opens in "One Night in Lisbon" supported by a brilliant cast that includes Patricia Morison, Billie Burke, John Loder, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Reginald Denny and a "Mr. Popopopopolous" played by Billy Gilbert.

You'll enjoy this good-natured satire on the lighter side of the war in Europe.

The same programme includes a coloured cartoon, "Dipsy Gypsy" and the latest in the Canada Carries On series "Churchill's Island." This short subject is recognized as the finest and most dramatic document yet to be released in this series.

SAMUEL ALEXANDER SCRIBNER

Bronxville, N.Y., July 9.— (AP) —Samuel Alexander Scribner, 82, first manager of George M. Cohan, the actor, an known as the "King of Burlesque", died yesterday. Scribner, who at one time was associated with the late Sam H. Harris, organized the Columbia Amusement Company which controlled the burlesque field from Omaha to Boston.

Sylvia Sydney and Humphrey Bogart in a scene from their new picture which opens next at the Capitol Theatre, "The Wagons Roll at Night," a story of circus life, is said to be one of the finest dramatic pictures since "They Drive by Night."

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

June laughed when Brooks told her Donald loved her. But it wasn't a laugh that sounded pleasant or mirthful. "He puts on a good act—in public," she agreed. "But— in private —there are no pretenses. He's sorry he married me, and he wants me to go to Hollywood—stopping off, I suppose, at Reno, and leaving him entirely free to go back to being a — tramp of a newspaperman. Oh, a very good tramp, of course—but still a tramp. He wants to be free—". She laughed at herself and for a moment hid her face against her knees.

"It's tough, youngster," Brooks said gently, "but—well, there's an old saying my grandmother used a lot when things were pretty bad—as they usually were with her, bless her. She would say, 'This, too, will pass. It can't always be like this'."

"And does it help you now to think that?"

Brooks' jaw set and his eyes chilled a little. "No!" he answered flatly.

There was a brief pause, and then June said very low, "You love her terribly, don't you?"

"Is it as obvious as all that?"

"It is to me — because I understand," said June quietly.

Brooks nodded. "It would be, I guess."

June studied him curiously. "From the outside, anybody would say that you and Natalie were an idyllically happy couple." She sounded as though she talked to herself.

"And an outside view of you and Heath would be pretty convincing," said Brooks.

June nodded soberly. "We're a bunch of pretty good actors, aren't we?" she agreed. 'I've only got myself to blame. Don tried to tell me it wouldn't work out, but I wouldn't listen. My mother tried too, but I thought that was just because she wanted me to go on being a career girl — and when I met Don, that seemed pretty silly. The only thing I really wanted was to be his wife—and cook and scrub and wash—and always be waiting for him at night at the gate in front of a green-and-white bungalow—with flowers along the walk—and—and babies. Sounds p-pretty s-silly, I suppose. Don hates the suburbs and b-bungalows, and — well, I guess he's not too t-terribly fond of—babies—"

She was crying now, though she blinked her blue eyes rapidly and clenched her hands into hard, small fists in an effort to check the tears. She cried like a child; and like the child she seemed to him, he put his arms about her and held her comfortingly close, his cheek against her hair. There was nothing lover-like in the embrace; it was that of a brother comforting a grieving child.

But to the girl who stood taut-drawn and still at the edge of the dune, her heart dying in her breast, the scene was plainly that of a lover who comforts his beloved.

Natalie stood as still as though she had been turned to stone. She felt that her heart hung suspended in her breast; as though it had forgotten to beat; the breath stilled in her nostrils. There was first utter incredulity, and then a blinding burning fury that shook her as a slim sapling is shaken in a storm. She was conscious of only one impulse—a desire to fling herself forward, screaming and clawing like a wild animal. Dimly, far back in her stunned mind, she was conscious of shock and dismay that she could experience so completely an animal emotion.

Then Brooks put gentle fingers beneath June's quivering chin, tilted her head back, and, with his own handkerchief, mopped her wet eyes. Not by so much as a flicker of an eyelash did he betray the fact that he was now acutely aware of Natalie's presence there above them. Something deep in his heart had told him she was there. It had been like that from the very first with him. In a room crowded with people, he could always tell the instant she entered, even if his back was turned to the door. And in this moment he was sharply, almost painfully aware of her there, white and still and speechless, and his action from that instant on was meant for her.

Deliberately, he mopped June's eyes; deliberately, he smiled at her tenderly, caressingly. Then he bent his head and set his mouth on hers in an ardent kiss. Natalie, too shaken to endure any more, turned and ran blindly away. Ran, her heart breaking within her, too fast to see June shrink from Brooks' kiss, or to hear her protesting gasp, "Oh—you—you—mustn't!"

"Sorry," said Brooks, smiling a little because he knew that Natalie had seen exactly what he wanted her to see and that she was gone. "You were so much like a child that I forgot you were grown up. That kiss was for a five-year-old child whose dolly has been broken —not for a grown-up young matron who thinks her heart is broken."

"Thanks!" said June through her teeth. Her hand shook a little as she accepted the cigaret he lighted for her. "Oh, well, I suppose I shall be all the better musician for this sort of thing. Isn't there some old 'chestnut' to the effect that a musician never really amounts to anything until she has 'lived and loved and lost'?"

"You're too young and much too pretty to be so cynical," said Brooks firmly. He got up, pulling June to her feet. "Look, what do you say that you and I slip over to the mainland and get drunk? Oh, just mildly 'tight' you know — nothing crude or vulgar— just a slight 'edge' that will make the world more nearly endurable? We could have dinner. Somehow I don't seem to relish the idea of dining en masse with the gentleman of the press."

There was a reckless light in June's blue eyes as she agreed. They walked back to their respective cottages, but as both had expected, the entire colony seemed to have gathered at the Hacienda. June, slipping into a crisp summer frock, threading a ribbon through her silver-gift curls, tying a coquettish bow smack on top of her head, saw that her mouth was hard and straight and her eyes very cold.

"You'll be looking like that a lot from now on," she told her image grimly. "So you'd better get over being surprised about the change in your appearance."

Brooks, immaculate and very handsome in tropical white, was waiting for her on the pier. He had already arranged for the palpably curious and sharp-eyed guard to take them over to the mainland and come back for them later.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

IT HADN'T BEEN easy to get rid of the newspaper men. But they were gone at last, and Betsy suggested hospitably to the colony. "It's too late for a real meal. Why don't we just scratch up something here and have it together, picnic fashion?"

The others shouted approval and Betsy. Mrs. Edmonds and Terry disappeared into the kitchen to make sandwiches, salad and tea.

"Wonder where June is?" exclaimed Terry as she assembled lettuce and tomatoes and hunted for the salad bowls.

"I wonder where Brooks is," suggested Mrs. Edmonds. There was a curious inflection in her voice that made Terry and Betsy look at her questioningly.

"Meaning just exactly what — or shouldn't I ask?" suggested Terry mildly—too mildly, for there was a glint in her eye that indicated she still had reserves against liking Mrs. Edmonds any too much.

Mrs. Edmonds smiled faintly and kept her eyes on the sandwiches she was cutting.

"Oh, I don't imagine he liked being labeled "The Million Dollar Husband" very well. And there were some other things the newspapermen said," she added coolly. "He looked rather—well, rather black when he stalked away."

"I thought he looked like Laurence Olivier in a temper—and that looks pretty good to me," said Terry promptly. "Brooks is a pretty swell guy. Anybody want to make anything out of that?"

Mrs. Edmonds laughed, and her thin, penciled brows went up in a little look of amused dismay. "My dear"! she protested prettily. "Put down that wicked-looking knife when you speak in that tone. The two together are simply too dangerous. All I meant was that Brooks looked as though he'd like some solitude to get over his—well, shall we call it embarrassment?"

"And why should be be embarrassed?" demanded Terry, still belligerently. "After all, Natalie's got such scads of money—I don't suppose there's a man in the country with enough money to marry her and escape being called a fortune hunter. But Natalie's plenty human and pretty swell—and she's crazy about Brooks. I think it was darned swell of her to hand him a million bucks so he could have his own pocket money after they were married. A lot of women in her position might have gone around making Friend Husband hold out his grimy little paw every time he wanted 5 cents for a package of gum."

"Well!" said Mrs. Edmonds in delicate disdain.

Terry stared at her for a moment, then threw down the knife with which she had been peeling tomatoes and stalked out of the kitchen, too angry to speak. She pushed open the swinging door and all but fell over Natalie, who stood with her slim back pressed hard against the door at the other end of the tiny pantry. Her first startled look at the girl's white face and tortured eyes told Terry that Natalie had overheard the whole conversation.

Terry was tongue-tied for a moment.

"It's quite all right, Terry," said Natalie after a moment. "I proved an old adage wrong—the one about eavesdroppers hearing no good of themselves. Thank you for sticking up for me."

"The Edmonds creature gets in my hair," Terry exploded. "She's always so darned busy minding other people's affairs!"

"Maybe that's because she hasn't any of her own, eh?" said Natalie and tried to smile, though her eyes were sick with pain. Far too much pain to have been caused by overhearing the more or less harmless words that Terry and Mrs. Edmonds had exchanged in the kitchen.

"Look here, Natalie, you're not going to let that old cat get under your skin?" Terry burst out childishly, caring not a hoot that Mrs. Edmonds might very easily hear her. "She just talks to hear her brains rattle."

Natalie shook her head "No, of course I don't mind what Mrs. Edmonds said," she answered, so softly that Terry had to lean close to hear her words. "But — oh, Terry, Terry — something has happened that's sort of snatched the ground from under my feet, and I'm scared, Terry, I'm so terribly scared."

Terry put quick, comforting arms about her as though Natalie had been the younger. "Don't, Natalie. Nothing's as bad as all that."

"This is," said Natalie faintly. "It's much worse. I was looking for Brooks a while ago. And I found him—way down the beach — with June in his arms."

It took a full moment for the significance of that to sink into Terry's startled, ordinarily alert young mind. And when it did she caught her breath and gasped, before she could check her words, "Why the good for nothing pup!"

Natalie winced. "No, he's not, Terry. He's fine and decent — and everything I wanted in a man. It's I who have failed him somewhere."

"You!" Terry fairly snorted. "You've given him the world on a solid gold platter."

"Maybe that's just it. Terry Maybe he'd rather have worked for it—with someone like June," said Natalie, tortured with the memory of that moment when she had stood there, dazed and incredulous, watching that unbelievable scene: her husband, a bridegroom, making love to another man's bride. It sounded like something in a French farce—not the sort of thing that happens in real life; not in her life.

"Have you told Donald?" asked Terry after a moment.

"No, of course not—why should I?" Natalie answered almost haughtily.

Terry shrugged, ran nervous fingers through her already tumbled curls, and flung out her other hand in a little gesture of helplessness.

"Well, after all, he is her husband. It seems to me he ought to be at least mildly interested in such shenanigans," she pointed out with receptive mildness. "But of course I could be wrong about that. I've been wrong about a lot of things in my time."

"This concerns only Brooks and me," said Natalie steadily. "If Brooks wants a divorce, I shall give it to him, of course."

"Sure," said Terry, and made no secret of her supreme disgust at that. "You would. You're soft — much too soft to fight. So you'll just be ladylike and refined. You make me sick!"

To Be Continued.

Price of Eggs up—Butter Market Quiet

Toronto, July 9—With fresh receipts continuing light, spot prices on top-quality eggs registered advances ranging from 1 cent to 4 1-2 cents a dozen in trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. First grade butter prices managed to hold steady on a generally quiet market.

A general advance was the order of the day for all grades on the egg market as receipts proved insufficient to meet the good demand. Prices on Grade A-large, A-medium and A-pullets increased as much as 1 1-2 cents a dozen in the country dealer section, while grades B and C also gained from 1-2 to 1 cent. All grades registered an advance of 1 cent a dozen in the retail section of trading.

In perfect harmony with the soaring local butter prices, caused mostly by lack of fresh supplies, the Ontario Creamery Association yesterday reported that production of creamery butter for the week ending June 28 amounted to 1,088,565 pounds, compared with 1,239,394 pounds for the same week last year. This represents a decrease of 12.17 per cent. Though demand was only fair and trading spotty, light receipts managed to hold prices of first grade creamery solids steady at 34 cents a pound. Dealers reported the odd lot sold at 34 1-2 cents a pound, but these sales were not sufficient in number to establish the advanced price.

great fire of 1666. Originally it was a monastery chapel for the Augustinian Friars. The name later became corrupted to Austin In 1550 Edward VI gave it to refugees from the Netherlands. Only piles of rubble remain of the structure but valuable archives, including letters by Erasmus and John Knox, had been removed to safety.

St. Bartholomew's Church, the oldest in the City, has escaped thus far, though bombs have fallen all around it.

St. George's Roman Catholic Cathedral in Southwark was on fire and destroyed by incendiaries.

St. Columbia's Church of Scotland, and known to Scotsmen all over the world, has been burned out, though its fine crypt chapel escaped. Designed to meet the spiritual needs of Scottish people in London the church had a membership of 3,000.

Lambeth Palace, home of the Archbishop of Canterbury, spiritual head of the Church of England, has been badly damaged. Its great hall, including a famous library, was damaged. The chapel roof was destroyed. All that remained of it was a mass of charred beams and rafters on the floor. Pumps which might have saved the chapel were put out of action by a high explosive bomb. The Archbishop's own quarters in the palace were slightly damaged.

HANSON OUTLINES TASKS FOR GOV'T

Believes Prime Minister King Should Go to Britain to Proposed Conference

Winnipeg, July 9 (CP)—Hon. R. B. Hanson and other prominent members of the Conservative Party headed westward from here today in search of public opinion on major questions concerning Western Canada.

In a brief address at a garden party last night Mr. Hanson said the Conservative Party stands ready to do its utmost in national service and its first obligation is to make this maximum contribution toward victory in the war.

Speaking to young Conservatives, he also said the party now is thoroughly being reorganized. When the reorganization is completed party leaders will present a program for Canadian development.

Private Enterprise After War

"In the post-war period Canada should make sure that private enterprise and initiative held the scope," he said.

During a busy day of sightseeing and meeting prominent Manitoba Conservatives in Winnipeg, Mr. Hanson, in an interview, outlined three tasks which he believed the Dominion Government should do before Prime Minister Mackenzie King could hope to command national unity in the war emergency.

Conservatives, he said, "do not ask for a National Government but we think it is the duty of the King Government to put ino effect National Service."

Mr. Hanson also urged revamping of the Government's Cabinet and said Mr. Mackenzie King should go to Britain to attend a proposed conference of empire leaders.

Marketing Problem

After exchanging views with executives of the Manitoba Wheat Pool and Winnipeg Grain Exchange Mr. Hanson suggested that solution of the marketing problem for Canada's suge surplus wheat could best be dealt with by farmers themselves in united action with the best minds in the whole Dominion. Of course, he said, Parliament is anxious to assist in meeting the problem.

Great Britain is Canada's best wheat customer and she should not be requested to pay more for wheat than the competitive market price, he said. Instead, if the guaranteed minimum price for wheat is to be increased "the only thing for the Dominion Government to do is subsidize the industry more than it is now being subsidized." The subsidizing, Mr. Hanson said, should be through some general taxation which he said would be preferable to a processing tax.

Employees Request Weekly Living Bonus

The first rift between a local industry and its employees over the payment of the weekly living bonus allowance as recommended by Federal authorities due to the rising costs of living, occurred on Tuesday afternoon when a number of workers at the Belleville Foundry on Station Street demanded immediate payment of the $1.93 weekly living bonus under threat of quitting their jobs.

Mr. Ted Willing, manager of the foundry, stated this morning that as the recommendation of payment of the bonus was based upon the firm's ability to pay, no action could be taken upon his employees' demands until the books of the company were checked, with the result that several of the workers refused to continue at their jobs.

Engaged as the company is in the fulfilment of war contracts any minor disruption of operations might seriously affect production. Mr. Willing made a hurried consultation with labor officials in Toronto with the result that the workers went back to their jobs this morning, under promise that payment of the recommended living bonus would receive earliest consideration.

Helsinki Reports Bombing Before Dawn

Helsinki, July 9 (AP)—Russian planes bombed Helsinki just before dawn today in a raid which observers said exceeded in intensity any carried out during the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war.

The gunner of a four-engined fresh hen's eggs and not the bomb Fresh hen's eggs and not the bomb load when he reported the "eggs are all right" after the plane landed on rough water near the Scottish coast. The eggs were the gift of inhabitants at a port in Northern Ireland.

Dog-fights at speeds reaching nearly 500 miles an hour are not uncommon over the channel. A Canadian pilot was among four fliers who reported hitting more than 450 miles an hour during power dives over Dover.

A pilot officer engaged as a flying instructor at an elementary training school also acts as a chaplain at the station, officiating at divine services. The pilot, an ordained priest of the Church of England, has been nicknamed the "flying padre".

During a bombing attack over Hamburg a plane manned by Czechoslovak airmen was hit more than 100 times by anti-aircraft fire, but the pilot kept to his course until the bomb-load was dropped over the target. He reached home safely.

The Royal Air Force has taken the lead in concocting slang military phrases.

Here's a list:

Kites, airplanes; Mae-Wests, lifejackets; bandits, enemy planes; pulpit, cockpits; jump out the window, bail out; brolley, parachute; hulk, damaged machine; dock, hospital; making an orbit, on patrol duty; Balbo, mass formation of enemy planes; open the gate, fly with throttle wide open, plumbers armorers; snake the ack ack, dodge anti-aircraft fire; Jeep, radio operator; Mickey Mouse, bomb release; popsy, airman's girl friend.

Judge Objects To Paying $6 For Three Beers

Los Angeles, July 9 —(AP)— A Superior Court judge objected to paying $6 for three beers, Hollywood's Pirate Den is having difficulties getting its licence renewed.

The judge, anonymously represented by a friend, reported he took two guests to the Pirate's Den, owned by Rudy Valee, Bob Hope, owned by Rudy Vallee, Bob Hope, Weismuller and five other Hollywood biggies whose names were not mentioned at a hearing before the police commission.

The judge's story was that when he protested against the charge, he was thrown out by a bouncer. Joseph Braig, manager of the night spot, told the commission minimum charges at tables were $2 Sunday nights and beer was 50 cents at the bar—but the bar was crowded.

The commission reserved decision on the licence application.

Death Cheats Father Of Seeing His Son

Dunnville, Ont., July 9 (CP)—The tragic story of how death cheated a father of seeing his son on the very day he learned of his son's whereabouts, "somewhere in England," is contained in letters from England to friends here.

On May 24, Major J. E. Dobbs, transferred from Hong Kong to England, found where his son was stationed. On the night of May 24-25, Sgt. J. E. F. Dobbs was killed when his plane was shot down in flames.

Sgt. Dobbs made a wide circle of friends in Dunnville. He joined the R.A.F. at Singapore, and was transferred to Canada to complete his training. He celebrated his 22nd birthday on Jan. 20, and graduated with first class from No. 6 Air Training School here on Feb. 9, later leaving for overseas.

ARRANGING FOR PATENTS

Montreal, July 9—(CP)—A former Bisley shot from Hamilton, Ontario, was in Montreal today to arrange for patents for what he describe as a radical new type of anti-aircraft gun.

Alex R. J. Hilson said his invention would be most effective against dive-bombers. He tied for the King's prize in the 1927 Bisley competition.

PRIME MINISTER VISITS CAMPS

Mr. King Tells Air Force What This Branch of Service Has Accomplished

Brandon, Man., July 9.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King neared the end of a two-week western inspection trip today when he arrived here to visit Royal Canadian Air Force men, the Royal Canadian Artillery Training Centre, and Shilo Camp, 16 miles east of Brandon.

Mr. King, en route to Ottawa after a swing through Alberta and British Columbia, said a military pageant at Regina yesterday was the most inspiring experience of his trip.

After taking the salute from 1,064 infantrymen and a company of white-clad members of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, Mr. King saw the infantrymen go through all types of training exercises, including a startling realistic bayonet attack on enemy entrenchments. The manoeuvres took place at Regina's exhibition grounds.

Earlier the Prime Minister told a parade of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel that an enemy air attack on the North American continent is by no means an impossibility.

The stand of the Royal Air Force had marked a turning point in the war's progress and but for the R.A.F., Britain might have been over-run months ago.

"But", he added, "the time has not yet arrived when we can be confident there will be no air attack upon this continent".

Mr King spoke of the action taken by the United States in extending its patrols far out over the Atlantic and its occupation of Iceland as indicative of the belief in that country that attempted attacks upon North America might expected.

BRITISH ADVANCE TOWARD ALEPPO

Australians Overrun Main Vichy Positions on Way to Beirut

Cairo, July 9—(AP)—Australian troops driving toward Beirut "have overrun the main Vichy positions and now are operating north of the town of Damour," nine miles south of Beirut, the Middle East Command announced today.

This drive along the coast, supported by guns of the British fleet, has produced some of the bitterest fighting of the Syrian campaign.

A Reuters dispatch from Haifa, Palestine, said Empire Forces had occupied Damour.

The British command also announced that "the advance of our columns toward Aleppo and Homs is proceeding satisfactorily." These French strongholds in northern and central Syria, respectively, are objectives of fast moving British forces which have been thrusting westward across Syria from the Iraq frontier.

"Further local gains" were reported in the central sector, north of Damascus.

Consider Continuation Commonwealth Plan

London, July 9 (CP Cable)—Continuation of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan after the agreement of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand expires in 1943 was discussed yesterday at a conference attended by Sir Archibald Sinclair, United Kingdom Air Secretary, C. G. Poper, Canadian Air Minister, and Harold Balfour, United Kingdom Under-Secretary for Air.

Mr. Power, who said when he arrived it was "unthinkable" the plan would be discontinued, probably will resume his conferences with the British Air Ministry chiefs tomorrow.

Patsy Kelly and Zasu Pitts, that delightful pair of laugh-getters, who are featured with Victor McLaglen, Marjorie Woodworth and George E. Stone, in Hollywoods new comedy scream "Broadway Limited," opening next at the McCarthy Theatre.

NO DIVIDING LINE

He replied he could not answer that categorically. Continuing, however, he said that in war one puts one's self in the place of the other fellow and attempts to determine what the other fellow would do under a given set of circumstances. He added cryptically that at times information about an opponent's plans may be available and at other times they may not.

This led to an inquiry whether Mr. Roosevelt thought that the other fellow was likely to make any moves toward the Azores or Cape Verdes—the two island groups in the South Atlantic, which the President had said would be a hemisphere menace in Nazi hands.

The President said he could not prognosticate. On Monday, however, in informing Congress of the occupation of Iceland, he said that "substantial forces" had been dispatched to the newly - acquired bases in Trinidad and British Guiana which are opposite the Cape Verde Islands and the French West African port of Dakar.

Berlin Says U.S. Troops in War Zone

Berlin, July 9—(AP)—A German spokesman asserted today that the United States, by occupation of Iceland, has taken an active military step and is now represented by troops in the war zone.

"From a military point of view, these troops might as well be in a British port," he said.

German spokesmen also said the occupation of Iceland "recalls and gives new significance" to President Roosevelt's comments concerning the Azores, Dakar and Cape Verde Islands.

HAMM, MUENSTER

A flight of United States-built bombers and fighters dropped bombs on runways of a German airdrome in Northern France at the rate of one a minute.

From these night operations, seven bombers were lost.

In the attack on the oil plants at Leuna many direct hits were obtained with super bombs. In the attacks on the Nazi industrial system high explosives and incendiaries were dropped, great fires started and much damage done.

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted the R.A.F. dropped high explosives over a wide area in central, western and northern Germany.)

In a daring daylight raid yesterday, hundreds of British bombers eluded floating anti-aircraft batteries to bomb the big Nazi naval base at Wilhelmshaven and blast other targets in Germany and northern France.

No Planes Lost

Wilhelmshaven is a major production point in the output of submarines and has been bombed several times since the determined British offensive began June 11. No British planes were lost in yesterday's attack on the base.

In yesterday's daylight sorties deep into occupied France, targets at five industrial centres were left blazing.

Bombers with fighter escorts smashed a synthetic oil plant between Bethune and Lens in the Lille area. Nine German fighters were destroyed in this sweep. Eight British planes were lost.

Muenster, one of the German points attacked overnight, also felt the weight of British bombs Monday night, along with oft-bombed Cologne and Osnabruck, Frankfurt and Munchen-Gladbach.

Meanwhile, smaller forces ranged over other centres including the invasion ports of Ostend, Dunkirk and Boulogne, points in the Netherlands and the Nazi cities of Duisburg, Duesseldorf and Krefeld.

AT THE McCARTHY

Jeanette MacDonald

If you have not yet enjoyed the grand musical triumph "The Firefly," starring lovely Jeanette MacDonald, we urge you, one and all, to spend this evening at the McCarthy Theatre. You will be thrilled for two solid hours with one of the finest, most delightful screen productions which you can ever hope to see. "The Firefly" is even greater than "Maytime." Others in the brilliant case include Allan Jones, Warren William, Billy Gilbert and Douglas Dumbrille.

"Under Age," featuring Nan Grey and Allan Baxter added feature presentation and latest Fox News events, offer additional entertainment of the very best.

"Broadway Limited"

Two laugh hits, first Victor McLaglen, Patsy Kelly, Dennis O'Keefe, Marjorie Woodworth, Zasu Pitts and George E. Stone in "Broadway Limited" and second "The East Side Kids," filmland's newest addition to great juvenile stars in "Pride of the Bowery," opens next at the McCarthy Theatre which briefly means that there is a swell program offering for the entire family to enjoy this weekend at the McCarthy.

ADVANTAGE

"It is not for me to comment on the American views although I may say they seem fairly obvious to anyone who takes an intelligent interest in what is going on.

"The seizure of Iceland by Hitler would be of very great advantage to him in bringing pressure to bear on Great Britain and on the United States.

"We have for sometime past, with the assent of the Icelandic people and legislature, maintained a strong garrison in Iceland and the arrival of powerful United States forces will greatly reduce the danger to Iceland.

"This measure of American policy, therefore, is in complete harmony with British interests and we have no reason at any time to object to it.

"In fact, I cannot see that we should have any grounds for doing so in view of the invitation extended to the United States by the Icelandic government.

"We still propose to retain our army in Iceland and, as British and United States forces will both have the same object in view, namely the defence of Iceland, it seems very likely that they will co-operate effectively in resistance to any attempt by Hitler to gain a footing.

"It would obviously be foolish for the United States to have one plan for defending Iceland and for British forces to have another.

Collaboration

"Collaboration for the common purpose, however, raises no issue of principle and if any issue of the principle arises it may safely be left to British and American naval, military and air force authorities concerned who will, I have no doubt, study each other's convenience to the utmost.

"Indeed, looking at it from every point of view, I have been unable to find any reason for regretting the steps which the United States have taken and which, in the circumstances, they have been forced to take.

"In fact, we welcome it.

"Whether similar satisfaction will be felt in Germany is another question and one which hardly concerns us.

U. S. Makes Sure Britain Gets Aid

"The second principle of United States policy which has led to the occupation of Iceland has been the declared will of the President, Congress and people of the United States not only to send all possible aid in warlike munitions and necessary supplies to Great Britain but also to make sure we get them.

"Here again, this is a course of action for which the United States takes full responsibility.

"These consignments of American supplies for American forces on duty overseas for purposes of the United States will, of course, have to traverse very dangerous waters and as we have a very large traffic constantly passing through these waters it may, I dare say, be found mutually in practice advantageous that the two navies involved should assist each other as far as may be convenient in that part of the business.

"I really do not think I have anything further to say about the transaction, which appears at every point to be so very plain and simple."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Wagons Roll at Night"

A four star cast heads the new Warner Bros. picture, "The Wagons Roll at Night," which has been booked by the Capitol Theatre to open next. The headliners are Humphrey Bogart, Joan Leslie, Eddie Albert and Sylvia Sidney and the picture is a powerfully dramatic story of nomads of the road, living, loving and hating by a code of their own. Made by the same studio which gave us the thrill-packed excitement of "They Drive By Night," "The Wagons Roll at Night" is a mile-a-minute action drama from fade-in to fade-out.

Bogart follows up his recent smash successs in "High Sierra," with the role of a hard and cynical owner of a carnival company, which he rules with a rod of iron. He has, however, like most hard guys, a soft spot. His is reserved exclusively for his kid sister, played by Joan Leslie, for whom he maintains a country home.

Joan Leslie, the sixteen-year-old starlet, who won rave notices for her role as the crippled girl in "High Sierra," is said to score another dramatic triumph in "The Wagons Roll at Night." Eddie Albert, Broadway stage recruit, who is fast becoming one of the screen's most popular young leading men plays a rather more serious role than he usually essays, and does it wonderfully well, according to all advance reports. Long a favorite with movie audiences, Sylvia Sidney returns to charm them again, after a rather long absence from Hollywood.

Besides Bogart and the other headliners, the cast of "The Wagons Roll at Night" numbers such screen notables as Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Charley Foy, John Ridgely, Clara Blandick, Aldrich Bowker and many more. The film was directed by Ray Enright, from the screen play by Fred Niblo, Jr. and Barry Trivers, suggested by a story of Francis Wallace.

The same programme includes the first chapter of the exciting new serial, "The Mysterious Doctor Satan," a coloured cartoon, "Toy Trouble," a late News Reel and the latest and best of the Canada Carries On series, "Churchill's Island."

TWO RECEIVE FLYING CROSS

Acting Squadron Leader Schwab Destroys 11 Planes, Flying Officer Ogilvie Shoots Down 6

London July 9—(CP Cable)—Acting Sqdn. Ldr. L. G. Schwab of Niagara Falls, Ont., and FO. A. K. Ogilvie of Ottawa have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was announced today.

(Ogilvie was reported by the Air Ministry in a message to his father, Charles Ogilvie of Ottawa, last Saturday to have failed to return from an operational flight.)

The citation said Schwab was the leader of 112 Squadron and Ogilvie was attached to 609 Squadron when they destroyed 11 and six planes respectively, showing "great courage and determination" in the fight with the enemy.

Both were born in 1915. Schwab was educated in Niagara Falls Collegiate and Vocational Institute, commissioned in the Royal Air Force in 1936, posted to the Middle East in 1938 and promoted to his present rank in April. Ogilvie was educated at Glebe Collegiate and was commissioned in 1939.

It was also announced that Flt. Lt. J. C. Mungo Park, a leading R.A.F. pilot who was reported missing June 30, has been awarded the bar to the D.F.C

themselves on the northern banks of the Western Dvina in the vicinity of Borkovichi," 20 miles northwest of Polotsk.

A hundred miles farther north German forces which drove through the Baltic States toward Leningrad were reported suffering from losses under shelling, bombing and Red Army counter-attacks in the vicinity of Ostrov, scene of another major battle.

Two Companies Annihilated

It reported, too, that two companies which attacked the Soviet-leased Hanko Peninsula military base off Southwestern Finland were annihilated by artillery and mortar fire.

The Red Air Fleet was credited with bombing German war supply transports on the Danube River. The destruction of 56 Nazi planes yesterday was claimed against a loss of four Soviet aircraft.

Tass, Soviet News Agency, reported increasing guerilla operations behind the Nazi lines. Tass said organized and armed Russians killed 150 German in an open attack on motorized infantry moving up to the front in Northern White Russia, and in another place waylaid a German tank column and destroyed 18 tanks by hurling hand-made explosives—bottles of burning gasoline.

LITVINOV ASKS

"No agreement or treaty, no documents signed by Hitler and his henchmen no promises or assurances on their part, no declaration of neutrality, no relations with them whatsoever can provide a guarantee against sudden and unprovoked attack . . . There is no obligation, no humanity, there is nothing which distinguishes their civilized society from the jungle".

Litvinov was replaced as foreign commissar by then Premier Vyacheslov Molotov, who added the foreign portfolio to his other duties. Since 1939 Litvinov had been almost in total eclipse. This Spring Joseph Stalin succeeded Molotov as Premier.

The former commissar's wife, Ivy Low, is English.

WRITER TELLS

from which to witness effects of the combined land and sea shelling.

For 30 minutes I watched shells from British batteries, less than a mile behind me, burst in Damour and send up great columns of dust.

Then, suddenly, the Vichy batteries opened up. The first shell whizzed dangerously near to where I was sitting on the beach. I threw myself flat upon a rock pile. A shower of shrapnel peppered about me. Crumbling bits of a stone wall fell on my back.

More shells followed in quick succession. More shrapnel showered my way.

I dug deeper into the rock pile. I hoped, prayed the French gunners would stop firing.

For nearly 15 minutes the barrage continued, shells exploding so close I thought the noise would burst my eardrums. Showers of small stones poured over me. The shrapnel fell with clanks like nickels dropping on a drum. Then, as suddenly as it started, the Vichy shelling stopped.

I rose and ran like a hare through clumps of pines, over carpets of red-hot shrapnel, and reached the highway leading back to Sidon and thence to Palestine.

The British and French guns still echoed with tremendous roars. The French had turned attention from along the seacoast to the British batteries.

I hitched a ride in an Australian automobile and subsequently took a naval press officer's car back to Haifa.

Motorized Division Of Nazis Wiped Out In Counter-Attack

Attacks, Communique Declares, Costing Germans Heavily in Men and Material

NO WITHDRAWALS

Moscow, July 10 (AP)—Counter-attacking fiercely, the Red army claimed today to have wiped out a Nazi motorized division at Lepel, inflicted another serious defeat on the Germans farther south along the Berezina River, and stopped the eastward drive of Hitler's troops along the rest of the front.

The Russians apparently were hitting hardest on the vital 50-mile Berezina River central front from l to Borisov, guarding the road Moscow.

During battles in the Lepel direc- n our troops destroyed a German torized division, up to 40 guns, d a large quantity of transport l specialized machines," a war letin reported.

added: "In the Borisov direc- our troops inflicted a serious t on an enemy division."

Nazis Believed Aiming Big Push Through Baltic States to Reach Leningrad and Tallinn

SALLA REPORTED TAKEN

Berlin, July 10 (AP)—The German High Command kept details of the fierce struggle with Soviet Russia hidden again today, the third in a row, with the general statement that "operations in the east are progressing relentlessly."

The only detail the communique offered before turning to other fronts was too reiterate yesterday's unofficial claim that Salla, fortified Russian town opposite Finland's eastern frontier, had been captured. This town was acquired by Russia last year.

German troops took the town Tuesday, assisted by encircling movements of Finnish troops, the bulletin said.

The High Command's apparent calm was unperturbed by various reports, credited to military circles in Vichy, of German reverses in Russia.

All that was said of military developments was that German military leaders regard this as time for silence which, it was asserted, may last several days more.

"Similar stories were circulated by enemy propagandists in previous campaigns, notably in Poland, France and Greece," a spokesman claimed.

Facts Reveal Different Picture

"Then, when the High Command finally chose to reveal the facts there was an entirely different picture."

He asserted the "peculiarities of tactics" in a new kind of war make it "especially important" for Germany to keep silent at this stage.

Newspaper commentators challenged reports of high German losses by arguing that an army which is retreating has no way of knowing what is going on behind its foe's lines.

(The Russians, however, say they are counter-attacking, not retreating.)

Other German reports previously had pictured two spearheads being driven against the Russians by the German army of the Baltic—one toward Tallinn, capital of Estonia, and the other toward Leningrad, at the head of the Gulf of Finland.

Vichy Court Martial Condemns in Absentia Col. Marie de Larminat

Vichy, July 10—(AP)—Col. Eduard Rene Marie De Larminat, commander of Free French troops in the Levant states, has been condemned to death in absentia by a Vichy court martial, it was learned today.

De Larminat was chief of staff of French forces in the Middle East and later governor general of French Equatorial Africa. On the fall of France he went to London to join Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French movement.

Russians Claim 33 German Planes Shot Down in Terrific Air Battle

Moscow, July 10.—(AP)—A terrific air battle in which the Russians claimed to have shot down 33 Nazi planes while losing five of their own was described today in a communique which said "the fight ended in complete rout of the enemy".

The battle, the communique said, took place Tuesday night when German Junkers 88S, escorted by Messerschmitts, took off to prepare the offensive of their units in "an unspecified sector of the front. The Russians met them in the air "and hurled themselves at the German planes at a high altitude".

The Germans tried to change their course, the communique continued, but the Soviets outmanoeuvred them and "all enemy planes were destroyed".

The crews of the lost Russian plane were saved.

A short time later two more Nazi formations appeared and another fight started.

"The Soviet airmen brought down one German plane after another", said the official version. The Germans, it continued, "used an old device and pretended to be falling after leaving their formation but even in this attempt many of them failed".

In another sector of the front, the communique said, two Nazi planes dived on men who were removing telephone lines.

'Our soldiers took cover and opened rifle fire on the enemy", said the communique. "One plane was shot down and the other flew away."

R.A.F. MAINTAINS RELENTLESS DRIVE ON NAZI TARGETS

Tons of Explosives Dropped on Aachen and Osnabruck During Night Forays

POWER PLANT HIT

London, July 10 —(CP)— The Royal Air Force maintained its relentless drive against the Nazi war machine today by smashing at the occupied French coast following overnight pounding of targets in western Germany.

Flying through banks of fog, British bombers and fighters roared over the channel today and watchers on the English coast heard the roar of explosions from the French coastline. Machine gun fire was heard from above the channel.

The night raids were against Aachen and Osnabruck.

R.A.F. attacks on Italy were reported in a communique issued by the Italian High Command which said British from here last night raided Naples after a previous attack in the afternoon on Syracuse in Sicily.

Dent Proof Ash Cans, Alarm Wrist Watch, New Inventions

By STEVEN WILLIAMS

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 10—(AP)—You pushed a button. A mechanical mouse ran up a gadget, causing wheels to turn, gears to function and out came a lighted match.

Across the room a genial fellow devoured six pills and said no man ever enjoyed a more complete dinner.

Yes, the exhibit of the inventors of America has opened here.

There are such innovations as dustproof ashpans, a safety strap hangar for the bath tub, a pants clip and reflector combination for cyclists, a crutch with a seat attached, anti-slip bathroom slippers, a mop that bends in the middle.

There's a wrist band compact and a bedlight that goes on when you get up and off when you lie down.

A Brooklyn inventor had an alarm wrist watch that doesn't ring; it nudges your wrist.

The pill man says that 12 of his nickel-sized discs equal in food value all the dietary needs of a person for a day. He eats them himself and what's more he looks healthy.

CONFERS WITH STALIN

Moscow, July 10 (AP)—Premier Joseph Stalin conferred for more than an hour today with Sir Stafford Cripps, the British ambassador. Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov was present. This was the second conference in three days of the Russian leader and the British ambassador.

Two Institutions Turned Over to Dept. Of National Defence

In response to a request by the Federal Government, the Ontario School for the Deaf, for seventy years a provincial institution for the education of deaf children, has been turned over to the Department of National Defence, the Hon. H. O. Nixon, Ontario Secretary and Acting Minister of Education, announced today, for the duration of the war and a reasonable time thereafter.

The school together with the Provincial Normal and Model School, Toronto, will be utilized as two additional Initial Training Schools for the Royal Canadian Air Force, under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. The schools are expected to be ready for occupancy by August first.

Plan For Training of Deaf

Speaking of the plans for the future education of the deaf of the Province of Ontario, Hon. Mr. Nixon said:

"It will be the policy of the Department of Education to establish special classes for the deaf at several centres throughout Ontario where accommodation can be made available to us by local Boards of Education, and it is our hope and expectation that the pupils trained in this way may even find themselves, on the completion of their training, better adjusted to meet conditions as they find them in normal life than if institution trained entirely. In any case I am sure it is the desire of all to make any sacrifice possible to assist Canada's war effort".

Recently a complete survey of the Province was made by Lieut. Col. Goodwin Gibson, real estate adviser, Department of National Defence, on the instructions of the Minister of Defence. He examined many buildings and found that the two most suitable properties in the Province were the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville and the Provincial Normal and Model School, Gould Street, Toronto. The matter being one of urgency and time, it is necessary that these two schools be ready for occupancy, if possible by August 1, 1941 and in a letter to the Provincial Secretary the Hon. Harry Nixon, Col. Gibson stated that "it is desirable that the two properties be made available at the earliest possible date so that arrangements to prepare them for occupancy be made."

Lieut. Colonel Gibson in his letter of July 7th to the Provincial Secretary said: "These two schools it is contemplated will accommodate between them some 1500 personnel and your assistance in this connection will be of great value to the successful operation of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

"Will you please accept my thanks for the courtesies which you have extended to me and the consideration which has been given this matter and permit me to express the appreciation of the Department of National Defence for Air as well as my own appreciation of your generous offer."

Government Pleased to Accede to Request

Hon. Mr. Nixon in his letter to Colonel Gibson of July 9th stated: "Following your visit of last Friday to this office I now have your letter of July 7th in which you make formal request for the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville and the Provincial Normal and Model School, Toronto to be turned over to the Department of National Defence and used as additional Initial Training Schools under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan; and that these properties may be made available to the Federal authorities, rent free, for the duration of the war and a reasonable time thereafter, the Federal Government to maintain the properties and return them to us in a condition at least equal to that in which they were received.

"It gives me much pleasure on behalf of the government of Ontario to accede to this request in line with the well-known policy of this government, endorsed as it has been by the Legislature by a unanimous vote," that "This Administration offers every co-operation in releasing for the use of the Militia Provincial Buildings, land or any other asset you might require.

"Our Department of Public Works will be available at your request to co-operate with your officials in preparing inventories, completing arrangements as to personnel, etc.

"I sincerely trust that these institutions may be of great assistance to you in the further development of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan."

Principal W. J. Morrison of the O.S.D. stated today that this matter of the use of the Ontario School for the Deaf property and buildings had been "in the air" for some time.

Italians Admit Syracuse, Naples Bombed by RAF

Rome, July 10 (AP)—British air attacks on Italy proper were reported today by the Italian high command—a low-level daylight thrust at Syracuse and a blow by night at Naples.

(Whether these were to be isolated operations or the opening of a sustained offensive similar to the R.A.F. action against Germany, now more than a month old, remained to be seen. So far as the Italian communique indicated, the two places were attacked without challenge from the Italian air force.

(Naples on the Italian mainland was last bombed in January. Syracuse is about 250 miles to the south, on the southeast coast of the Island of Sicily. Sicilian airports and other objectives have been bombed frequently to counteract Axis operations in the Mediterranean.

(The Syracuse population is about 40,000 while Naples, with a population of nearly 1,000,000 is Italy's third largest city, a major seaport, and an important manufacturing centre.)

The Italians claimed that in the Naples attack 14 persons were killed and 3 injured. No mention was made of the damage caused.

Refused Right to Make Trip

London, July 10 —(CP)— A group of United States newspaper correspondents were all set yesterday to leave for Iceland where U.S. naval units landed this week to assist British forces defending the island.

But, on instructions of the United States Department in Washington, they were refused permission at the last minute to make the trip. There is no indication here whether the correspondents will be allowed to go later to cover the activities of the U.S. occupying forces.

Targets for Eventual Legitimate Attack by Germany Says Gayda

Rome, July 10 (CP)—The Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, declared today that British and United States forces in Iceland are "the targets for eventual legitimate attack by Germany."

Gayda and other commentators attacked Wendell L. Willkie for his statement favoring the establishment of United States military bases in Northern Ireland and Scotland.

This was called a step in "the race to inherit the British Empire."

The newspaper Il Piccolo asserted that President Roosevelt planned "conquest of Europe and other continents," and asked when the Azores and Dakar in French West Africa would be occupied.

HUNGARIAN COMMUNIQUE

Budapest, July 10 (AP)—The Hungarian High Command claimed today that 25,000 prisoners had been taken in the advance into Galacia, Southwestern Russia, in which "Hungarian troops fought at side of German troops.

"All prisoners who can prove they are Ukrainians are authorized to return to their homes," the daily communique said. (This apparently is connected with reports of Axis hopes to establish a separate Ukrainian state.

The Communique reported for the second day that the Hungarians were still attacking along the line of the Zbrucz River, where Russian rearguards were offering resistance.

(There have been no Russian reports of the presence of Hungarians in the fighting zone.)

U.S. TAKES ACTION TO REPATRIATE ALL U.S. PRISONERS

Warns Germany and Italy Unless Americans Freed, Nationals of Countries Cannot Leave U.S.

QUICK ACTION DESIRED

Washington, July 10—(AP)—The United States has taken action to obtain the immediate repatriation of Americans held prisoners by the Nazis or detained in Germany, Italy and other countries under Nazi control.

The State Department, it was learned authoritatively today, has implicitly warned Germany and Italy that unless Americans held as "retaliation hostages" in Nazi-Europe are freed and granted exit permits no German or Italian nationals will be permitted to leave the U.S.

The alien registration showed approximately 660,000 Italians and 330,000 Germans living in the United States, in contrast to the few thousand Americans still in Germany, Italy or Axis-dominated countries. A large proportion of the Germans and Italians here are reported to have applied for American citizenship, however.

Not Effect Officials

Possible detention of Axis aliens here would not affect the German and Italian consular officials and employees who have been ordered by President Roosevelt to leave the United States by July 15.

Immediate action is desired, it was learned, so that some of the Americans may return to the United States on board the West Point, formerly the luxury liner America, which soon will make a round trip across the Atlantic.

Americans residing in Germany, Italy or Axis-conquered countries have been refused permission to leave those areas since June 24 in retaliation against Mr. Roosevelt's orders regulating the departure of German and Italian aliens from the United States.

Daring Young French Airmen Steal Nazi Plane and Hurry to Great Britain

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 10 (CP)—Two daring young French airmen who stole a German military aircraft from under the noses of four Nazi officers at an airport in Occupied France and escaped to Britain are flying now with Free French Air Force. The story of their flight was told at Free French Headquarters in London.

The flight took 90 minutes and was made in bad weather which prevented interception by anti-aircraft guns or German fighter planes.

The youngsters, both 21 years of age, were undergoing training at a pilots' school in North Africa at the time of the armistice.. They asked for leave to go from North Africa to Unoccupied France with the intention of getting into the occupied area so they could visit their families.

They succeeded and without much difficulty reached their homes. But the behavior of the Germans so disgusted the young men that they decided to join the Free French in Britain.

They noticed that a certain 'plane was used for daily liaison flights, leaving at 10 a.m. and returning at five p.m. This was to be their machine. They tossed a coin to see who should pilot the aircraft.

The following morning they reached the hangar without being questioned by the German sentries. They acquainted themselves with the navigation instruments, started the engine and jumped into the cockpit.

Just as they were taxiing from the hangar, an automobile containing four German officers drove up.

The car stopped to allow the 'plane to pass, and thanking the Germans with a nod, they opened the throttle slowly to warm the engine and then took off.

Belief Expressed Dentz Will Accept Armistice Terms

Chief Concern of Allies Is to Ensure Syrian Independence Free From Nazi Influence

TERMS NOT GIVEN

London, July 10 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported that Vichy authorities had made no reply up to noon today to Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson's request that Beirut be evacuated and declared an open city pending discussion of armistice terms to end the war in Syria.

As a result, it was reported, hostilities by allied forces closing in on the Lebanese capital were continuing.

The request, Reuters reported in a dispatch from Jerusalem, was radioed last night to Gen. Henri Dentz, the commander, after the latter had signified he was ready to discuss Armistice terms.

Wilson was quoted as saying that Dentz must take responsibility for the consequences if the plea was rejected.

The British commander was said to have asked Dentz to send him a reply by 5.30 a.m. today (11.30 p.m. E.D.T. Wednesday) under a flag of truce.

Similar Message Sent to Damascus

The message was described as similar to a communication which Gen. Wilson sent Dentz before Vichy troops evacuated the besieged Syrian capital of Damascus June 21 and British and Free French troops marched in.
